It ribs is astonishing how man farmers refuse to recognize that cheap seed is usually poor seed, and that anything that is cheap and rubbishy in the way of seeds is not worth carrying home. Obviously, if there were not any demand for this rubbishy seed, merchants would make other use of it; or, at any rate, would not go to the trouble of fixing and putting it up ready for the market.

There are few articles in the commerce of agriculture in which real worth is so difficult to judge from appearance as grass, clover and small seeds. Jokes on Lovers.

The opinion has been expressed that one reason why there are so many old bachelors in Ontario is because of the derision that a man meets with when it is known that he is about to marry and the ordeal of going away in a shower of rice, perhaps with a "shivaree" as a welcome home. In the cities it is not so bad, for people can get married and few know it. In country places practical jokers are always getting in their fine work on young fellows who go courting. The following is from The Uxbridge Journal, and illustrates
