WITH THE PEOPLE OF FRUITS AND FLOWERS

The Horticultural Society Held its Annual Meeting on Tuesday Evening

It is on few other occasions that the council chamber is occupied by so large an audience as when the Horticultural Society holds its annual public meeting; and for that chamber to contain so interested and good-natured audience is a still rarer occurrence.

On Tuesday night Mr. Hutt of the Guelph Agricultural College, a brother of the professor there of that name, and Miss Maddock, also of the college town were the speakers. Additional chairs and a plank were insufficient to seat those who came. Some magnificent specimens of the floriculturist's science gave an appropriate beauty to the room.

Chairman Robson, Sec. Frampton, Messrs. Beall and Keith, those veteran horticultural faddists, those cranks on the shrubs, plants and flowerpots, those fanatics on the delightful science of bud and fruit and bloom—they were there with the light of a serene joy illuminating their physiognomies and the atmosphere adjacent, a joy which at times overflowed into gladsome grimace and warped their spinnach into all manner of grotesqueness.

Mr. Wetherup was there with his polyphone, a fine specimen of the genus talking machine. This instrument has double brass trumpets and is by all odds the finest of the phone inventions in town—barring of course the telephone. In the intermission a number of selections on this instrument were greatly enjoyed.

About Insects
Mr. Hutt's subject was "Insects." He declared that they keep horticulturists busy, but hastened to explain that he referred only to those sorts that attack vegetation. In brief he said:

A great part of the horticulturist's work is fighting insect enemies of vegetable life. So much is this the case that the success or failure of the science rests with the outcome of the battle on bugs. Why are horticulturists so much more numerous than formerly? Because the things on what they live have multiplied. This climate had no charm for the potato bug before the potatoes were grown. They care nothing for the scenery unless it includes the Irishman's apples. Insects have a better chance now because many of the checks on them have disappeared. The birds are fewer since the woods were cut down; the skunk and mink and coon are insect eaters and they are fewer now. With the natural foes of insects decreased we have to protect the crops ourselves.

Insect life is 3/4 of the life on the globe. Insects are both useful and hurtful. Some are valuable in an economic sense. For example the bee for honey, the cochineal fly for dyes, the Spanish fly for blisters. Others are valuable because they kill the injurious ones. Among them are the lady bug and these black beetles that live under boards and stones.

The stages through which insects from the egg to maturity are interesting. They perform some amazing feats in that journey. For instance the tent caterpillar wriggles out of his shell with the fatal exactness of a stop watch just as the young buds have burst on the twigs, and with a ready-made appetite that no patent medicine could improve gets down to work. In a few days his skin coat gets too small for him but after a few hours of meditation he splits it down the back and steps out with a prettier suit than ever. This is repeated as his growth continues.

Mr. Hutt had a chart by which he illustrated his remarks and his lecture dealt with many features of the subject not mentioned here.

The Mission and Care of Flowers

Miss Maddock said that plants use the carbon dioxide that animals exhale and give off the oxygen that animals require so that the famous and numerous invisible plant that is said to waste its sweetness on the desert air has no existence. Every plant fulfills its mission in making the atmosphere more suited to animal life. That is part of the mission of flowers.

Another part is to soothe and comfort. When words fail flowers often convey a meaning and to the sick or downcast are messengers angelic.

To grow them well one must really love them for their own sakes. Different sets of plants should be used for summer and winter. Nip off the buds in summer and plants will be ready to bloom in winter. The sort of soil a plant needs can be determined by the look of its roots. If these are heavy the soil should be heavy; if they are fibrous the soil must be lighter. From an inch to two inches of broken crockery or brick should be placed at the bottom of flower pot to facilitate drainage.

Miss Maddock was heard with great interest. Her address as well as that of Mr. Hutt was followed by questions some of which will likely appear in a later issue.

The Price of Small Pox

The Finance Committee was in session on Wednesday night of last week. Mr. W. Simpson's request for $25 a day to cover the expenses of his house while it was quarantined was considered but for fear that to allow it would establish a precedent that might prove expensive, the aldermen decided to take no action until other cases that might involve similar claims had further developed.

The lighting at the town hall and fire hall had cost $172—a sum greatly in excess of any ordinary rate per lamp.

Ald. Robson complained that the water is allowed to lodge in front of his store and run into the cellar. The Alderman showed considerable warmth that drew the banter of his colleagues. Aids. Sinclair and Hore explained that they also were similarly afflicted.

Ald. Robson—I have spoken of this often enough before and can't get a hearing. Do you expect me to take a pick and shovel and dig a trench to let the water away?

The floating foot bridge will be made a swing affair and tenders for caretaker are asked for.

Ald. Sinclair—How much will it cost to make it a swing bridge?

Com. Chalmers—$65.

Ald. Sinclair—I would abandon it before I would favor that expense. It should not cost more than $25.

The chief of police will see that people with awnings on Kent-st. conform to the by-law and have them 6 1/2 feet clear above the walk.

During the discussion about fire hall supplies Ald. Sinclair declared that the old fire boxes were better than the new ones, and must be taken care of. Ald. Touchburn agreed and declared that Mr. Scott who sold the new boxes was a plausible gentleman who lead the council into buying boxes when the old ones were all right.

When the Simpson claim was being discussed Ald. O'Reilly said that wherever the bread-crummer is shut in for the public protection the town should pay his wages. Others would not agree and declared it would involve a large expenditure, while anxious to help Mr. Simpson they feared to as yet, lest other cases might also have to be similarly dealt with.

Stock Notes

Mr. Thos. Bowes, the popular drover, recently purchased for Easter shipment, a handsome fat shorthorn Durham bull from Mr. Robt. Aikens of Glandine. Experts on the Toronto market state that this was the finest all-round bull ever sold on that market. The beast weighed 2100 pounds and was coming three years old. Everything great emanates from Mariposa.
