THREE LIGHTING PROPOSITIONS

COMPANY LIGHTING

The Light, Heat and Power Company will take a five-year contract and franchise of the streets and supply light on the moonlight schedule till one o'clock for $45 per lamp.

A TOWN PLANT RUN BY STEAM

The town may instal its own plant for lighting and run it by steam power. The committee appointed to investigate the cost declares that if the cost of the plant is spread over 20 years the sinking fund and running expenses will make light cost $34 per lamp. Under this arrangement the company claim that the town will be under legal obligation to buy their old street plant and that they will still hold the street franchise.

A TOWN PLANT RUN BY COMPANY POWER

The town may instal its own street plant and operate it by electric power supplied by the company. For this power Manager Resor has quoted $24 per lamp. A supply company has offered to furnish the plant at $4340. Under this plan the company offer to give the town the use of their poles, waive their street franchise, and release the town from the obligation to buy their old plant. Running expenses, and sinking fund on 20 year debentures will make this light cost about $38 per lamp.

WHERE THE PUBLIC GIVES ITS OPINION

Smallpox at Kirkfield

Editor of the Watchman-Warder.
Dear Sir, In your article of last week under the above heading, a certain wrong impression, regarding the health of the village is apt to be left in the minds of your readers, and with your permission I will endeavor to state the true condition of affairs as existing here.

Some four weeks ago a number of young men returned from the lumber camps to their homes in the township of Carden. Shortly afterwards one of the farmers in this township, residing some six miles north of Kirkfield, gave a party to which a number of people were invited. These with the exception of two or three were all from the immediate neighborhood. It appears that amongst those present was one of those young men lately returned from the woods, who had been suffering, though unknown to himself, with this dread malady. About two weeks afterwards some 18 or 19 cases of smallpox broke out amongst those who were present at that party. In this village there were three cases which were promptly moved and isolated and the places where these parties resided quarantined, and from present indications the promptness of the Medical Health Officer, Dr. J. F. Ross, and the Board of Health of the township of Eldon, has stamped out this disease. The other cases are from one and one half to ten miles north of Kirkfield, and it seems scarcely fair that Kirkfield is the centre of the whole smallpox area.

The village was never quarantined, the trains arrive and depart as usual, our express etc. are accepted as ever, the public, by receiving a permit from the Medical Health Officer, are allowed to travel before the last precaution is required not to detain any from our village from travelling, but to act as a check to those from the infected portion of the township to the north of us, who come to Kirkfield to take the train. The travelling public can with impunity come and go to Kirkfield and feel perfectly safe from contracting the dread disease. Yours etc., EDWARD MOSGROVE.

(We are indebted to Mr. Mosgrove for his statement of the true condition of affairs; and are glad to learn that Kirkfield is so much better off than was reported. Ed. Watchman-Warder.)

Galt's Electric Light

A short time ago it was stated that Galt was in darkness through failure to agree on a price with the light company. Later it was said that a contract had been made. Manager Resor wrote the manager of the Galt company for particulars. In his reply that official explains that the town thought of putting in a plant but reckoned it could not begin to supply as cheap light as that offered by the company. Then the town proposed to buy the company's entire plant and power, water, gas and electric, but would not pay the price. The company gave notice that in ten days the light would be turned off, and it was. For three weeks the town was in darkness. Then a contract was made as follows:

50 2000 candle-power lamps, moonlight schedule till midnight, at 21 cents per lamp per night.
From Oct. 15th to March 15th the lamps will be lit from 5.30 to 7.30 in the morning. For this $7.00 extra is charged.
An 11-night service is offered for 24 cents per night.
Hotels and private houses get a 12-cent net rate, shops a 13 and churches, halls, etc., a 14.
At 21 cents per night, taking 300 nights in a year, the cost per lamp is $65.

Stock Notes

—Messrs. N. Day & Sons have added another Yorkshire White male to their stock. This animal was being fitted for the American fairs by Fleet & Sons, but is none too good for Fenelon.

—The Belgian Draught Horse Association of Woodville are to the front again with the imported draught sire Armateur. This great equine is constantly growing in popularity as his produce approach maturity. They are just what the market demands.

—Last week Messrs. James Robertson and Thos. Skuce purchased a high-class Clydesdale colt from Mr. D. Carstairs of Beaumont, and brought the same to town on Saturday last. Expert judges state that this is the best two-year-old ever brought to this district. It is rovally bred, nicely marked, weighs 1500 pounds and won the first prize in its class at the Toronto Spring Show.

—Mr. W. A. Fanning of Cambay always has something good in the equine line. This season he has the great pacing sire John R. Gentry, 2:23 1/4, that is proving very popular in that district. Gentry is a son of Capt. Hunter 2:13 1/4, and is the counterpart of his sire, and is royally bred on the maternal side. Mr. Fanning will be a factor at the fall fairs, having in addition to Gentry 2:23 1/4, the Canadian pacer Little Buck and Ruby Gentry, a two-year-old that can go in 2:40 to-day.

—Messrs. Rich. Staples & Son of Lifford, Ont., are numbered among the progressive live stock men of Durham township. Their specialty is Marburn cattle, and the community in which they live is benefited thereby. Their latest venture in this line is the purchase of the imported Durham sire, Baron Skene 28856, to head their choice herd. This animal is hot only choice bred but it embraces a combination of the most fashionable strains of the famous herds of Wm. Duttie, Alex. Watson, S. Campbell, A. Cruickshank and W. Benton—the foremost breeders of Scotland. They also own a second animal in Improver (27211). Cattle men should inspect these animals.

But the Bore Was Discomfited and Put Out the Train.

The girl was pretty enough to attract attention as she entered the elevated train, and of her escorts the one whose name was soon disclosed to be Jack looked very important. His accent was slightly affected. The other escort was a neutral looking chap with no accent. His name proved to be Tom.

As soon as the trio were seated Jack in a loud voice took up a story with which he had evidently been boring his companions before they entered the car. It was a recital in great detail of his experiences at a recent dinner. He described the courses, told what the guests said, which was uninteresting, and even retailed his own feelings. The girl and Tom looked as if they were heartily tired of it. Jack gave them no opportunity to interrupt. "Then," he continued, "when the coffee was brought in I asked the waiter to put three lumps of sugar in mine, and he seemed surprised because, you know, most people take only one lump of sugar, but I have always taken three in mine ever since I was old enough to order, and that was the way my father did, and what he did was good enough for me, and then the gentleman who sat opposite me and whose name I did not catch, as most of them were French, lifted his glass and, bowing to me, said, 'A votre sante,' and I—"

"What did he say?" interrupted the girl.

"He said, 'A votre sante,' and I—"

"Do you mean to say that a gentleman said that to you?" said the girl, and one of the passengers thought he saw her give Tom a little kick.

"Why—that is, of course he was a gentleman," said Jack.

"Do you know what it meant?" asked the girl.

"Why—that is, not exactly, of course, but in a general way it is a complimentary toast."

"Do you know its true meaning," said Tom, coming to the girl's aid, "when the man lifts his glass and says it to you?"

The chap called Jack was now badly flustered, and he admitted that he did not know exactly what the Frenchman intended to say to him.

"And you sat there, Jack," said the girl earnestly, "and permitted that fellow to say that to you without resenting it?"

"Resent it! Why, I didn't know that the fellow was insulting me. How did I know that?"

"But he said 'A votre sante' to you. Tom, would you let anybody say such a thing as that to you?"

"Not if I were as big as he was," said Tom promptly.

By this time most of the passengers within earshot were enjoying the sport. When they wanted to laugh, they held up their newspapers. The girl's face gave no indication of the fun that she was having except when she turned around to Tom and allowed one eyelid to droop slowly until the lashes rested on her cheek. It was a deliberate wink, and Tom responded in kind. The other chap seemed to feel that he had made a mistake in some way, but he didn't know take in some way, but he didn't know of the conversation had been overheard by the other passengers to make him appear ridiculous in their eyes.

"I don't just see yet where the insult in saying 'A votre sante' comes in," he said.

"You explain to him, Tom," said the girl.

"I have not the heart to tell you, Jack," said Tom. "Really, I haven't, old man, but if you ever see that Frenchman again just punch his face and see what he does."

"It was certainly a most unwarranted insult," added the girl. "I always thought you would resent such a thing."

"I would have resented it," said Jack, "if he had said it in English. How was I to know? Hello, this is Eighteenth street and I must get off. I've got an engagement with my dentist. No, I can't go any farther. Well, goodbye; see you soon," and as he disappeared out of the door the young woman and Tom laughed to make up for lost time, and so did the other passengers.
