The O'Reilly Case

Editor Watchman-Warder,
Sir,—Concerning the trial of my boy, Wm. O'Reilly, I wish to make known a few facts. After Chief Nevison, on May 23rd, unknown to me, brought the boy from his aunt's and locked him up he never made the fact known to me although the boy asked him to do it. When I learned where he was I asked Mr. Nevison on Monday following why he had not told me of it and he replied that Magistrate Steers would not allow him. Also on Saturday night I went to Mr. Steers and asked about seeing the boy and he said that it would be necessary to get a permit from the Sheriff. On Monday I saw him by merely going to the goal and asking to do so. Did Mr. Steers tell me what he did knowingly, or is he still in such ignorance of the proceedings under such circumstances that he knew no better?
Mr. Nevison too, saw fit to put the boy's age at 16 years although the boy told him he was only a few months over 15 years. Is the idea of Magistrate Steers and Chief Nevison "convict if you can", or is it "do justice if you can"?
Then on June 12th when I spoke to Mr. Nevison about letting me see the boy and his reasons for so doing he called me a liar in plain words. If the keeper of the peace can and does use such language in public what must we expect from the people at large?
Yours truly,
PATRICK O'REILLY,
Lindsay, June 17, '03.

WESLEY TO ROMAN CATHOLICS

The goodwill that John Wesley bore those who differed from him is strikingly exemplified by the following words addressed to Roman Catholics:
"In the name then, and in the strength of God, let us resolve, first, not to hurt one another; to do nothing unkind or unfriendly to each other; nothing which we would not have done to ourselves. Rather

THE MODERN SALESMAN.

He Realizes the Necessity For Correct Dress In Business.
It has become the unwritten but none the less stringent law that young men shall dress well and neatly during business hours. In many of the largest banks and financial institutions none of the clerks is permitted to go coatless, and in the mercantile establishments where salesmen are employed "loud" attire is actually discouraged. The old time salesman gloried in his flamboyant cravats and shirts, his diamonds and his peculiar clothes. His capital in trade consisted of a flashy appearance, vulgar stories, a constitution that would stand intoxicating liquor and an unlimited amount of cheek. He did not have to know anything about the goods he sold, except in a general way. He slapped men on the back, took them out to dinner, got drunk with them and then booked their orders. The modern salesman is a well educated, neatly dressed gentleman who knows all about the goods he sells. He is never called upon to drink, he never needs to dine out, he trades on honor and brains, and his customers are men who only admire men who know as much as or more than they do about their business. Dress plays the most important part in the game of commerce, no less with the salesman than it does with the manufacturer, the mill man, the banker or the financial man. They all dress to impress their fellow men favorably.
—C. M. Connolly in Success.

Got the Oysters.

A captain of a Massachusetts regiment, stationed in Washington at the time of the civil war, was noted for his love of good things to eat and one day dispatched one of his soldiers, a man named Bailey, to Alexandria to get some fresh oysters, giving him instructions not to return without them. The man started, and no more was seen of him for nine days. The Washington Times prints the story of his return:
After a lapse of nine days Bailey came into camp leading a train of four horse wagons, loaded with oysters. Approaching and respectfully saluting the amazed captain, Bailey said:
"Here are your oysters, captain. Couldn't find any in Alexandria, so I chartered a schooner and made a voyage to Fortress Monroe and Norfolk for them. There are about 200 bushels. Where do you want 'em?"
Bailey did really make the trip, hired his men and sold oysters enough in Georgetown before "reporting" to pay all expenses and leave him a profit of about $100. The 200 bushels were divided among the members of the regiment, and Bailey returned to his duty.

Paper Making and the Egyptians.
The art of paper-making is almost prehistoric. It is believed that the Egyptians invented the first crude process. This is shown in the name itself, which is derived from the word papyrus, a reed which grows in Egypt and other warm countries.
The ancient Egyptians made their primitive paper from this plant by taking the smooth, fibrous layer between the rough outer bark and the inner flesh of the reed. This they dried and glued together in long rolls, which served as a means to convey their thoughts in hieroglyphics. This process has been so improved upon during the succeeding ages that today the most perfect paper can be made from the meaneast substances.

Caged Birds Live Longest.
Many people declaim against the cruelty of keeping birds in cages, but it is a well proved truth that cage birds live about six times as long as a wild bird, and the bird invariably becomes so fond of its owner and its surroundings that when the cage is thrown open it will not fly away. It suffers so little from solitude that if a prospective mate is introduced it hits her on the head at first for her impudence in daring to intrude into a private apartment.

Bird Superstitions.
According to a superstition which holds sway in some parts of Ireland, the hedge warblers possess the souls of unbaptized babes and sing their sorrow at the midnight hour, while the linnets, yellow hammer and finch sing their plaintive and tender songs to remind us yet of souls of departed friends not yet relieved from purgatorial pains. The bittern is their herald at night—Irish Times.

A Sermon on Money.
"No, my son," said the Bilville parent; "money doesn't bring happiness. It only pays house rent and the grocery bill and makes the ballist and the bill collector respect us six days in the week while the parson gives us the halleluia smile on Sunday."—Atlanta Constitution.

A Shocking Drinker.
The Girl—Does he drink so terribly?
The Guy—Yes, indeed; pours it out into his saucer.—Kansas City Independent.

How Birds Kill Snails.
Thrushes and other birds crush the shells of land snails and extract their juicy bodies, as do also raccoons and wood rats, but woodland birds will not eat naked snails because the slime on them sticks to their beaks and soils

When Squirrels Were Numerous.

Accounts of early writers show that squirrels must formerly have been amazingly numerous. Godman says that the gray coat was a fearful scourge to colonial farmers and that Pennsylvania paid $8,000 in bounties for their scalps in 1749 alone. This meant the destruction of 640,000 within a comparatively small district. In the early days of western settlement regular hunts were organized by the inhabitants, who would range the woods in two companies from morning till night, vying as to which band should bring home the greatest number of trophies. The quantities thus killed are almost incredible now.

An Abstract Idea.

At a card party at Charles Lamb's Hazlitt and Lamb's brother got into a discussion as to whether Holbein's coloring was as good as that of Van Dyke. At length they became so excited that they upset the table and seized each other by the throat. In the struggle Hazlitt got a black eye, but when the combatants were parted Hazlitt turned to Talfourd, who was offering his aid, and said: "You need not trouble yourself, sir. I do not mind a blow, sir. Nothing affects me but an abstract idea!"

Big Leaves.

The leaf of the cocoon tree is nearly thirty feet long. A single leaf of the parasol magnolia of Ceylon affords shade for fifteen or twenty persons.

Poets and Dogs.

Poets have always loved dogs. In this poets and boys resemble each other. Walter Savage Landor was devoted to his dog Giallo, and Byron's epitaph upon his dog Boatswain we all remember:
To mark a friend's remains these stones arise;
I never had but one, and there he lies.

Cowper was very fond of his dog, and we know how Charles Lamb, who was a prose poet, loved his Dash and how Mrs. Browning appreciated the little Flush to whom she indited a poem. The Earl of Shaftesbury kept his noble collie in his library with him at all times, and Samuel Rogers always walked out with his dog. Scott declined an invitation to dinner when his dog died, saying that he could not accept on account of the "loss of an old friend."

There is a curious advertisement, republished in the Cornhill Magazine from an eighteenth century paper: "Wanted—For a family who have had health, a sober, steady person, in the capacity of a doctor, surgeon and apothecary. He must occasionally act in the capacity of butler and dress hair and wigs. He will be required to read prayers occasionally and to preach a sermon every Sunday. The reason of this advertisement is that the family cannot any longer afford the expense of the physical tribe and wish to be at a certain expense for their bodies and souls. A good salary will be given."

Teeth of a Shark.

In respect to its dentition the shark is a very remarkable creature. The white shark has seven rows of teeth, while other species vary in the number of rows they possess. It must be understood, however, that the shark only uses one row at a time. The other rows lie down inside the mouth behind the edge of the jaw, erecting themselves when it is time for them to take successively the place of the first row. When one observes how keen edged these incisors are it seems no wonder that they can bite off a big rope as readily as if it were pack thread.
