On discovering this we had the blankets used by the squadron in which the man served thrown overboard and the decks washed down with disinfectants. The patient was isolated in a cabin over the screw. The case is so light that it does not require a nurse, and, as twelve days have now elapsed without any fresh cases, we are hopeful of pulling through all right." In a letter to a friend in Ot. tawa Col. Evans reports the development of three more cases of smallpox. There is nothing to indicate where the troops are now, but they are supposed to be in quarantine at Durban.
