While the wonderful Ritz Hotel, to reach from Arlington street to the Green Park, promises to be the most splendid in London, Claridge's, just off Grosvenor Square, has already introduced the modern hotel life into the very heart of Mayfair. Very startling is the contrast-now nonexistent-between the richness of Claridge's and the plainness, almost amounting to poverty, of the old Bath Hotel, stripped of the homely up at the hotel.

The Old Bath Hotel.

For nearly 150 years the old Bath Motel has been looked upon by gengrations of Londoners as one of the mysteries which only the aristocratic might penetrate. There is something forbidding in the words, painted on the Piccadilly side of the house. "Bath Hotel-for Families and Gentlemen," and millions of people must have looked upon the plain, dowdy old corner building, with its coat of dirty paint, and have fancied the interior to be, by contrast, a marvel of

But now, being doomed to destruction, the old place has been subjected daily to inspection by brokers, and the auctioneer has sold its contents. And the famous Bath Hotel stands revealed as a wretched jumble of passages and rooms, devoid of attraction, and fit only for the housebreaker. Its floors have reached the "switchback" stage. There are unsuspected little steps, some up and some down, into many of the rooms The old portable baths-in a Piccatilly Hotel!-emphasize the change which has taken place between the era of the Bath and the era of Claridge's and the Carlton. All over the West-end the "hotel de luxe" is springing up. In Sloane Street, the Cadogan, close by the Hans Crescent, in Mount Street, the Cebourg. in Kensington Gore, the De Vere and Royal Palace Hotels, all tell the same tale. And the middle-aged hotels in Albermarle Street and thereabout are blossoming into a new and more luxuriant existence. -London Mail.

A Matter for Regret.

It is a pity, says M. A. P., that Mr. Labouchere does not give his reminiscences; no man of our time has met so many interesting people, He was once a friend, a crony even, of Prince Bismarck. It was in the farof days when the clumsy instrument of government called the German Confederation used to meet at Frantfort. Bismarck, as everybody thows, was the representative Prussia at that Confederation and lessness of the unwieldy body; and that he made up his mind that Garmany were ever to be unified, the exclusion of Austria from the Confederation was the first thing to be accomplished. Bismarck was a roystering youth in those days, full of devilment, and able to perform feats of Gargantuan eating and drinking which would undo men of less gigantle stature and less robust digestion. He would stop up all night drinking beer and discussing politics and smoking big cigars with anybody who was willing to listen to him. And what wondrous talks those allnight sittings of his must have evolved! Labby was ready then-as he is even now--to stop up all night with this qualification, that Labby nada." did not then, any more than he does now, destroy his health by eating much or drinking much. Which perhaps accounts for the fact that he has buried more friends and intimates than any man in Europe; and that though he is over seventy, he is hale, hearty, clear-headed and seady for battle with all comers.

VENEZUELA STORIES.

Two members of Parliament have quaint stories to tell of adventures in Venezuela in times past. An honorable baronet, while on a visit to the Republic, had interviews with certain members of the Government. He dined with them in the evening, and retired at a late hour. He was awakened from his sleep by noise in his room, and saw, as he thought, one of his hosts disappear

through the bedroom window leading to the verandah. Concluding that this was a polite custom in the country, the visitor returned to sleep, but in the morning he found his trousers upon the floor, William-st., North their pockets turned inside out. His old-fashioned, highly decorated chain purse was gone, but its contents were on the ground. His gold-edged cigar case and some gold charms attached to his fob had also vanished.

The Englishman went straight to the seat of Government, and complained to one of the Ministers, who expressed his dismay, and was thereupon informed that the person seen in the room bore a resemblance to

Labby's Experience. Mr. Henry Labouchere went through a revolution in Venezuela

"A battle took place on the Plaza one afternoon," said Mr. Labouchere in telling his story, "and I watched it from a grass hammock on the terrace in front of my hotel. The Government forces were put to flight, and I was joined by my revolutionary friends keen from the fight.

Later one of the fallen Ministers visited us and said he could show us where 250,000 silver dollars were hidden. He was as good as his word, and patriotism being sunk by my friends in obedience to the comforting moral of the place: 'Be kind o ourselves, it was proposed to divide the swag.
