SOME SPEECHES .

The retiring president Mr. Kennedy thanked the members for the help the town. given him during the past year. He was well aware the Board of Trade had been criticized by both press and public, but the people must remember that the Board was composed of men who had their hand full of their own business, and had attended the meetings when their time wasvery valuable to them. They had not succeeded in attracting many industries, but these are not the sole object of the Board's existence. Whilst they should try and do so, they should also be on the alert to take up any matter pertaining to the town's interests. The board had elected a gold man' in Mr. Carew, continued Mr. Kennedy, and he hoped the members would support him loyally. He asked the board not to expect too much.
