FRANKLIN'S GARB.

The Philosopher Often Taken For a Quaker, Though He Was Not One. Benjamin Franklin was often taken for a Quaker, but the philosopher did not belong to the Society of Friends. Franklin, being a simple citizen of Philadelphia, wore clothes of a fashion set by the Quakers, a plain gray or drab suit. He continued to wear this costume while he was in France. Once when his court suit was not ready he appeared in his "republican" garb before Louis XVI. He became the fashion in France and indeed in nearly all A Change for the better. The Europe, and it was at one time the litterateurs to dress a la Franklin. The German historian, Schlosser, describing Franklin's appearance in the French drawing rooms, speaks of "the simplicity of his external appearance, the friendly meekness of the old man and the apparent humility of the Quaker." In truth, the humility and the meekness were mostly matters of appearance. and the Quaker aspect was only an aspect. Franklin was brought up by his parents in Boston in the Congregational church and was intended by them for the ministry. When he went to Philadelphia, he says in his autobiography, he paid his "annual subscription to the only Presbyterian minister or meeting we had in Philadelphia." But he distinctly avows his disagreement with Presbyterian doctrine and later was quite as ready to welcome and assist Whitefield, the Methodist, with whom he also openly disagreed. Later still, he took a pew in an Episcopal church, but he was never a communicant Episcopalian. He says much about religion in his autobiography, explains how he became a deist in his youth, but abandoned the doctrine because it was not useful in making men good. His own creed he declares to be deep dyed scoundrel remarked to the leading man before the curtain rose: "'I say, old chap, I've got my flancee out in front tonight with her father and mother. Now, of course they don't know anything about our business, and I'm afraid it would rather hurt me with them if I received a blow and got away in the usual cowardly fashion. So, dear old chap, can't you omit the blow tonight?

"But, my boy, the management will fine me 2 shillings!

"Well, I'll pay the fine." "'Oh, yes! That's all very well for you, but what do I get out of it? Nothing but a bad name with the powers that be.'

"'Oh, well, I'll give you 2 shillings extra, or, better yet, you hit me as usual, and I'll hit back! They'll fine me, not you, and I'll give you the 2 shillings besides. You see how I'm sitnated. I shouldn't like the girl to mix me up with the character I play. Outsiders are so funny that way."

"So the compact was made, and that night when the hero cried, 'Sir Daniel Deepwater'-or something of that sort -base offspring of a noble race, take but gave it back with such force that "the pit in cheers rose at him,' including his relatives to be by marriage, and he walked off the stage in triumph. "I am sorry to add he lost his situation, but he gained his point."

An Odd Animal Community. Natural enemies of the animal world are sometimes found living together in extraordinary communities. J. G. Millais in a volume on animals quotes this experience of an observer: "On one occasion when ferreting I bolted a fox, a cat, a stoat and several rabbits and rats out of the same earth. The fox boited first, after giving the ferret a nip across the back, from the effects of which it died an hour later. Next came the stoat and then the cat, both of which I shot. Then followed the rabbits and rats promiseuously. It was a large burrow on the bank of a deep, dry watercourse and often held a fox when I ferreted it afterward."

Talking Through a Human Body. To talk through a human body or a row of human bodies, for the matter of that, is one of the weirdest of the electrician's feats. If a telephone wire be severed and the two ends be held by a person, one in each hand, but far apart, it is quite possible for two individuals to carry on a conversation through the body of the medium as readily and as distinctly as if the line had been properly connected.

PARADISE FISHES.

These Creatures Live In Odd Nests Composed of Air Bubbles.

Paradise fishes come from Japan and their nests are very odd indeed for they are composed of air bubbles. Unlike goldfish, they will breed and raise their young in an aquarium or even in a glass globe, and they raise three or four broods each year.

Ordinarily the male paradise fish is of a dull silvery color, but when he goes a-courting he puts on a brilliant coat, striped with streaks of red. blue and green. When the female fish is ready to lay eggs, she builds her nest by swallowing air and making bubbles, which are held together by a sticky secretion that comes from her mouth.

The eggs rise in the water and find a resting place among the air bubbles, to which they cling. The female fish tries to swallow the eggs, but her husband drives her away and keeps guard until the eggs are hatched. If the air bubbles burst, the male fish blows some more, so that the nest is always floating on the surface of the water.

At the end of five days the young are hatched out. They cannot swim, but cling like tadpoles to the air bubbles. If one falls, the father fish catches it in his mouth and blows it up among the bubbles again. He does not leave his little ones until they are able to swim, and then they take care of them-

HOUSE OF NAPOLEON.

The Dwelling In Corsica In Which the

Great Man Was Born. Historically, Ajaccio, Corsica, is of the utmost importance, for here it was that on the 15th of August, 1769, Napoleon Bonaparte was born, and here it was that the future emperor spent his youth, enlightened by an intelligent and lovely mother. The "Casa Napoleon" is one of the or, I should say. belief in God and in the immortality of the principal building in Ajaccio. It is a solid three story building, with gray stucco walls and a number of large windows. Situated in the old part of the town, one would scarcely find it were it not for the boys who tender their services to guide the stranger to the place. Although plundered in 1793 by the partisans of Paoli, the heroic Corsican fighter for liberty, the house still contains a few reminiscences of the great warrior. Besides a number of ordinary rooms, each room containing some furniture, one finds the bedroom where Napoleon was born, as well as Napoleon's sleeping and study room, with his bed and table; his father's study, still beautifully furnished, and the drawing room, in which are his mother's piano and her sedan chair.

THE WORD "FELLOW."

Its Honorable Beginning and Its Latter Day Decline. The degeneracy of a good word was illustrated in a case at Branksome (Dorset), in which a witness spoke of the defendant as "this fellow" and was ordered by the bench to substitute "this man." "Fellow" began very honorably by meaning a person who put down money with others in joint undertaking, its component parts being akin respectively to "fee" (property) and to "lay" and "law." To this day it is dignified to be a fellow of a college, and nobody minds being called "fellow citizen," a "fellow Christian" or a "good fellow." But ordinarily "fellow" alone ranks now as in the painful scene in which Mr. Tupman said, "Sir, you're a fellow," and Mr. Pickwick retorted, "Sir, you're another." In the fourteenth century it was customary to call a servant "fellow" in kindly condescension. Perhaps that explains the word's decline, though it may be due to the use of "fellow" in the sense of boon also were contemptnous at one time.-London Chronicle.

Percy Bysshe Shelley. While it is as a poet that Shelley wil always be remembered, the fact must not be overlooked that he had a passion for reforming the world, before all things. He wrote many valuable essays and pamphlets on questions of day some time before he astounded the world with his brilliancy as a poet. his lyric work it has been said that it "presents a sum total of high creativeness, profound thought and transcendent music such as cannot be found elsewhere in English literature."

When your liver is really sluggish practice the following exercises at least twice a day: Stretch one arm up as high as you can, while with the other one try and reach down toward the floor. Then reverse the position of the arms. You will find that you will unconsciously bend the body toward the lower arm. By this exercise the side muscles are strengthened, and the liver, which is like a sponge, is squeezed and is thus much assisted in its work.

ONTARIO HOSPITALS.

Annual Report of Dr. Smith, Inspector -Refers to Spread of Insanity and

Our Psychopathic Needs. Hon. W. J. Hanna laid before the Legislature the other day the annual report of Dr. Bruce Smith, inspector of hospitals and prisons. In the province, according to the report, there are 61 hospitals, 37 refuges, 30 orphanages, 3 homes for incurables, 2 convalescent homes, a Magdalen asylum, 25 county houses of refuge.

The number of patients in hospitals Oct. 1, 1905, was 2.549; admitted durthe year, 37,537; births, 1,764; total under treatment, 41,764; deaths, 2,429; percentage of deaths 5.79; provincial grant to hospitals, $110,000; from all sources, $1,001,082.12; subscriptions, donations, etc., $150,620.-58; total expenditures (including capital account, $54.070.25) $1.228.289; average cost of patients, $1.08; percentage of provincial grant to total maintenance expenditure, 123-4 cents.

Dr Smith notes that there has been considerable improvement in Toronto hospitals, but there is yet need of increased accommodation. The new general hospital will not be completed for four or five years, and by that time the population will be greatly increased

The inspector hopes that every large hospital will soon have wards for psychopathic cases.

"The importance of the mission of the psychopathic hospital cannot be too highly extolled," he says. "We cannot shut our eyes to the fact that insanity is on the increase, and if we are to combat that advance success must be sought by adopting paychopathic measures. Toronto should have a large modern psychopathic hospital, separate and distinct, for the care and treatment of these acute Graphic.

cases, and where greatly needed clinical advantages might be afforded." He speaks of the necessity for special hospitals or sanatoria for tuberculosis patients. Instances of cruel and heartless treatment may well suggest considering the advisability of statutory enactments compelling each county to take advantage of the act relating to the establishment of municipal sanatoria. The National Sanatorium Association deserves the greatest credit for the splendid work already accomplished, but it has blazed a path which must be followed and extended until every county Ontario has established at some point within the county a sanatorium where its own cases may be cared for. It is also suggested that an institution for the care of feeble-minded women would be a valued addition to the public charities of the province. There are in Ontario at least 500 feeble-minded women without proper custodial care. Regarding houses of refuge, the report says: "In several houses the beds were found unclean and not free from vermin. In many the bathing facilities were quite inadequate, and the inmates left altogether too much themselves to see that their persons were kept clean. All these conditions could be remedied if sufficient help was employed.

"Orphanages, of which there are 30, with a population of 4,240 children, were not found to be so crowded."

Canadian Parents' Great Son.

Sixty years ago Feb. 11, 1907, Thos. Alva Edison, the "electrical wizard, was born in the little town of Milan, Ohio, of Canadian parents. At this time electricity was known, but known rather as a thing to fear than as a thing to use. At the age of 12 young Edison became a railroad newsboy. and began in his spare moments to experiment in chemistry. Gaining the exclusive right of selling newspapers on his line, and coming into possession of some old type, he began editing and publishing a paper of his own, The Grand Trunk Herald, the first newspaper to be printed on a train. stationmaster became interested in the boy, and taught him telegraphy. It was Edison's initiation into the mysteries of electricity. He experi mented with the machine and with the wonderful fluid, and soon succeeded in producing an automatic repeater by which messages could out the intervention of the operator. In 1871 he invented the printing telegraph, or the broker's "ticker," and established a workshop at Newark for the manufacture these instruments. His inventive culties now got full play, and he turned out one invention after another in quick succession. His list of patents includes the megaphone, the phonothe carbon telephone transmitter, the incandescent light, the kinetoscope, various metallargie methods and a number of improvements to steel railway motors. The Way the Ancient Matchlock Was Loaded and Fired. Among the arms now obsolete which formed a large part of the infantry equipment in the days when the army was started was the pike, which was in the form of a spear, with a flat and pointed head, mounted on a staff from thirteen to eighteen feet long. The firearm in general use at the time was the matchlock. What would a sergeant major of the present day, with his men armed with the magazine rifle, think of such a weapon as this: "Attached to the lock of this musket was a pan; also a cock, the hammer of which was somewhat in the form of a bird's, serpent's or dog's head. This head was split, and a screw compressed on eased the slits. The piece being loaded first with powder and then with ball, some powder was poured into the pan. The pan was then shut to keep this 'priming' from dropping out and to keep it dry. When the soldier wished to fire, he fastened his burning match into the slit of the cock, opened the pan, looked to his priming, presented and pulled the trigger. The match, falling into the powder in the pan, fired it. "Between the pan and breech of the barrel communication was established by means of a small hole. When the piece was being loaded the grains of powder were naturally rammed and shaken down close to this hole, and when priming the soldier took care to perfect the communication of the powder in the pan with that in the barrel Thus the explosion in the pan caused the ignition of the charge."-London

The Fashions In Ladies' Hats In Rich-

A southern lady in a diary which she kept throughout the civil war tells of a bonnet which she made and which was regarded as "quite stunning." The author of "Dixie After the War" quotes from the diary as follows:

We had been wearing coal scuttle bonnets of plaited straw, trimmed with corn shuck rosettes. I made fifteen one spring, acquired a fine name as a milliner and was paid for my work. I recall one that was quite stunning.

I got hold of a bit of much worn white ribbon and dyed it an exquisite shade of green with a tea made of coffee berries. Coffee berries dye a lovely green. You might remember that if you are ever in war and blockaded.

Piccadilly. A theory as to the origin of Piccadilly was put forward by Archdeacon Bickersteth many years ago.
