A few days later a young man drove up from the village to take his place, and was accepted. Being in his working clothes, he started to work at once in the field, while his friend went to the house, received the wages due him, packed up his clothes and started for Uxbridge in the buggy the other had brought. A little way from the gate he stopped, gave a whistle, and in a moment laborer No. 2 appeared across the fields, having tied the farmer's horses to the fence. The whole scheme had evidently been carefully arranged, and worked out very successfully.

LINDSAY MAN IN TORONTO BAY

John R. Bell's Body Taken Out of the 6 Weeks

About six weeks ago Mr. John Roland Bell a coremaker at the Massey-Harris Works, Toronto, disappeared. He was a son of the late "Boss" Bell of Dunsford, whose widow, lives in the north ward in this town. The voung man was 25 years old and had been living with his brother in the

On Friday morning his body was found floating in the bay at the south side of the Island and below Turner's baths. It was removed to the morgue and at 8 o'clock at night was identified by his brother.

Mr. Bell had apparently been at some work shortly before he got into the water, for his shirt sleeves were rolled up, and he wore neither collar nor tie. He was popular with his employes.

The remains were brought to Lindsay by the 11 o'clock train on Saturday and taken to Dunsford for burial. Much sympathy is felt for the unfortunate man's mother and other relatives.

Of this proceeding the Port Hope Times says: "In some cases we are told, the new survey runs within a few yards of the front door of some of the farmers. Surely provision could have been made that these parties should be fully recompensed. the G. T. R. were to purchase such farms at a fair valuation, in cases where an agreement cannot be reached, they could resell such parts of the property as they did not require, and all the grounds for discontent would be removed, but to give them the right to take just a strip for Water After he Had Been Missing their right of way, which will average about four acres off a farm, and pay only a few dollars an acre for the same is not treating the property owners right. Where the track goes across the back of a man's farm it is not so bad, but to have the line run between his house and barns and the road in front, is an injury that a few dollars does not satisfy."

WHAT MOVED THE DOG?

A Remarkable Story of Canine Intelligence and Affection.

Among the tales told of the intelligence and affection of our canine friends by Mrs. Sarah K. Bolton in her book, "Our Devoted Friend, the Dog," is the story of Dan, a deerhound owned by Mr. L. C. Meachamp of Homer, La. Mr Meachamp was one day going on a squirrel hunt and, not wishing Dan to accompany him, tied the dog to a post by a rope. Dan whined and begged, but finding his master obdurate he at last lay down quietly before his

THE WORD PARADISE.

Its Earliest Menning Was an Inclosed Pleasure Ground,

The earliest meaning of the word paradise appears to have been a walled in pleasure ground. In the Hebrew it was "perdes," in the Persian "ferdus," and from one or other of these the Greeks appear to have derived the word "paradeisos," from which we get our own word. We also know that the ancient monarchs of Chaldea and Assyria and also of Egypt constructed vast inclosures of forest land for the preservation of wild animals kept for hunting purposes, and these were also called paradises. Thus, the historical meaning of the word comes to this: A space protected from all incursion from the outer world, in which those who were privileged to enter were able to indulge in such pleasures as pleased their fancy.

It is easy to see the translation from the material to the spiritual meaning. paradise in the latter sense meaning the place of the elect or chosen. This treatment failed to benefit me and I and nights, the girl had seemed to is strikingly borne out by the fact that 5 the favorite battlecry of the Moslems, finally unable to do the least work. days, however, she had improved in whose firm belief it is that those who die fighting go straight to heaven, was always "Fight! Fight! Paradise! Paradise!" And the strong probability is that they got the word from the Persian campaigns of the eighth century. The use of the word in its present form in the New Testament is of Greek

> A Forgotten Statesman, Why is it that Oliver Ellsworth has received so little attention from biographers and historians? asks Frank Gaylord Cook in The Atlantic. He was not born in Massachusetts or Virginia. In Connecticut, like Pennsylvania, the historic field has been meagerly tilled. Moreover, the dramatic and opportune quality of his work has been perceived only through the perspective of subsequent years. To negotiate an unpopular convention for a party just retiring from office in defeat and ignominy is not conducive to immediate fame, Nevertheless he has not been wholly overlooked by subsequent statesmen. Webster said of him: "For strength of reason, for sagacity, wisdom and sound good sense in the conduct of affairs, for moderation of temper and general ability, it may be doubted if New England has yet produced his superior."

What he said as chief justice of the United States to the grand jury at Savannah in 1796 was the aim of his life, "So let us rear an empire sacred to the rights of men and commend a government of reason to the nations of the earth."

A Witty Reply of Pope. As narrated by Edward Walford in his "Greater London," Frederick, prince of Wales, sometimes visited Alexander Pope at his villa. On one occasion when the prince was on a visit Pope, after expressing the most dutiful professions of attachment, gave his royal highness an opportunity of observing very shrewdly that his (the poet's) love for princes was inconsistent with his dislike for kings, since princes may in time become kings. Said his royal highness:

"Mr. Pope, I hear you don't like princes."

"Sir, I beg your pardon." "Well, then, you don't like kings." "Sir, I must own that I like the lien best before his claws are grown." No reply could well have been hap-

Voltaire, the king of wits and litterateurs, was the king, too, of coffee drinkers. In his old age he took fifty cups a day, which sadly hurt his digestion and hastened his death. The abstemious Balzac was fond of the same drink, stimulating himself with it from midnight, when he began his literary work, till daybreak, when, starved and self forgetful, he would find himself bareheaded and in dressing gown and slippers, in the Place du Carrousei, ignorant bow he came there and miles from home.
