(From The Canadian Century.) following

and the great majority of whom culiar hardship which will be imposed tariff legislation come into planting and general improvemeasure owing to the very wide distribution of official pamphlets and other literature emanating from Canada, and distributed throughout the British Isles, positively stating that 'the Ontario grower is protected in the home market by a high tariff against foreign-grown fruit and vegetables and thus enjoys that market without serious competition from outside sources.

"The amount of customs tarills on the various fruits is specifically stated in these pamphlets and literature; and in order that this particular advantage to the Canadian grower may be ·clearly understood by the Bri-Wisher this tariff scale is not only set forth in Canadian money but is also set forth in the coinage of Great Britain. Under the belief that these conditions would be stable we have not only sunk our own capital, but have been Instrumental in bringing many of our countrymen here to invest in this growing industry, which, owing to the steady rise of recent years in the values of land, small farms the majorus own, and to provide for the maintenance of our families during the years it takes to bring an orchard into bearing."

GOUGH LINDSAY WHERE THE GOOD CLOTHES COME FROM,

PLOWING IN I mourn to see my brothers mourn Their business and its size, And all because they can not learn That men should advertise.

"A few seem favorites of fate And need but load their store And place a flaming sign outside, When thousands come, and more. But oh ! What crowds in every land, The foolish and the wise, By sad experience learn the law That men should advertise.

"Many and sharp the num'rous ills Which competition brings, And the man who does not advertise Will get the scorpion stings, And if your business would go right You needless must arise, For competition, man to man, Makes millions advertise.

"See yonder keeper of a store, His children beg for food, While he behind the counter, says: 'I wish my trade was good,' But see you people in the street, Unmindful cast their eyes, Upon the merchant, while they say, 'That man should advertise.'

"And this is why I mourn, my lad Too many share the fate, And plod along thro' life until They learn the law too late, I've seen you weary winter's sun Twice twenty times arise, And every time has added proof That men should advertise.
