AN ALBERTA FOSSIL.

Bones of a Prehistoric Monster Found Near Bantry, Alta.

While on a hunting trip recently H. A. Crofton of Alberta came across some fossilized bones. From the few specimens at hand it is impossible to make a surmise as to what species of extinct monster the animal belonged to, but the size must have been enormous.

The find was made in Dead Lodge Canyon, and the attention of Mr. Crofton was attracted by some of the original bones protruding from a cut bank. Investigation showed them to be embedded in a sandstone formation, and it was necessary to dig tools and put in some hard work before the body was even partly uncovered.

Work was started in from the bank, and the developments were watched with great interest. When the excavation proceeded far enough a large part of the monster was revealed.

Owing to the difficult nature of the work it was not found possible to uncover more than a small portion of the remains, but the vertebrae and ribs were laid bare.

According to Mr. Crofton, the backbone is as large as a man's body, and the portion exposed is about seven feet in length. Attached to the vertebrae were eight ribs of enormous size, measuring three or four feet in length, some of them a foot or so in width. There has been no time for further investigation, but three of the fossilized bones have been brought in by the discoverer.

They are all broken, but can be easily fitted together. As to what portion of the body of the animal they are from is purely conjecture. Judging from appearance, one which is broken into three pieces is probably a section of the tail. It is about ten inches in diameter and four inches thick. Through the centre is an opening which possibly contained the spinal cord.

Another, which is also broken, has the appearance of having been connected with one of the joints. One large piece, the only one which is whole, looks as though it was a hoof.

A bone which has the appearance of a thigh bone has been forwarded to authorities in the east for examination, and their opinion will be awaited with interest. If the remains are all recovered and in fairly good condition, Mr. Crofton has made a discovery which should be of value and interest to scientists.

Dead Lodge Canyon, where the discovery was made, is one of the most weirdly interesting places in the Territories. It is situated between 23 and 25 miles northeast of Bantry, on the Canadian Pacific Railroad main line, which is its nearest point from the railway, and on the banks of the Red Deer River.

A CANADIAN FOREST.

The New York Herald, of the 11th Jan. says: Unique among Brooklyn functions was a Canadian dinner given last night by Alfred Van Derwerken at his home, No. 265 Berkeley place, for his son, Alfred Van Derwerken, Jr., of Quebec. In the centre of the large camp in the Canadian forest, near Lake Alexander, where Mr. Van Derwerken and his friends hung every fall. It was Mr. Van Derwerken's sixty-third birthday.

Jacques Coyer, a French-Indian guide, made the bed with his knife. It was nearly three feet square, and in every detail was an exact reproduction of a log cabin used in the camp as headquarters. On the sides of the little cabin were miniature fishing rods, snowshoes and skis of ash.

At either end of the cabin were ponds of water representing the lakes that surround the Canadian camp. Floating on the little ponds were tiny ducks and loons, carved by the guide, and canoes modelled after those used by the voyageurs on their hunting expeditions. In the ponds were rows of Canadian twigs, representing the forests, and partly concealed among these were various kinds of birds and animals.

Lining the dining room were rows of evergreen trees, such as those in the Canadian forest. Partly concealed behind a little party of trees was seen the head of a big caribou, which was recently shot by Mr. Van Derwerken. There were stuffed animals in the room that were killed near the camp.

Noted Speech of By-Gone Days. Hon. Joseph Howe, of Nova Scotia, speaking in 1854, thus firmly laid hold on the kernel of Imperialism: "If then, Mr. Chairman, the British and Colonial statesmen of the present day, cordially co-operating, do not incorporate this people into the British Empire, or make a nation of them, they will long before their numbers have swelled so much, make a nation of themselves. Let me not be misunderstood, sir; I say nothing here that I would not enter in the presence of the Queen. If I declare our independence tomorrow, I do not believe that Her Majesty's Government would attempt to prevent us by force. If they did, they would fail."

Consume Your Own Smoke. The atmosphere is darkened with the whimpering of men and women over the non-essentials, the trifles that are inevitably incident to the hurly-burly of the day's routine. Things cannot always go your way. Learn to accept in silence the minor aggravations, cultivate the gift of taciturnity, and consume your own smoke with an extra draft of hard work, so that those who may not be annoyed with the dust and soot of your complaints.—Dr. Wm. Geiss.

Largest Presbyterian Church. Knox Church, the largest Presbyterian Church in Canada, held its annual meeting the other night. The membership reported was 1,349; total receipts for the year, $11,497. Sunday school membership, 255; teachers and officers, 43; ministers' stipend, $3,000. The eloquent Rev. R. E. Knowles, the author, is the pastor.

WAITING.

Serene I fold my hands and wait, Nor care for wind, or tide, or sea; I have more gainst time or fate, For lo! my own shall come to me.

I stay my haste, I make delays For what avails this eager pace? I stand amid the eternal ways And what is mine shall know my face.

Asleep, awake, by night or day, The friends I seek are seeking me; Nor wind can drive my bark astray, Nor change the tide of destiny.

What matter if I stand alone? I wait with joy the coming years; My heart shall leap where it is sown, And garner up its fruit of tears.

The waters know their own and draw The brook that springs in yonder height; So flows the good with equal law Unto the soul of pure delight.

The stars come nightly to the sky; The tidal wave unto the sea; Nor time, nor space, nor deep, nor high, Can keep my own away from me.

OUR FOREST LANDS.

Hon. Mr. Pinchot Advises the Dominion to Save Them—Awful Example of United States to Warn Us.

Very important to Canadians was the address delivered by Hon. Gifford Pinchot, chief of the United States Forestry Service, before the Canadian Club in Toronto recently.

"Forestry, with us and with you is a business proposition," he said. "We are approaching it strictly from that point of view, not because we do not realize its need in the protection of game, but simply that unless it is a business proposition it is not worth bothering about."

On no other continent was the subject of such importance. In the eastern part of America the question of timber production stood first; in the western part, the question of water production was emphasized; while all over the continent the production of furs was one of the great sources of revenue.

First, they aroused public opinion until now there was a united and effective public opinion in the United States to assist this work.

Secondly, they aroused the lumbermen to the value of forestry until now the applications of foresters were always in excess of the supply, and the great lumbermen's organization, the Lumber Manufacturers' Association, had raised $150,000 to endow a chair of lumbering in one of the forest schools.

"And," he added, "when the interest of a commercial body is translated into money, you may be perfectly sure it means something." (Applause.)

The third line along which they worked was this: That when public lands were served in the national or state domain, then it should not be allowed to pass into private hands. (Loud applause.)

The United States had 150,000,000 acres of reserved lands. If they had been sold in time they would have 250,000,000 acres. "The United States," he said, "will ultimately have to buy back at the cost of millions of dollars lands which it might have retained if it had only said the word."

"You in Canada have this advantage, that where you have suffered the most, the harm has not been done here, and if I could make any suggestion to you it is that you seize this enormous advantage for the lack of which we will have to pay out vast sums of money at no distant day."

"Our forestry policy," he continued, "merges immediately into our public lands policy. Now the public lands policy of any nation in the making, as ours are on both sides of the ocean at the bottom of nearly everything, Land hunger, and desire for land, is the strongest passion of the human mind and the things that men will do to get land are indescribable in polite language."

"Men who are perfectly respectable in every other line of life will steal public lands. (Laughter.)

"There is no way in which had administration can have such a depressing effect upon the minds of the nation as the administration of public lands."

Mr. Pinchot said the United States Government had tried to apply land laws suitable to the central States to the West, for which they were unsuited.

rescue a young white girl from some Indians, who were holding her until she attained an age at which she could be sold to a white man. He was ultimately successful, but in the course of his work he discovered that the case upon which he was engaged was no isolated instance, but was simply a detail of an organized traffic in white girls reared for immoral purposes from their very babyhood.

"Girls with white skins," the report reads in cold, official terms, "thick brown hair braided down their backs, and innocent, childish eyes are being sold to-day and have been sold in British Columbia to the highest bidder. The slave masters are the Cape Mudge Indians; the slaves are white, because their grandmothers were sold before them to white men, and when their grandmothers wandered back to the tribe, deserted and abandoned, they brought baby birch with them, and in course of time the male relatives of the women sold these baby girls, too, when they grew up to young girlhood. Sometimes they have been sold for four consecutive generations, and in the present generation no trace of Indian blood can be found in their pink and white cheeks, blue eyes and light hair. There have grown up slave dealers at Cape Mudge who have become rich and powerful by the barter in quarter, eighth and sixteenth breed girls. They have created a market which is constantly growing, and the demand has become so great that other markets have been sought and it is reported that the Rock Bay Indians are embarking in this awful industry."

As already stated, the two Governments have now taken the matter up, the Victoria authorities putting it in the hands of Superintendent Hussey of the provincial police force, who is expected to stamp out the practice of buying and selling women along the northern coast.

New Brunswick Failures. New Brunswick reports 73 business failures for the past year. This is double the number in the year previous. The assets for 1905 were $50,000 less than in 1904, and the liabilities fell behind some $10,000. In Nova Scotia there were 117 failures.
