TO LAPROVE THE ORCHARDS DOWN IN NOVA SCOTIA

The Government is Helping to Establish Models -Both Large and Small Fruits 严温 Country Gentleman) Two years ago the provincial leg-School of Horticulture. As ultimately to be carried out, the plan will include the setting of three twoacre orchards in each county of the province with exception of Kings, Annapolis and Hants Counties, which comprise the Annapolis Valley and in which fruit growing is already one of the leading industries. Even in these counties it is probable that one or more orchards may be set in parts outside of "the valley."

TREES ARE SUPPLIED. The terms on which these orchards are established are as follow: The government furnishes the nursery stock, and the secretary and director above mentioned superintend the setting of each orchard and visit it at at least once a year thereafter to inspect it and to give directions as to its care. Instructions are also sent to the owners from time to time as may deemed necessary, and a firstclass spraying outfit is placed in each orchard. The owner of the orchard on his part agrees to perform all ehe labor necessary, to furnish afl fertilizers and to manage the orch-This agreement is binding for a period of ten years, and during that time all fruit produced by the orchard and all crops grown between the rows of trees are the property of the owner. The crops allowed in the orchards are limited to heed crops. and a strip of land along each row of trees for the exclusive use of the

As the orchards are designed to be "models" and as this would certainly mean among other things "profitable" the bulk of the trees is made up of a few varieties of apples which are thought to be most likely successful in that particular locality. But as it is also intended that they should be, to alimited extent, experimental, one or two trees of a few of the newer yet promising varieties of apples are included, as well as pears, plums, cherries, peaches, carinces and apricots.

The country south of Balsam, Cameron and Sturgeon Lakes seems to have supported a large aboriginal population, as the soil is good and surface of the country well suited for location of villages and aboriginal cultivation, being undulating and well watered with streams . The country to the north of these lakes or the main internal waterway is a sterile mountainous tract of Laurentian formation. The bulk of the village sites seems to be (as far as they are known to date) immediately on the south side of lakes extending along the chain to the east. Then we hear occasionally of isolated villages, and an odd group here and there as far as S. Simcoe to the west, and extending from the southern edge of granite regions away to the south of the county where it touches the hilly country in the vicinity of Peterboro.

There are sites reported from Verulam township, south of Sturgeon lake, which have not been examined this year, on account of lack of time and general rough weather. The principal ones being on the 5th concession, Robert Mitchell's place, near Dunsford post office, where large quantities of pottery and relics are picked up.
