Warden Jas Steel Has a New Auto

Warden James Steele, of Eldon, has purchased a new touring car, which will seat five people. The machine arrived last week and will be used by the Warden in connection with his county duties. By having this conveyance the county official can whisk the Reeves of the different municipalities from one point to another quicker than the railroads. It is an invaluable asset to the Warden on account of having so much road and bridge work to look after during the summer months.

The British Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary defended Ambassador Bryce against the attacks made on him in the Commons in relation to the reciprocity negotiations between Canada and the United States.

'Hick' Ellis, Slayer of 'Lew' Porter Behind Prison Bars in Lindsay Gaol

Arthur A. Ellis, the self-confessed murderer of his own brother-in-law, Louis Porter, both of Lutterworth township, was brought to the county jail at Lindsay this morning by Constable John Welsh, of Minden. "Heck," as the prisoner is familiarly known by back north, was handcuffed to the strong arm of the law and to all appearances was not in the least disturbed after his long, tiresome ride to Lindsay. The murder was committed on April 25th.

The station was crowded for an hour previous to the arrival of the train with citizens who were anxious to see the man who fired the fatal shots, which leaves a wife and five small children to mourn the loss of a husband and father, who at the time was returning to them with the proceeds of the chase, when he was felled by a fusillade of bullets.

The prisoner looked nervous and Chief of Police Chilton kept the crowd back to admit of the constable and his prisoner walking along the platform to the carriage which was in waiting. Ellis is not the big fuzzy-haired man we read about as he received a touch from a tonsorial artist apparently before coming up to Lindsay. He was dressed in very ordinary attire. A soft black hat, gray tweed coat, black worsted trousers with a six-inch roll at the bottom and heavy cowhide shoes. He is of slim build, fair complexion, light mustache and blue shifting eyes. He has a wolf-like appearance in his countenance and general make-up, and has every stamp of a person who would never forget a wrong committed upon him. He seemed anxious to get into the carriage and threw some wild stares at the crowd as they gathered around him, as he prepared to take his seat in the hack.

Chief Chilton joined the party and drove away to the jail with the Minden constable and his prisoner, while the crowd followed along the street all discussing the appearance of the prisoner and the nature of his crime.

AT THE JAIL.

Arriving at the stately castle on Victoria-ave., Chief Chilton, Constable Welch and Ellis were met by Governor Balfour and a Warden reporter. Ellis walked with a rather shiftless plowman's stride from the cab to the stone jug, and as he was piloted down the corridor to the Governor's private office it was quite apparent that he was laboring under a heavy nervous strain. His keen, searching eyes roamed quickly all around the place, furtive glances swept over the interior, while his ears seemed to hear every sound that came from the adjoining cells, where two or three prisoners were lounging.

After arriving in the Governor's office, Constable Welch produced a key for the hand cuffs and they were taken off Ellis' wrist, while "Heck" was given a cushioned seat. As he sat down and Governor Balfour produced his long entry book, and began to ask him questions, the prisoner seemed to regain perfect self control, answering the questions in a perfectly straightforward manner and without the least hesitation. "Heck" is possessed of a high-pitched voice, his enunciation is clear and distinct, and language fairly good.

HAD NO RELIGION.
Governor Balfour—"What town-marked stories. The reporter does ship do you live in?"

Arthur Ellis—"In the Township of Lutterworth."

"What is your occupation?"
"A farmer."

"What is your nationality?"
"A Canadian."

"What is your religion?"
"I have no religion," replied Ellis. Governor Balfour—"Yes, but what church did your parents attend?"

"They were members of the Baptist church, but although I attended the Baptist church I was not a member."

"How old are you?"
"Thirty-six years."

"Are you temperate or intemperate?"
"Temperate, I have never used tobacco or whisky."

"Were you ever committed to jail before?"
"No, sir."

READ RELIGIOUS BOOKS.
At this stage Chief Chilton and Turnkey Ashman made a thorough search of the prisoner's clothes, which were quite scanty, but the search revealed the fact that Ellis appeared to be of a religious turn of mind. Two small books were found, which at once caught the attention of the Warden man. They were entitled, "Tales of Adventure from the Old Book," and "Probable Sons." Both books contained several short Biblical stories and the books were well thumb-marked showing evidence of having been much read.

Among the short stories therein, three in particular arrested the attention of Governor Balfour, namely: "David and Goliath," "The Prodigal Son" and "How the Jail Bird turned out to be a Bird of Paradise."

DAVID AND GOLIATH.
As the story of "David and Goliath" presented itself to the reporter, the scribe could not help drawing a mind picture of the tragedy which occurred on the Cameron Road near Minden on Thursday night, the 25th, when Ellis sent the three bullets into the body of his brother-in-law, "Lew" Porter. Porter was a man of large frame, husky and powerful, and as Constable Welch remarked, "the best shot in the country;" verily he was a towering Goliath when compared to the puny Ellis. Ellis is of small stature, very slender, with very narrow shoulders and smaller hips. His clothes hang loosely from his shoulders like a night robe, while the pantaloons (which were pulled up high to the boot tops) flap around his spindly legs. Topping his curly cluster of hair he wore a large wide-brimmed fedora. He, as compared to Porter, the Goliath, was truly a diminutive David. How like the story, which Ellis had been reading, and which was apparently running through his mind. The puny David sallied forth in the dusk of evening and slew the giant Goliath.

"THE PRODIGAL SON."
There are very few people, no matter in what part of the civilized world they may be residing, who have not either heard or read the story of the prodigal son. Ellis had heard of the story while attending the Baptist church, and he also apparently was reading the story for his own enjoyment and instruction. It was one of the thumb-not wish to reflect on the prisoner, nor compare him to the Prodigal Son, but it is just possible that the story, with all its sad sides, when the favored son, becoming dissatisfied, left his father's roof to seek a living in other lands, and the accompanying bright side, when after drinking of the deepest cup of sin, the wearied prodigal returned and was welcomed with outstretched arms by a kind father, may have taken a strong hold of Arthur A. Ellis, who in a letter to his father, (in which he confessed to the sad tragedy), asks that father to forgive a wayward son, and look after his affairs.

"A BIRD OF PARADISE."
Then comes the third story, "How the Jail Bird Turned out to be a Bird of Paradise." This story may not be quite so familiar to the average citizen, but one can easily imagine the trend of the story, and how it would appeal to a person confined within the unadorned walls of a prison—"How the Jail Bird Turned out to be a Bird of Paradise." "Heck" Ellis has stated, and still emphatically claims that he shot in self defence, and that will be his plea before a band of jurors. Who knows the trend of his thoughts as he perused the contents of the above short story? Does he for an instant liken himself to the hero in the above story?

HAD SUM OF MONEY.
Continuing the search through Ellis' clothes the constable found ten cents in one pocket and the sum of $7.25 rolled up in a home-made leather wallet of much depth. A letter or two and some notes were found in another pocket.

In company with Turnkey Ashman and Governor Balfour, Ellis was then taken to his cell, there to await the orders of the Crown Attorney and the Sheriff, who will decide whether or not Ellis must be placed in a cell all by himself, with no other prisoners in the corridor. At present he will have the company of two fellow unfortunates.

A KIND GOVERNOR.

Until after his trial Ellis will be allowed to wear his own suit of clothes, which consists of a weather-beaten, sunburned gray coat, with vest to match; a dark shirt with light white stripe; dark trousers, long pointed boots and wide black fedora hat. As he entered his corridor Governor Balfour patted Ellis gently on the shoulder and informed him that he would find jolly company in the corridor and that he would be used right, and Ellis disappeared behind the strong iron doors to appear again probably at the fall assizes.

There are seven other prisoners at the present time in the jail, although a couple of them will soon get their release. They receive good treatment, are given good prison meals, have certain hours for exercise in the large yard, where they play ball, run races, skip or jump, and "Heck" Ellis will receive like privileges unless otherwise ordered by the Sheriff or Crown Attorney.

FOUR MURDER PRISONERS

In conversation with Constable Welch, of Minden, who brought Ellis to Lindsay, that minion of the law stated that during his 25 years as constable of Minden, Ellis made the fourth man that he (Welch) has brought to the county jail at Lindsay on the charge of murder. He informed the Warden man that Ellis, he thought, would be a very quiet prisoner and would not create any disturbance or create any harm. While lodged in the jail at Minden, Constable Welch slept in the same quarters at night, but left the prisoner alone at intervals during the day. He found him to be very quiet and somewhat talkative. Constable Welch described over again how the shooting took place, stating that Ellis had confessed firing the three shots. The case created considerable excitement throughout the entire country roundabout and the inquest was largely attended by curious people, the dead man as well as the prisoner being exceedingly well known.

Bobcaygeon, May 6. — Miss Dickson, of Penelon Falls, who has been a missionary in China for the past six or seven years, gave an excellent address on her work among the Chinese during her sojourn among that people. From what we learn of the address Miss Dickson gave her heart into the great work. She was well and favorably known here, having spent his whole life in this section of Mariposa. An energetic and successful farmer he engaged in his vocation until last fall when he sold his farm, stock and implements and retired from active life, taking up his residence in Sunderland. A consistent member of St. Andrew's church and a member of the Senior Adult Class, he was most faithful in his attendance when his health would allow.

The funeral took place on Saturday and was largely attended by his many friends. Interment in the McNeil cemetery. A widow and one daughter, one brother and one sister are left to mourn his loss and have the sympathy of all in their sad bereavement.

Mrs. Eliza Thompson was in town Thursday attending the funeral of Mr. James Thompson.

There was a meeting of the patrons of Bobcaygeon Cheese Factory in the Council Chamber, town hall, Saturday to discuss the paying by test for this season. On account of farmers generally being very busy, at spring work not very many attended and no action was taken. Mr. M. J. Lewis, and D. C. Cameron attended the meeting.
