45th Regiment in Camp.

The 45th Regiment made a fine appearance as the boys of the eight companies started for camp in Cobourg, Monday morning via G. T. R. Col. R. H. Sylvester was justly proud of the showing the regiment made as the companies formed in the park for inspection.

This regiment was the best in last year's camp, and it is safe to say that this year it will take higher rank than previously.

The marching was very creditable as the boys marched to the depot at "slope arms" to the strains of "Annie Laurie" played by the Sylvester band which belongs to the regiment, and accompanied the corps to camp. The boys will doubtless come back looking like regulars after two weeks camp training.

HANDLING MONEY.

It is no temptation to the Seasoned Bank Teller.

"Money? Don't the sight of so much of it make me hungry for it? Not at all. To tell the truth, it is like so much mud to me."

Side spoke a teller in a Denver bank. He was talking to a young man outside the cage. On the counter were heaped piles of gold and silver coin and bunches of paper money.

"I'm sure I couldn't stand the constant temptation to appropriate it for my own use," said the man outside.

"Yes, you could," replied the teller. "You could easily after being in here a week. For the first few days the money would look pretty good to you, and you'd have to use your will power to keep away from it, but after a week or so it doesn't seem the money. It seems like merely an article you deal in, just as potatoes seem to the grocer. There isn't a sixty dollar a month bank clerk in a thousand who thinks of stealing the money he handles unless he is in debt and is being crowded for funds. To the bank employee who has his debts paid and has enough to keep from thinking of an urgent need for cash money has no value. Handling money is just like eating to a teller.

As long as he has enough food in his stomach he has no desire for more and even a big, fine, juicy steak has no temptation for him. But let him get good and hungry, and he'll covet that steak. The only way for a man who handles money in a bank to be free from the temptation to appropriate it is to keep out of debt and not develop any urgent and expensive ambitions."

BUNDLE HANDKERCHIEFS.

Introduced into New England by the Salem Sea Captain.

Housewives of today would not know what was meant by the bundle handkerchiefs, yet 100 years ago the woman who did not have a pile of them neatly folded and ironed and laid away in smooth piles in a drawer of one of the capacious closets which were then built into houses was considered a poor housekeeper. The bundle handkerchiefs were first introduced by the Salem sea captain. It was brought from abroad with choice things, such as sandalwood, guava jelly and amber beads.

These imported were the white India silk and were used to wrap the "best cap" box when ladies went out to spend the afternoon. These of course make were of squares of calico or muslin and used for everyday bundles. When ladies went visiting to other towns their piles of dainty, handmade underware were wrapped in fine lawn or linen handkerchiefs sweet with lavender and orris. A new gown always came home from the dressmaker's carefully pinned in a thin, worn and much used madras handkerchief.

No Salem infant was considered to have been properly introduced to society till it had dangled in a bundle handkerchief from a pair of steelyard scales.

When the servants went to the bakery they carried a couple of coarse blue checked bundle handkerchiefs, and in one was wrapped the pot of beans, and in the other was wrapped the brown bread.

Louisa Alcott's Education. In 1846 Mrs. Abbott, with some family property, bought the house known now as the Wayside, since Hawthorne bought and renamed it in 1852, says F. B. Sanborn in the Critic. The Alcotts had called it Hillside and had passed pleasant childhood years there. Louisa's story telling gift was developed here, and in the barn her earliest plays were acted by herself and her sisters and schoolmates. In her earlier years at Concord she had been for a short time a pupil of Henry Thoreau and still earlier of her father's Boston school. Her other education came irregularly from her parents, from a temporary governess and sometimes from town schools, but she always missed the careful education that most of the Concord girls had, either in public or in private schools.

Hissing "Carmen." One of the most popular operas of the present day, "Carmen" underwent an unfortunate experience, but achieved success too late, alas, to console the disappointed composer, whose death was accelerated, it is said, by the ill reception accorded to his chef d'oeuvre. "Carmen" was, in fact, actually hissed off the stage on its first performance in Paris in 1875, and poor Bizet died shortly after, unable to foresee the great success in store for his latest and best work, whose stirring music so admirably fits the thrilling Spanish libretto it illustrates.

The Same Idea. It is recorded that Napoleon, when asked to summarize the art of war, answered briefly, "The art of war consists in being strongest at a given point at a given time." This answer was terse and true, but that born but untaught fighter, General Forrest, expressed the same idea, yet more briefly and forcefully. When the grim old Confederate was asked how to win in battle he replied, "Get that rust with the mostest men."

Where They Met. Angry Wife (after a quarrel)—Seems to me we've been married about a hundred years. I can't even remember when or where we first met. Husband (emphatically)—I can. It was at a dinner party, and there were thirteen at table.—London Tit-Bits.

Nothing to Hope For. Cholly—I am poor, but very ambitious. Will you marry me? Mabel—Yes, I'll marry you. I'm not at all ambitious myself.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

ENTERPRISING BOTANISTS.

Effects of the Great Revival of the Sixteenth Century. In the great literary and scientific revival that took place in the sixteenth century botany made a fresh departure. The discovery of America had brought a vast number of new plants to Europe, and their study doubtless stimulated the more complete study of those of the old world. The great commercial activity of the century must also have had its influence. Ships were bringing new products from all parts and among these plants were not forgotten. But from whatever cause it arose, the great impulse and renewed activity in the discovery and study of plants was quite remarkable. They produced a large body of students, whose labors were unwearied, and a wonderful amount of botanical literature.

Among those students were such men as Linnæus, L'Obel, Caspar and John Bauhin, Conrad Gessner, Franz Leonhard, Fuchs, Prosper Alpinus, Dodoneo and many others. And these men were not stay at home botanical students. They were great travelers, whose delight was to collect and examine plants in their native countries. Caspar Bauhin collected them in Germany, France and Italy with great labor and danger ("quod præcipuum erat, plantæ locis natalibus inspicendo nullis laboribus, nullis molestiis, nullis sumptibus peperimus"); L'Obel collected them in Spain, Hungary and Bohemia; Dodoneo searched Mount Pilatus and the Jura; Prosper Alpinus, Dodoneo and many others. And these men were not stay at home botanical students. They were great travelers, whose delight was to collect and examine plants in their native countries. Caspar Bauhin collected them in Germany, France and Italy with great labor and danger ("quod præcipuum erat, plantæ locis natalibus inspicendo nullis laboribus, nullis molestiis, nullis sumptibus peperimus"); L'Obel collected them in Spain, Hungary and Bohemia; Dodoneo searched Mount Pilatus and the Jura; Prosper Alpinus, Dodoneo and many others. Pair Rosamund's Bower. Henry III's chief garden was at Woodstock, but he was not the originator of it, as there had been a garden there in the time of the second Henry. In it was the labyrinth which concealed the "bower" made famous by the tragic fate of the fair Rosamund. A halo of romance and mystery hangs around this hiding place, but in reality labyrinths were by no means uncommon. There is evidence of the existence of labyrinths in very early times, and they presumably suggested the maze of more modern date. The first labyrinths were winding paths cut in the ground, and the survival of them is still traceable in several places in England. Of these Saffron Walden, with its encircling ditch, is the most striking example. Camden describes one existing in his time in Dorsetshire, which went by the name of Troy town or Julian's bower.—"A History of Gardening in England."

Florida's Indian War. Osceola's Half Breed Wife, Brought About the Conflict. In 1835 a young woman, with a party of Indians visiting Fort King, was seized and carried off as a fugitive slave on the ground that her mother was an escaped slave who had taken refuge with the Indians many years before. That her father was an Indian and she had been raised in an Indian did not count for anything. Legal claim of ownership in the mother embraced her also. That was law at the time.

Naturally the young husband, untutored savage that he was, could not recognize its justice. Proving both eloquent and brave, he soon had every Indian in Florida of the warpath, nor was it long before his name, Osceola, was heard with terror in the exposed white settlements. There ensued a war, long, costly and bloody, out of all proportion to the number engaged. It is probable the Indians did not number 1500 warriors, but in the four years required to conquer them 1500 white lives were sacrificed.

With the Indians it was a battle a contest. They had many weapons to array, which lost nothing in the fervid coloring of Osceola's eloquence. Defeat meant transportation to an unknown country far toward the setting sun. THE AMERICAN PERIL: New Older Countries View the Rise of the United States. The American peril? Is the great American nation one of those mighty empires which have risen in the world now and then, dwarfing all other empires of society? This question is of immense import to Europe. Within the last few years an enormous literature has grown up around the subject. Among modern sociologists none speaks with greater authority than Guglielmo Ferrero.

Long and scientifically he has studied our country; his opinion of the present, his forecast of the future, represent the best European thought upon the destinies of the United States. To many it will seem an exaggeration of our greatness; to others it will show an undue distrust of democracy; but, in any case, it is the word of a scientific historian—of a man who is looking for the truth. Neither wealth nor science can change the laws that govern the growth of nations. For Signor Ferrero the United States stands today in the position of the Roman Empire in the days of Augustus. He pictures an America which is bound to go the Roman way, increasing in power, draining insensate wealth from that orient which enriched Rome, forced in spite of hereditary democratic ideals to make herself strong by land and sea in order to hold its own and guard its world wide trading flag, overshadowing the huge modern world as Rome did the little civilization of the Mediterranean.

After calm reflection and in a cold, scientific way, the thinkers and statesmen of old Europe predict for the new world this visionary future, and brooding over it they seem to be in the very shadow of the peril. The practical American, as he drops from the tail end of a street car and goes about his business, may not realize that Europe sees in him the terrible fellow who is to go swagging down the way of the world, taking the wall of every one, in the good old Roman fashion; but so it is. He is—even when he wheels the baby abroad—an eighty-millionth part of the great American peril, in which fact he may find a certain measure of satisfaction.—Vance Thompson in Munsey's.

Caricaturists in depicting a German are in the habit of putting a big pipe in his mouth. The pipe is national indeed, but the Germans as a nation are far from being the greatest smokers. They do not smoke more than Frenchmen, Russians, Swedes or Hungarians. The men of the United States and the
