THE LAST SHOE STORE ROBBER WAS CAUGHT

By Constables Bell and Foster—He Was Hiding in a Gravel Pit.

The fourth suspect in the Hockin shoe robbery was taken on Wednesday afternoon of last week and brought into town that night. He is Thos. Sheridan of Toronto.

The man whom the Constables chased when the other two were arrested was not one of the suspects at all as they had supposed. It turns out that he was a farmer who was crossing the field to his home and stopped to look at the hay going up the track. When he saw one of the officers coming his direction he moved on and had entered his house before Constable Foster reached the top of the hill.

When the others were captured Sheridan was actually hiding in Purdy's barn, under the gangway of which McHugh was found, and near which the other men were taken. He was afraid to come out and did not know what had happened to his pals. They had gone to look for food and when they did not come back he suspected their capture. Next day, hunger compelled him to go in search of something to eat. A number of youths were near the barn when he came out brandishing a revolver and saying "make way for me." Farmers were very much in earnest over the whole affair and the women, fearing to stay in the houses, in some cases spent the day in the fields where the men were at work, for fear the robber should come to their houses when they were there alone. This was a result of the wholesome dread instilled into their minds by the police for the purpose of getting all the assistance possible. As a result everybody was on the lookout and ready to give information.

On Wednesday afternoon Constables Bell and Foster went out to Sanderland on the 12.10 train. They soon learned that their man had been seen. Going to the place they tracked him into a swamp. A gravel pit was not far from this swamp and Constable Bell decided to work up to it from all sides. This was done. While his assistants watched it from all sides Constable Bell reconnoitered. After diligent search he came upon his man secreted in the pit. Making a demonstration in force the officer persuaded the fugitive to accept his escort.

Sheridan had made enquiries about the time the train for Toronto that leaves here at 6.20 would pass Blackwater and apparently hoped to get back to that city on it. He had 17 cents and a revolver.

SMALLPOX IN EARNEST AT KIRKFIELD

The Disease Has Broken Out Among the Canal Laborers

During the past few months the village of Kirkfield has had a few cases of smallpox, like many other places in the province but within the past few days the disease has broken out with alarming vigor. On Sunday a number of the canal laborers were taken sick at their camp a mile and a half from Kirkfield. Dr. Ross went up and found them all victims of the disease. There were a dozen of them. Later in the day he found three other cases in the village. One of these was a young man stopping at Gusty's hotel. As has occurred in at least one other instance, he got away from the hotel. His home is in Cobocok and thither he went. As a result both the hotel and his home in northern village were quarantined.

The provincial authorities were notified and so serious did Dr. Bryce consider the case that he came down in person. After confirming the opinion of the local doctor as to the nature of the disease, he had the persons isolated. A storehouse was fitted up for a temporary hospital and the canal men placed in it. The others were isolated in their homes. Moreover the village has been put under quarantine. No trains stop there and no person is allowed to go either in or out. This is a serious blow for the village and despite precautions it is all too likely that the contagion has been more widely spread than is apparent. A shantyman from Sudbury who got work on the canal is said to have infected the camp.

WHERE THE PUBLIC GIVES ITS OPINION

The Steamboat Channel

Editor of the Watchman-Warder. Dear Sir,—Has the government made those several large appropriations to improve the river for steamboat navigation, so that passengers can be landed at the upper wharf in safety, or have they made them in order that the river may be monopolized by mill-owners? For the last two years steamers have been barred out from reaching the town wharf unless they run the risk of running over logs and booms, endangering the lives of passengers and breaking their engines and destroying their paddle wheels. The steamer Crandella's machinery and paddle wheels were wrecked last season to such an extent that it will cost over $100 to put her in proper repair. Who should pay this expenditure? I can assure the mill-men that I shall take steps to enforce the rights of steamboats and shall not be persuaded into letting it go this year like I was last. Yours etc., CAPT. GEO. CRANDELL.

Drainage and Good Roads

Mr. A. W. Campbell during a speech at the Chicago convention said: I think the whole question of road-making is practically boiled down to three great principles. The first is drainage, the second is drainage, and the third is drainage. (Applause.) The first would be to drain the foundation. Just as necessary to provide a dry foundation for a road as it is for a building. The second would be to crown the road so perfectly as to shed the water while it is running from the centre into the side gutter. And the third would be to cover that road, or the portion of it that is travelled, with material that is impermeable to water, that will resist the traffic and prevent the soaking of water into the roadway. We sometimes create the false impression that the stone or gravel or other material that is placed on the road is put there for the purpose of making the hard road but it is simply placed there for the purpose of carrying off the water and resisting the wear—it is the earth foundation after all that must carry the load, and if the earth foundation is not thoroughly drained then, sir, it is useless for you to try to make a good road by putting on stone or gravel or any other material. Drainage is the important question. That drainage requires to be laid out in a systematic way, and as I have said this morning, I do not think it necessary, in order to provide first-class supervisors that civil engineers should be employed.
