MOUNTAIN, ONT., Dec. 14th. 1910. "For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen, and the pain was awful. M people thought sometimes I was dead as I would faint from the agony. Five different doctors attended me, and all said it was kidney trouble and gave me no hope of getting well. A kind neighbor told me to try "Fruit-a-tives" Fenwick, who was cured by them. I took "Fruit-a-tives"-and in a short time, I began to feel better, the swelling went down, the pain was easier, and then "Fruit-8-tives" entirely cured me. All my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle, and I am unable to praise "Fruit-a-tives" enough." (MISS) MAGGIR JANNACK.

"I cuestin't herp seeing that you were being pretty well forced to do something you didn't want to do," he replied, coming a few steps nearer, and there seemed to be nobody under the pergola except just us two. "I don't suppose I had any right to be preperty of Hugh McKinnon, lot angry at seeing that happen, but I was. So I did what I did on the spur of the moment. As for recognizing you-I-well, you're rather tall, you know, and have a way of holding your head that-that isn't easily forgotten." "I'm sorry I'm so badly disguised," I said, laughing. "But I'm glad you knew me. I'm so glad, too, that I'm out here. I began to have—quite a stifled feeling. How lovely it is in this pergola, isn't it? Do you think Jackson, Auctioneer, Credit Sale we might walk for a few minutesand get cool?" "May I walk with you?" he asked in a humble sort of way that gave me a funny little pain in my beart.

"Please do." I said quickly, and as cordially as I could-far more cordially than I would have spoken to any man in Mrs. Ess Kay's set. "It's nice to see you here tonight."

"You must be very much surprised." I had said "Yes" before I stopped to think, and then I was sorry because it showed that I was thinking he did not belong in such a scene as this. But it was too late to go back, so I went on instead. "It's a good surprise." "It's more than kind of you not quite to have forgotten a waif like me," be

"I shall never forget you," said I. "Why, of course, I couldn't." And I noticed that my voice sounded quite earnest, just as I felt, but I wasn't sure that I ought to let him knoweven if he was poor and unlucky-that I did feel so sincerely about it. "There's Vivace, you know, for one

"What about Vivace?"

"Oh, you needn't pretend, because I was sure you gave him to me, and I wanted so much to write to that club and thank you, only I thought as you had put no name, perhaps I'd better not. I must tell you now, though, I can't think how you came to be so "It was one of the greatest pleasures I have ever had. You were kind not to be offended with me. I didn't mean to take a liberty. I thought you would like the little chap." "I love him dearly. Often I should nave been dreadfully homesick if it hadn't been for him. He always seems to understand if I feel gloomy, and he does his dear little brindled best to cheer me up."

"Vivace is a lucky and happy dog." "But don't you miss him?"

"No. For I like to think that you have him. You see, you were very kind to me when I was in a hard pesition and a good deal down on my luck. There was nothing I could do to show how I appreciated it-until I thought of Vivace. It was our little talk on the dock about "finding a lost dog' that put the idea into my head."

"I guessed as much," said I, laughing. "It was that made me sure at once who it was I had to thank for Vivace. And-I was glad be had been yours. After what I'd seen you do on board ship, you know, II-II honored

you. And I feel proud to think thatwe are friends."

"You think of me as your friend?" he asked in a voice that showed he wasn't quite calm.

But-there are such things as newspaper reporters, as you know to your sorrow. I don't say I am here in that capacity, but I leave you to draw your own conclusions."

"It is fun now. I had no right dare, but I did dare to hope that I might have a glimpse of you, I sure that I should recognize you." "If I'd dreamed of your being here should have recognized you," I said "You're taller than any other man bere, I think."

"You mean all this, Lady Betty?" he asked quickly. "You have as much
