The Fate of "Charlie Boreford." Mr. George Leyton, the popular actor-vocalist, who recently pointed out the King to grant the Crimean and Indian Mutiny veterans a special view of the coronation procession, has been instrumental in causing something like $25,000 to be distributed amongst the old soldiers. His philanthropic efforts are warmly supported, amongst others, by Lord Charles Boreford, who also takes a great interest in boy scouts. He told Mr. Leyton the other day of an amusing experience which befell him recently at the hands of some small patrols. The Portsmouth corps was founded by Lord Charles, who lately decided to personally test their ideas regarding scouting. Driving over the Portsmouth hills, where the youngsters were engaged in manoeuvres, his motor-car was smartly confronted by three youths, who exclaimed in chorus, "We take you prisoner in chorus. We take you prisoner in chorus, Lord Charles!" "Well, what are you going to do with me, now that you have got me?" inquired the distinguished captive. There was a brief pause, after which one of the lads replied, in a grave tone, "H'm! Well, when the gov'nor comes back, I 'spects we shall shoot yer, sir!"

ORANGEMEN MET. The Lindsay District Loyal Orange Lodge will attend the big twelfth of July celebration at Cobourg this year. This was decided at a special meeting held last Saturday.

HELD THE POSE.

The Bridgeport Model Even Held His Breathing Apparatus. Sir Luke Fildes, who has been commissioned by the County of Surrey, England, to paint a copy of his portrait of Edward VII. in Buckingham Palace for a county memorial to the late King, is one of the favorite painters of royalty, and has done splendid portraits not only of the late King Edward but Queen Alexandra and the present King and Queen.

Sir Luke also has a good story of a rustic whom he employed as a model for the bridegroom in "The Village Wedding." Soon after the drawing began, the artist noticed that his model became very pale. He made him rest, and presently work was resumed. The model soon became more ghastly than ever.

"You don't seem well," said Sir Luke. "I'm right, sir," answered the model, "only for holding me breath so long. The poor rustic imagined it was necessary for the portrait to be taken, that he should hold his breath the while!"

The picture was painted for Mr. (afterwards Sir) Henry Tate, and Sir Luke had thought over the subject for several years before he made a start, although eventually it proved the quickest painted picture he had ever done.

Courage in the Weaker Sex. In high police circles woman's trait of courage that exceeds her physical strength is regarded as no new manifestation in the proverbially weaker sex.

"Ever since I became associated with police work," said one experienced officer, "I have noticed that women seemed always ready to help any one in apparent difficulties. Perhaps because they are weak themselves they are disposed readily to help the weaker side without thought of consequences to themselves."

A highly interesting explanation of this unthought-of bravery in women was vouchsafed by J. W. Slaughter, the eminent English sociologist, who assigned female courage largely to the maternal instinct.

"Nothing on earth," he said, "can be more ferocious, more dangerous, and more courageous than the female animal defending her young. The maternal instinct in woman is in itself an inspiration to courage. You will never see a woman on the edge of a crowd taking the side of the upper class. Women, moreover, act more directly than men. They are more impulsive and less calculating."

"We are accustomed to think of women as afraid of this or that, but it is because they have not really had experience. Courage is, after all, a matter of experience. One is not afraid of things one is used to or knows how to deal with."

Fifty Years of Song. The approaching retirement of Mme. Albani recalls the prima donna's interesting confession that she began to sing before she began to walk. "I was a baby," she says, "I was remarkable for the note of my voice, if not for its quality. My parents recognized this, and at the age of four I began my musical studies. I have been singing ever since."

Mme. Albani will celebrate her fiftieth birthday in November next, and made her first appearance on the concert-platform when she was eight years of age. Her most cherished memories are those of her intimate friendship with Queen Victoria. The great singer was a frequent visitor to Buckingham Palace and Windsor, and was a welcome guest at the Kaiser once in Berlin he afterwards shook hands with her and said, "Good-bye. When you see her, give my love to grandmamma."

An All-British Lord Mayor. "When I got out of bed this morning I left behind me Irish linen sheets and Witney blankets. I went into the bathroom and used English soap and Irish towels. I dressed in Scotch hose and put on English-made boots, and went to breakfast supplied wholly with British produce. As far as I am concerned, everything I eat, drink, and wear comes from the British Empire. This is the interesting confession made a few days ago by Sir F. Vevey Strong, Lord Mayor of London, in connection with the movement for an all-British shopping week.

Family Records in the Peasage. The fact that the Marquis of Donegal has lately made his first platform appearance at the mature age of seven reminds one that he has been born the fifth birthday, yet were his father, the fifth marriage, alive today he would be within a few weeks of entering on his nineteenth year. The Duke of Devon, who has been born the eighth birthday, and his attainments his majority, while between the eldest daughter of the Earl of Abingdon—Lady Edmund Talbot—and his youngest—Lady Betty Bertie—there is an interval of nearly forty years.

A TOWN DOCTOR. The old question of a town doctor came up before the Council again last night and after some discussion the following committee were appointed to consider the same: The Mayor; Deputy-Reeve Dobson and Ald. Naylor, Horn and McCrae.

Daddy's Bedtime Story. YOUNGSTERS, said daddy one evening to Evelyn and Jack—and Jack and Evelyn face wore a very happy smile—"I know that you two are never easily and clear up your things nicely, so of course you can't be like the boy in this story." Evelyn laughed, for she is careful with her toys and her books and her sewing materials, but Jack hung his head.

There May Be An Election In August. Ottawa, May 26.—It is entirely expected that a general election will be held this summer, probably in the month of August, with the Liberal caucus which Sir W. Laurier attended before sailing England he told his followers

O'Lo & Mc. Cash and Mr. J. A. Gillo. Exciting A Mr. J. A. Gillogly, of the ward, had a very exciting experience, and one which he will long remember, last Tuesday afternoon he was driving in the vicinity of the village of Minden. He had driving in the neighborhood of the afternoon and was returning the village for the night when a fierce hail storm came up. It was about five-thirty and the storm of wind, rain and lightning and hail came up quickly and before Mr. Gillogly time to drive to any farm had the hail descended like piercing rows and it became impossible to see any distance ahead. He became frightened and made a dash down a hill and kept on. It was impossible to stop the car and Mr. Gillogly had no recourse than to get out of the car. While going down a Governor Charles S. Osborn, error of Michigan, appeared week before the finance committee of the United States Senate and in favor of reciprocity. At other things he said: "The great consideration after is that the United States is facturing in a large sense for world, and that it needs raw material to compete with other countries. We must not give a blow to the face always to the very negro from whom we can obtain our material of certain kinds." Senator Lodge called attention to the act recently passed by the
