

KITCHENER HONORED.

King Edward VII. Personally Compliments the Hero.

IS ACCLAIMED BY VAST CROWDS

Southampton and London Give Him the Greatest Welcome of Many Remarkable South African War Welcomes—How He Received the Homage of Prince and Peasant—His Genial Modesty.

London, July 14.—Lord Kitchener, on arrival at Buckingham Palace, Saturday, was speedily conducted to the King's sick chamber, and His Majesty, from his couch, extended a warm welcome to him and personally expressed his thanks for the termination of hostilities. The King then presented Lord Kitchener with the decoration of the New Order of Merit. The General next saw the Queen, after which he drove to Lord Roberts' residence, in Portland Place. Lord Kitchener will visit Mr. Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, today.

Tolerance in His Smile.

There never was a more unassuming hero than Londoners enthusiastically welcomed Saturday when they opened their arms to Lord Kitchener.

He reciprocated the welcome with the grim satisfaction characteristic of the man. He accepted the addresses and the compliments of royalties and the wild applause of the crowds with a suspicion of tolerance in his smile. He went about the hard day's work as if he were performing an act of duty and with good-humored determination.

The reception accorded him by the people had that touch of spontaneity without which popular acclamation lacks the ring of genuineness, but it left this strong, still man almost unmoved.

At Southampton he bore with the tedious orations of self-important corporations not without symptoms of impatience, and he replied to their long-winded panegyrics in two sentences.

Every time he spoke publicly he displayed unmistakable signs of nervousness, but his powerful self-control never deserted him.

His manner to every one from the Prince of Wales and Earl Roberts to the enthusiastic railroad porter who held out his hand for a shake (that was cordially given), was the same.

General—Last Looked Vulgar.

He wore a neat unornamented khaki uniform. As he stepped out of the train at Paddington Station he towered above everybody, and his smart, business-like dress made the brilliant scarlet uniforms of the general staff look vulgar and artificial.

The Prince of Wales greeted him with unaccustomed animation, grasping his right hand warmly, and at the same time laying the other hand upon Lord Kitchener's arm.

Lord Kitchener saluted him with the same tolerant smile he bestowed on everybody else. There was no effusiveness, still less any air of superiority but a genial modesty of demeanor infinitely attractive.

His speaking voice is rich, full and indeed melodious. His speeches brief almost curt in form, still tinged with homesick feeling.

He has grown stouter than the gaunt shadow he was when he returned from the Sudan, but he still retains a spare, soldierly figure and the precision of movement of a man whose every act is guided by system and method.

The Long and the Short of It.

Lord Robert's head reached only about three buttons above Lord Kitchener's belt. They presented a striking contrast as Lord Kitchener, with his right hand raised against his peaked cap in formal salute, advanced to meet his chief, who had both hands outstretched in welcome.

As Lord Kitchener drove through the cheering throngs to St. James' Palace, he glanced around half-amusedly as he bowed.

His attitude throughout, in the face of demonstrations of admiration calculated to turn the head of any man, was suggestive of agreeable but subdued surprise.

Before he visited the King and the Queen, Lord Kitchener had changed his uniform and undergone a drastic process of fumigation, lest he might carry smallpox—which appeared on the steamship which brought him from Cape Town to Southampton—to the already afflicted royal palace.

But he bore everything with cheerful resignation and spoke everywhere in the fewest words possible.

ARRIVAL AT SOUTHAMPTON.

South African Hero Accorded a Magnificent Welcome.

Southampton, July 14.—The Pacific Steam Navigation Company's steamer Orotava, which left Cape Town June 23, with Lord Kitchener and staff on board, arrived here at half-past eight o'clock Saturday morning. Owing to the fact that Major Gordon, who also was a passenger on the steamer had been stricken with smallpox, Lord Kitchener and his staff only were allowed to land. The Orotava has been placed in quarantine.

Lord Kitchener, from South Africa, landed at 9.15 a.m. He was accorded a magnificent welcome from a huge throng of people. After a brief official reception at the docks, the General was driven through the decorated streets to Hartley Hall where he received an address from the Chamber of Commerce.

In reply, Lord Kitchener declared that whatever success had been achieved was due to the rank and file of the army. He thanked those who had looked after the friends and relatives of those left behind in South Africa.

Lord Kitchener reached London at 12.43 p.m. His progress through the metropolis after three years' absence at the Boer war was one of the most memorable of the many remarkable of the past three years. The platform at Paddington station was crowded with distinguished personages, including Indian princes in full uniform and many ladies in beautiful summer dresses. The Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, who is now very infirm, Lord Roberts, the Commander-in-Chief; Lord Lansdowne, the Foreign Secretary; Mr. Brodrick, the War Secretary; the Duchess of Somerset, Lady Roberts, Lady French, Major-General Sir Francis R. Wingate, who succeeded Kitchener as Sirdar of the Egyptian army and Governor-General of the Sudan; and Major-General Slatin Pasha, British Inspector-General of the Sudan, were among those who assembled to meet the general.

B. J. GOUGH'S ROUSING RIDDANCE AT RATTLED PRICES

The headings are clear enough. Nothing reserved. Nothing restricted. The backward season has forced our hand. The middle week of July has probably never seen such rentless ripping of prices as we make now. It is quite extraordinary to have the chance of picking up in season what you want and what you will from the Greatest Clothing Stock in Lindsay, and get the choicest and every way best goods made at practically the cost of making.

Don't make any difference which way the goods came to us. They may come through credit failures, forced sales, or overstocks. The loss of the unfortunate will be your gain. The goods are just as desirable as if they came fresh from the brand new piles of the manufacturers.

A Monster Parade of Extra Bargains

Tremendous Garment Sacrifices in MEN'S and BOYS' WEAR. A Reckless Slashing of Prices and Total Disregard of Values. We are bound to dispose of Summer Stocks at once if taking Terrific Losses will accomplish it.

Gough Has a Huge Nerve

ALL GOODS SOLD UNDER THE MOST LIBERAL GUARANTEE: Select anything you desire, have it delivered to your home, and if next day you are not fully satisfied it is better value than any similar article you can purchase for one-third more than our price, we will return you your money and take the article you have purchased back.

Everybody Will be Coming

This the greatest of all sales. Coal is scarce, wood is up, rents are high, wages have been advancing, and combinations among the big manufacturers threaten to shove up the prices of wearing apparel. Isn't this your chance? Don't your best intelligence advise you what to do when such reduced prices as these are within your grasp. And, in vigorous pursuance of our old-time policy to carry nothing over from season to season we are going to have a "Rousing Riddance" that will make the last 45 days of July the Great Clothing Event of the hour.

PUBLIC LIBRARY MAY NOT ASK MR. CARNEGIE FOR MORE MONEY

Estimates will be Got on Two Sizes of Buildings.

The Public Library Board met on Monday night. A formal demand was made on council for the submission of a by-law for $2000 to purchase a library building site. It was decided not to ask Mr. Carnegie for any more money at present. The plans for a building smaller than the one for which the first plans were made, were examined and specifications of both will be got and tenders called for. The chief discussion turned on whether Mr. Carnegie should be asked for more money, and was as follows:

Rev. J. W. Macmillan—I very earnestly feel that we should not ask Mr. Carnegie for any more money. There are two ways of regarding him—you may think of him as a brigand whose money is blood money that ought not to be touched. That is how some labor organizations regard him. You may on the other hand regard him as a brigand who is giving up his spoil, and from whom we should get all we can. Regarding him in that light we should not take his money as a gift at all but at the point of a pistol. We have not regarded him in that way. He is a rich man and has a right to do as he pleases with his money. He has generously given us $10,000. If we had raised that sum by our own subscription, we should have made it as we need. I am opposed to going back to Mr. Carnegie for more. I hope you have seen the very sensible article in the Globe on that subject. It had the right ring. It says that it is beneath the dignity of Canadians and something less than a self-respecting thing to go back the second time. We should raise the balance ourselves if it is needed. I am not rich but I should prefer to give my share rather than asking Mr. Carnegie for more. Let us raise it ourselves or else cut the coat according to the cloth and build with what we have.

Mr. Moore—That is what we should do. Mr. Carnegie has done well for us. He got his money as honestly as others who have made millions. I was not in favor of accepting his money at all; but since it has been done, we should not overdo it. The amount already received requires just the sum from the town each year that our income is. We could not raise $2000 or $3000 here in town.

Mr. W. Flavell—I feel sensitive about asking for more; but I am willing to over-ride that feeling. Mr. Hardy has gone to the trouble of getting plans for an ideal library. More money is needed to build it, and we should not stop short. To Mr. Carnegie $100,000 is the same as $10,000. He cares only that the conditions shall be fulfilled and his purpose met.

Rev. J. W. Macmillan—The proportions of the building proposed are very large. They can very well be reduced.

Mr. Steers—Putting myself in Mr. Carnegie's shoes—what I should do of course be very glad to do—it seems to me that if I saw that for the sake of $2000 or $3000 my gift would be marred or be less effective than it should be, I should be glad to be told of it. Hence I do not object to asking Mr. Carnegie for more.

Mr. Hardy—Mr. Carnegie is devoting the rest of his life to giving away his money, and providing communities with reading facilities. The amount is no object.

Mr. Macmillan—There are many rich men; but we do not ask them for money. We cannot rid ourselves as a board, of our humanity and we must not go beyond our self respect in this matter. Mr. Carnegie will wonder when told that $10,000 will not build a library for 8000 people.

Mr. Hardy—The $8000 will give something.

Mr. Steers—I doubt it.

Mr. Hardy—The amount we ask is nothing to Mr. Carnegie.

Rev. Mr. Macmillan—Even if that is so, we might better ask for $2000 for Oakwood or somewhere else.

Mr. Flavell—Our fire hall is a fine building of which we are proud. Appearance is of account.

Rev. Mr. Macmillan—I should like to see half a million spent in an art gallery in Lindsay, but I think we can have a smaller library building than the one spoken of and yet meet the requirements of this town. In- stead of one 65 by 63 feet make one 60 by 60. It will be big enough. Let us get the specifications on buildings of both sizes and call for tenders and not ask Mr. Carnegie for more money at present.

That was decided upon.
