Among the Churches. CAMBRIDGE-ST. METHODIST. Rev. G. W. Henderson on Sunday morning preached the last of a series of sermons on the text "My grace is sufficient for thee." The preacher had in previous sermons considered the passage as applied to different phases of active life. On Sunday he applied it to the closing hour of life. The grace of God, said he, is sufficient for men when dying.

Every day 100,000 die; "every pulse-beat is the signal for the flight of some spirit to God;" the average length of life to-day is from 35 to 38 years; 25 percent of the human race die before they are 7 years old, 50 percent before 17. Nature declares that all flesh is grass; experience teaches that the seeds of mortality are sown in our bodies; and the scriptures ever exhort men: "Watch ye for, ye know not the day or the hour." Death with how drawn to the utmost tension points the unerring arrow and men go down.

Death is the supreme testing time; it brings a man face to face with the realities. In its presence he finds out if he never has before, what sort of foundation he has been building. Do not, pled the preacher, allow yourself to come to that hour without being in right relation to God. All fear death; even the good shrink from it, as do those who for the first time are about to take a journey across the sea. Those who believe most firmly in the joys beyond the dying, yet dread to die. And that is natural; for death is an unnatural thing. God never intended that men should die. But for sin they would not have. Geology finds proof that in the rocks, that there was vegetable and animal death before man was created; but man was never intended to die. Hence, his constant dread of death, the penalty and sting of sin. But for sin, man's life would have terminated with a blissful translation into the presence of God. What all shrink from is a positive unquenchable terror to men without Christ. The most confirmed infidels have weakened in its presence. The funeral said the dying Gibbon, "is dark and doubtful." To his doctor Voltaire said, "I shall go to hell and you with me." "Brace up, hold on!" said an infidel to a young disciple of his who was dying. "I can't brace hold onto," replied the dying man. That had been the universal testimony of Christless deathbeds. The preacher urged his hearers to seek the grace of God, which was sufficient for the dying hour.

The morning anthem was "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." The rendering was badly hampered by the absence of all but one bass singer, but the other parts were very well taken. At night the service was followed by a reception of new members and the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

AT-ST. PAUL'S. Bishop Sweatman of Toronto conducted the services at St. Paul's on Sunday. In the morning a very large audience was present. His Lordship confirmed a class of about 10. At night Bishop Sweatman preached on the text: "Who hath abolished death." His sermon had a striking similarity to that of Rev. G. W. Henderson at the Cambridge-st. Methodist church in the morning. Death was declared to be foreign to God's plan. Neither vegetable nor animate nature was intended to perish. Death is the one dark shadow that overshadows all existence. It destroys the precious, and defaces the beautiful. It is the undoing of creation, and therefore cannot be the will of God the creator. By death beauty is turned to ashes, and promise nipped in the bud. The fear of it, on behalf of ourselves and others, is a chief of the woes that afflict our lives.

Christ hath abolished death. True he has not arrested its operation in the physical universe; but by His resurrection. He has overcome it. Christ's rising proved that His sacrifice for men had been accepted; it moreover changed the destiny of the race in that a representative of it had risen from the dead; finally it "abolished death." That is the glad gospel of christianity. That idea is expanded by St. Paul when he told the Hebrews that Christ had died "that through death He might destroy him that hath the power of death; and deliver those who through fear of death were all their lifelong subject to bondage." In view of that Paul and all other believers were able to ask "Oh Death where is thy sting; oh Grave where is thy victory?"

Mr. Hallam of Wycliffe College, Toronto read the lessons. Miss Sylvester sang a solo. QUEEN-ST. METHODIST. The pastor Rev. Harvey Strike preached at the Queen-st. Methodist church on Sunday morning on Benaiah the man who "in the time of slow a lion." as recorded in Sam. 23: 20. Benaiah came of good stock; it was a great thing to have good ancestry. The influence of a home made sacred by family prayer was hard to get away from. Benaiah took the aggressive with the lion; so should a man with his sins. He must either slay them or be slain by them. The lion killed, Benaiah had peace; so has the victor over sin.

At night the text was Act 9: 11, "Behold he prayeth." Paul's conversion was a marvel of grace. Paul sought not power, honor or ease. His conversion was a radical change in the divine power and a great testimony to the truth of Christianity.

The chairman of Lindsay District, Rev. Geo. Brown of Onemec was present at the last business meeting of the present conference year and congratulated the pastor, Rev. Mr. Strike, and the members of the Official Board on the very successful year. It was by far the best in the history of the church. The annual meeting of the Sunday School was very encouraging. Besides this the Young People of this society have contributed to the funds of the church proper through envelopes over $200. The meetings have been interesting and remarkably well attended during the whole year. Rev. Mr. Strike and Mrs. Strike are seldom absent. Mr. H. Stoddard is an indefatigable worker and a good president. The following officers were elected for ensuing year: Hon. president, Rev. Mr. Strike; President, Miss M. Stoddard; 1st vice-pres, Sarah Fee; 2nd vice-pres, Miss M. Stevens; 3rd vice-pres, Miss Woodley; Recording secretary, Mr. Wm. Hussey; Cor.-sec., Miss Maible Mitchell; treasurer, Miss V. BRITISH SHIPS TO BE KEPT OUT OF NEW YORK HARBOR. An Infernal Machine was Found on the Pier. On Saturday afternoon, a short time before the steamer Umbria sailed from New York harbor an infernal machine and 100 pounds of dynamite was found on the pier. It had been carried onto the pier by two Italians who said an Umbria passenger would call for it. The box was found as a result of a letter received by the police department. It began "The Mafia greets you" and went on: "The society has declared war against England and has ordered the destruction of every steamer flying the British flag that sails out of New York harbor. The undersigned received orders to begin operations by sinking the Umbria and Oceanic, but so many women and children took passage on that boat that the society's plans were changed at the last moment. The New York harbor of British ships, and it will succeed. The reason for the movement of the society does not wish to disclose; suffice it to say that the society in order to protect itself, must carry the war into the enemy's country and it goes without saying that it proposes to wage it as fiercely as it knows how. This is the society's first and last warning, and those who propose to patronize British steamers must take their chances in the future. The detectives immediately began a search for the box. It was soon found, for it had come to the pier under peculiar circumstances. It was exactly as described in the letter, and was found at the foot of the gangway among the other pieces of baggage. It was a plain, white pine box, newly made and was unmarked. In size it was about 40 by 20 by 20 inches. The top was made of two pieces, was hinged and fastened with a staple, hasp and padlock. The hardware was neatly japanned, and was evidently new. The passengers were not apprised of the presence of the infernal machine. Everything was done quietly. As soon as it was found it was carried to the end of the pier. Inside the box, by carefully listening you could hear the ticking of a piece of clock work. A rope was fastened about it and it was carefully submerged in the water. When Superintendent Murray arrived with two assistants he found the men carefully keeping the box submerged. If the box had got on board the Umbria and exploded it would have torn the bottom out of the ship.
