The old order changes, giving place Be new, says The Toronto World. Only a few years ago there were to be found on the bench and in the Governments of Canada and the prowinces, men who had been active and prominent before confederation, and even before the union. One of Oliver Mowat's contemporaries on advisers he was a gay young Tory lawyer, and he composed a parody on the "True, Old English Gentleman," in honor of Metcalfe, who was nick-named "Old Square Toes." They were composed impromptu at a public dinner, while the fight was in progress. A couple of verses are givan by Dent:

One verse the songster has forgot-he has One brave old square-toed gentleman, he of the stainless name; For Indian laurels grace his brow, Jamaica loves him, too, and Canada will fight for him 'gainst all the Baldwin crew-The fine old square-toed gentleman, all of the present time.

So let our loyal shouts go forth, let traitors hear and quail, and British hearts will beat for joy on every hill and vale; And though the Baldwin clan may howl, though loud th' hyaenas roar, We'll rally round old square-toes, and give him one cheer more, The fine old square-toed gentleman, all of the present time.

Not many years ago the Premier of Canada, and his right and left men, Tupper and Tilley, were all oldtime men who had taken an active part in the politics of Canada, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick before the union. One of them, Sir Charles Tupper, was Premier as late as 1896, and is still a hale and hearty man, Mutil recently our dominating ideas were those of pre-confederation Statesmen. In Ontario Sandfield Macfonald, one of the heads of the old Canadian Governments, was Premier of Ontario after Confederation, and was succeeded, after a short interval by Oliver Mowat, whose official life began in the Brown-Dorion Government of 1858. Though Canada was a mmall country in those days, and though there was a good deal that was petty and tricky in its politics, it brought forth some strong men. We are hardly yet able to adopt a rondescending tone toward Macdonald, Tilley and Tupper, Brown and Dorion, Holton and Mowat; there is indeed almost a temptation to fall Into the opposite mood, and say The former times were better than these." But it may be that we have not yet got the right perspective.

Early in the spring, when the weather was in its most changeable state, a Toronto firm sent out a commercial traveler. He wrote in to and religious restraint, are of a the firm on Monday night: "Raining much more serious character. all day. Impossible to get around, and no business." Tuesday he wrote ten fear to give their men too much Scotia in the Great Crimea struggle In: "Cold, driving sleet to-day. Misprable weather, and nothing doing." On Wednesday he wrote: "Heavy mnowstorm. Everything blocked up, and no use trying to get around."

Then he got a wire from the firm: "Come on home. We can get our weather reports cheaper from the Obmervatory."

READING CAMPS.

A Plea for Better Conditions Among Canada's Lumbermen-The Work Already Done-Lumber Camp Schools.

How many have actually seen the inside of a lumber camp at night? Imagine a log shanty, 100 feet long, and wide in proportion; bunks three deep all around, enough for from one to two hundred men. Wet socks, mitts, overalls, shirts are hung up to dry so thick you can hardly see the bunks on the other side. Some The bench, William Henry Draper, of the men are trying to mend torn was Chief Justice of Ontario until clothing, which must be worn next November, 1877. And what applies conflict between Metcalfe and his to lumber camps applies to mining and railway construction camps also.

It was to provide just such camps that the Canadian Reading Camp Association started operations about three years ago.

First the association started in one or two lumber camps in New Ontario, and at its own expense built shanties, supplying them with tables and bookshelves, and stocked these well with books, games, writing materials and newspapers. These papers were all up-to-date, so that the lumbermen could keep themselves posted in the news of the day. It was declared at first that the daily papers could not be got, but the association argued, the wagons have to go to the railway station regularly for the supplies, why should they not bring the daily papers, too? A strong leather bag was provided to hold them, and the daily papers in the camps was soon a matter of course. The books, a circulating library of fifty volumes, were provided by the Provincial Government. The men in charge of these reading camps are men of education, general ability and thorough Christian character. Protestant or Catholic, it matters not which, so long as their character is above reproach. Part of their expenses is paid by the association, and part they earn in the woods at work with the rest of the gang.

At first when the big lumber companies were approached and asked to contribute the building they refused, saying there was nothing in it for them. But shortly they changed their minds, and now in every case the company gladly puts up the camp at its own expense. Then it is important that men should be encouraged to spend their Sundays and other spare time in better ways than huddled in cramped quarters, drinking, gambling, telling or listening to the low jest, song or story. Sundays and rainy days in camp, when men are off work, are the longest in the year. Men suffer more from ennui, from mental and spiritual languor, than from overwork on other days. They are then ready to jump at any suggestion, no matter how vulgar, that promises even temporary relief from such bondage. Their moral diseases, that are the result of this lack of social

> A Moose in the City Streets. During the recent dry spell a nimble, powerful, anxious-eyed cow moose made its appearance in the streets of St. John, N.B., and The Daily Telegraph says that it attract-

The moose resented every effort to bring it to land. It struggled in one direction after another, and it kicked. It was brought under control only when additional lines were attached to it, and each hauled by scores of men and boys. Once on the land, the moose resorted to front and rear kicking; every method, honorable or unscrupulous, was employed in its attempt to break away, but eventually it was thrown and securely tied.

Why We Shake Hands. The custom of handshaking dates back to prehistoric times, a relic of those savage days when strangers could not meet without suspicion of murderous purpose. Then all men went abroad with weapons and shields, and, when they met, would stand in pleasant converse, each with his shield upon his left arm and with right hands clasped so that there would be no chance for a sudden swing of the knife or bludgeon. The right hand was invariably used for the weapon, with the result that we are a right-handed race. The reason for this lay undoubtedly in the fact that the left arm was always employed in the important work of shielding the heart. Among the common people of the Aryan race, the old pledge of amity in yielding the right hand to be grasped and held has since remained the chief token of open friendship. In the Iliad the returning chiefs were "greeted with extended hands." Even at that remote day the early significance of the handclasp had been lost in the nobler meaning of civilized life. But it remains a salutation in which a greater or less degree of equality is claimed or conceded.
