Modern Methods for Orchardist

A few years ago it was found that orchard insects and pests were becoming so intensely numerous that the orchards were dying out, and the apples which were produced were unfit to ship and as a result apples buyers found that only a few of the more progressive farmers would give their orchards attention. Buyers, therefore, proceeded to lease many of the neglected orchards throughout the country for a term of years, and undertake themselves to do the prinning and cultivation. Flavelles Ltd., of Lindsay, leased three large orchards in this vicinity and during the last week or so have had men busily engaged spraying the trees. These orchards, as the result of care, it was plainly seen, would pack 80 per cent. of grade No. 1, whereas formerly, they could not get more than 40 per cent. of this grade. It was, moreover, plainly shown that spraying, fertilization and cultivation and modern methods of care was not an expense, but a paying imvestment.

Somewhere among Brady's papers, I'll bet my life, there is a letter or a check strip or something. There always is something, and I'm counting on that young detective, Crane, whom I've got in Brady's office, to get it."

It's futile to explain-hopelessly futile-till we can present some proof that Granger did of his own volition certify that check. Oh, I'll trust in Crane a little longer."

There was silence in the room for a few moments, while Temple smoked, Craven tugged at his gray mustache in a quandary, and Cato slept. "What did you say?" asked Craven anxiously, looking over his glasses.

"I did not say." "I want you to. Confound it, you don't take life seriously enough."

"You have perhaps observed that I don't make the mistake of doing so. In some matters I hardly think I am grown up. I am, for example, quite content to remain a boy so far as the muddles of life are concerned, continuing with youthful cheerfulness to translate de profundis clamavi into 'Out of the depths I have clams,' eh, Craven?-just as I did when I held the fort at the foot of the lowest form in Latin."

The grim lawyer crossed over to lay his hand with almost a woman's tenderness on the big shoulder of his friend, and his voice broke with a suspicion of huskiness as he muttered: "Steady, old man, steady, We'll kick clear of it all yet."

When Temple spoke again it was his customary even tone: "Craven, it seems to me that Granger certified that check he didn't

"Of course it was a noble and high minded supposition on your part," grinned the bachelor, "and, having the marriage germ in your system, it was to be expected. You haven't a wife, so you naturally fancy the money would be spent on one. Granger has a wife. He naturally spends it on somebody else. Each man turns to the thing he doesn't possess."

Temple nodded again. "Well, when you go into town on Monday, get the still hunt started for the woman, will you, old man?"

"Sure, you bet your life. But," he called back over his shoulder, as he was leaving the room, "we won't hunt for her in Westfield, N. J., where Granger's home is; we'll hunt for her in West Forty-third street, New York."

"And this wife of Granger's," murmured Temple, left to himself, "I suppose she has faith in him; they all have. I dare say it's she who's working behind this plan to get his pardon; doubtless she's somewhere now, praying for him, waiting for him to come back to her vindicated, an honest man. And I? Well, I'm fighting to prove his conviction just, and there you are! Queer little muddle it is, after all, this play of life. I wonder sometimes if the great Eye mustn't get tired of it and the great Ear wearled of it. I wonder"-

A light, firm knock at the door caused Temple to wake from his reverie. His new secretary entered, ready for Usually, however, she succeeded in recapturing herself, in beating back the thoughts which, like troops on a doubtful field, appeared to be carrying her into the ambushes and strongholds of an enemy; she was impatient and scornful of them.

As to Temple himself, maybe he didn't know it, but already he was in the way to fall as completely in love "So?" said Temple serenely, lifting with his new secretary as Amadis of his eyebrows in that quizzical way of Gaul or Aucassin of Beaucaire or any his. Life partnership with such women promised not gratifica-tions merely, but satisfactions.

Life partnership and love! They were thoughts now neither for noon nor her presence. With a man like Burton Temple everything had its time and place. He must clear his good name first. That was the imperative duty on hand.

As the result of the gradual recognition of the state of his own feelings, there had come about increased activity in his work against Granger. The reward to Crane, should be succeed in securing some scrap of evidence from Brady, had been raised to $25,000. The detective bureau had been offered a fabulous sum for proof that Granger had invested any large amount of money; that he had been a big purchaser of stock in any company, or that he was tangled up with some woman besides his wife. No means that a daring, shrewd fighter could use had been overlooked.

"THE FATHER OF HER BOYS." RS. MASON," sighed Anna wearily one day. "Here I've been for nearly a month and I've found out nothing. I don't believe I ever will find out anything of myself against Mr. Temple." The housekeeper started and eyed ber curiously. "Even if you don't find out anything. dearie," she said stolidly, "you may be pretty certain that your husband will be set free. Mr. Temple may be indicted now any day, and everybody, all the papers, say the circumstantial evidence is so strong that he must be convicted. He's surely guilty." Mrs. Mason, as all who knew her were aware, once having formed an opinion.

"I don't want Robert cleared on cir cumstantial evidence," protested Anna. That's not what I'm making this fight for. I know what public opinion is. It's fickle; it cries 'Hosannah!' on Palm Sunday; it cries 'Crucify!' on Good Friday. I know the sway of the press can make or unmake a man. Just now it's making Robert and breaking Mr. Temple, but after the clamor will come doubt. I want the proof of Robert's innocence in my own hands. I don't want any sentimental vindication for the father of my boys." The father of her boys! Yes, it had come to be just that. Unconsciously she had said it. To keep berself to her duty she had fallen back on that last reserve of a woman's strength, her mother love.

And how hungry she was growing for them, these boys of hers! "Oh, I need them," she exclaimed in a sudden outburst-"I need them! ## OF EVER GETTING WELL

Mr. Jacob E. Herr, 111 Grange St., Stratford, Ont., writes:- "Ten years ago I suffered with a very peculiar disease. I would go to bed feeling as well as could be, and after sleeping for five hours I would wake with a severe pain in my back, then moving into my side and breast. The pain was so terrible ! could not lie in my bed, and usually had to sit until morning with a pillow propped up behind my back. With all my pain I would go to work, and after working up to about 10 o'clock the pain would leave me entirely. The same thing would happen the next night, and every night for two years. I tried four different doctors. but none of them did me any good. tried a great many patent medicines, but all of no avail. I gave up all hopes of ever getting well. A friend persuaded me to try Milburn's heart and Nerve Pills. I bought four boxes, and after using the first one I felt a change for the better, and after using three boxes I could sleep all night. The pains were gone, and I was completely cured.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
