NEW. SMALE'S CAMPAIGN

(Continued from Page 1). then be found objectionable to a large percentage of the people, the cause of temperance would be put back 20 years. Mr. Whitney and Mr. Foy claimed that the referendum was unconstitutional and un-British. Mr. Marter differed from them. At all events the principle of the referendum had been in vogue in Australia since 1894 and in New Zealand a vote was taken on the liquor traffic every four years and a change had to be endorsed by 60 percent of the voters. The use of the referendum in these colonies had been endorsed by the British government. So it could not be very un-British. It was an example of "Freedom broadening slowly down from precedent to precedent."

The referendum was in vogue in every state of the American union. No institutions without it. In Canada it change could be made in their constitutions without it. In Canada it was universal with regard to money bylaws in municipalities. The bylaw was read twice and then the people voted on it. The municipalities got the power of the referendum from the legislature. If it had not that power itself how could it give it to another?

It was shown that the M.E. church of the States and the Presbyterian and Methodist churches of Canada make important changes by referendum only. The speaker said he would at least show that the principle was a common sense one widely in vogue. In nearly all these organizations from two-thirds to three-quarters majority was required.

Whip Taylor of the Conservative party in the Dominion, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Sir Ralph Meredith were quoted as having endorsed a referendum on the liquor question. People don't want to make radical changes in who want to be able to show that the law of 37 1/2 per cent of the voters were with them. Those who say it is impossible for prohibitionists to poll that vote are not paying a very high compliment to the prohibition people of the province.

THE DAY OF VOTING. Fault had been found because the vote was not to be taken on the municipal election day. There were reasons why it should not be. On that day, men presented themselves for election who held opposing views on the liquor question. It was made an issue on that day good men made an issue of the municipality qualified to serve the community would be defeated because of their would not do to interfere with municipal affairs in that way. The temperance problem was big enough to be dealt with separately. The man who talks temperance and will not take a day to vote for it has not enough interest in it to help enforce a prohibitory law. Mr. Whitney had criticized the day of voting and the basis on which the bill should become law. He could have been sincere, for when Mr. Marter moved to have both of them changed Mr. Whitney voted against him. The Ross government have given the temperance people a chance they have never had before.

THE TAX ON WEALTH. In 3 years $1,600,000 had been got from taxing the estates left by very wealthy men. The Opposition had voted against the law providing for that tax. The government did not believe any man could earn a million or half of it and if he got that much money it was in the public interest that part of it should be applied to the general good. Mr. Graham did not think the law would hit many people in the audience. (Laughter.) By the act taxing corporations, the government had got $800,000 in 3 years. The Conservatives had opposed that too. Yet it was charged that the government was in league with the corporations.

FOR AGRICULTURE. In all $212,000 had been spent to improve agriculture. If farmers were enabled to get half a cent more a bushel for their grain in any one year, it would pay back all that $212,000. If they could be enabled to grow a little more per acre the same thing would result. Mr. Graham believed they had. It was said the agricultural college was run at a loss, and that the boys could learn to farm that way at home. Did his hearers expect to get a revenue from their public schools? Did they complain because every Friday night a dividend was not sent home? These places and the agricultural colleges were not run to make money but to give an education. Ontario's educational system had led at the Centennial Exhibition and World's Fair. The Canadian got the best places in the States. "In London," said Mr. Graham, "if you want to find one of the greatest lawyers, you will be referred to Edward Blake—a Canadian. (Applause.) If you ask for the greatest preachers you will hear of Munro Gibson, a native of Canada. If you ask for the brightest novelists Gilbert Parker will be among those named. The cleverest of Canada, and among the brightest students in England to-day is Ed. Kyle of the town of Lindsay, Canada. (Great applause.) A system that produces such men deserves support.

The Liberal party will not appeal to race or section. It will follow its old-time principles of equality and freedom for all men. If his hearers believed the Liberal leaders were men of honor and ability, they should for their own sake, their families' sake and the country's sake vote for that government. MR. LOUIS F. HEYD the Liberal candidate opposing Mr. J. H. Carnegie in East Victoria was the last speaker. He is a fluent talker and possesses a good many of the qualifications of an effective platform speaker. The hour was late, and Mr. Heyd had to abbreviate his address to the workmen. Quite a number stayed till he concluded at 11.15 o'clock.

He declared he was in the fight to stay and asked workmen to cast aside party prejudice while considering the questions affecting their interests. The Liberal party had stopped the manufacture of soldiers' uniforms in sweat shops. The work done on them was to be paid for at current wages. In 1873 the Liberals passed the Mechanics' Lien Act that saved part of a workman's goods if he got in hard luck; they also put guards on dangerous machinery and forbade the employment of children. They also improved the sanitary conditions of factories. Neglected children were looked after. The public ownership of railways had been recognized. Only Canadians could work on that road about to be built to Temiscaming and they were to get current wages. The government had done a great deal to remove poverty and its degrading effects. It was in the interests of every workingman to support such a government.

AN INTERESTING COMMENT ON ONE OF THE OLD GUARD

A Glimpse of Sir Richard Cartwright in War Paint

Mr. H. F. Gadsby the Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Star sketches his outline of Sir Richard Cartwright's budget speech with the following pithy comment on one of the old guard: The old Knight from Oxford still among the best fighting speech in the House, and the Liberal party will miss him sadly when he returns to the case and dignity that go with an honored old age. There is indeed in the whole Parliament not a man now that Sir Chas. Tupper is out of it, who can deal the knockdown blows that Sir Richard is capable of. Sir Richard belongs to the old school of debate, when giants flung rocks at each other instead of pea-shooting, as they do at present. In those days they did not hesitate to apply the argument and hominem. The retort direct, and other things that are now almost unknown to rhetorical interchanges. They believed in making the other fellow squirm, and that the faculty Sir Richard still retains is the King's taste. When Sir Chas. Tupper was chief adversary, Sir Richard had to meet him in knowledge of what took place in the crepuscular era previous to Confederation. Now that Sir Charles is removed from the scene of action, Sir Richard dispenses with historical precedents and gets into the scrimmage from the start. All of which is to say that today Sir Richard spoke with all his old fire and more of it. In vain the Opposition looked for any signs of flagging. Sir Richard may be somewhat stiff on his pins. What man of his age could stand four hours' ducking in the St-Lawrence and not carry away rheumatism for a souvenir? But mentally, vocally, rhetorically, Sir Richard is as sound as a ever. His humor is just as gargantuan, his fund of quotations as large—Sir Richard has read the Bible and Shakespeare through many times with reference to political situation in Canada—and he bump the Opposition's heads together (with as fine a zest) as he did twenty years ago. Moreover, time cannot wither nor custom stale that sardonic cast of countenance by which makes a speech as effective by him as Mephistopheles' serenade under Marguerite's window. It would be a disappointment if a face like Sir Richard's had not the gift of satire behind it. Nature took good care that Sir Richard was not left unfinished. He has a Rabelaisian wit, and none better than he can squeeze all the humor that is to be got out of any given situation. There is little consolation for the Opposition in the fact that Sir Richard does not speak so often nowadays. When he does he delivers a broadside. all the more destructive because he has taken time to collect ammunition. After two hours under a raking fire some of the honorable gentlemen opposite were fain to take comfort from a rumor that it was Sir Richard's last appearance. If it was his last appearance it was as successful as Samson's who overwhelmed his enemies by way of making his exit with eclat.

It is Strange (Woodville Advocate.) It's certainly strange that East Victoria Liberals have to go to Toronto to find a suitable candidate to represent them in the provincial election. Where are the Lindsay men who have always been so anxious to represent East Victoria?
