Two Drownings in the Scugog River

Mystery surrounds the death of Philip Wolberg, a Hebrew resident of Lindsay, about twenty-six years of age, who ended his life in the Scugog river Sunday morning about fifteen minutes after eleven o'clock. While the death was sad and tragic, nevertheless there is an interesting romance connected with the same.

WAS IN LOVE. Briefly Wolberg was badly in love with a pretty young lady living in New York, whose parents were bitterly opposed to her having anything to do with Wolberg. Letters and telegrams were interrupted, and on the receipt of a telegram a week ago Saturday, Wolberg became despondent and decided to visit New York and sit out matters for himself. It will probably never be known why he did not go as he intended, certainly not on account of finances, as it was reported this morning that he had some eleven hundred dollars in his pocket when taken from the water.

HE COULD SWIM. He went in for a swim with several companions Sunday morning in the vicinity of the iron bridge. There were others in swimming as well, twenty or twenty-five all told. Wolberg could swim and his friends did not pay any attention to him. Shortly after entering the water he was noticed to swim out into the middle of the river into deep water, hold his hands up above his head, and to disappear beneath the surface. When it was noticed that he failed to appear again, his friends became anxious and immediately went out to rescue him, but it was too late, the heart having ceased its action when examined by the doctor.

HOW THEY MET. Some time ago Wolberg was the owner of a store in Newfoundland, and it was while there that he met Miss Sarah Burnstein, of New York who along with her brother was visiting in the place where Wolberg kept store. It was a case of love at first sight and the two became infatuated with each other. The brother noticed the attention that young Wolberg was paying to his sister and resented it, but the two became almost inseparable, and when Miss Burnstein returned to New York the two lovers were constantly in communication with each other.

PARENTS OBJECTED. Miss Burnstein's parents and other friends were strongly opposed to Wolberg, but not in the least daunted he pursued his attentions to his lady love. He failed in his store business and left for Toronto, where he lived for a time. He then went to Peterboro, where he resided for a short time, and about two weeks ago he came to Lindsay and he has been selling note paper and other articles, boarding at the home of Mr. Frank Pearson, Melbourne-st.

TELEGRAM CORRESPONDENCE. Five telegrams were found on Wolberg's person, but they are hard to decipher because of the fact that all parties concerned appeared to have numbers. These they used instead of their signatures. On July 8 Wolberg received the following telegram from New York:

"Leave immediately, leaving wire when you 158 Seventh-ave." —Sarah Burnstein.

On July 9, the following telegram was received, supposedly from Miss Burnstein's father or brother:

"You write letter how you will act in the future. Will send money by mail." —Burnstein.

Another telegram was received from his sweetheart on the 13th, which reads as follows:

"Do not doubt me 28, still want letter, am angry at your reticence. B. left for Newfoundland. If dubious do not answer. Am fully worried and sick." —Sarah Burnstein.

It is stated that Wolberg while in conversation with some of his fellow-countrymen in Lindsay imparted part of his trouble to them and was heard to remark at different times that he would end his life by drowning, and it is also stated that he sent a telegram away to Miss Burnstein's friends in New York stating that he would drown himself if he persisted in interfering. On Saturday, July 16, Wolberg received the following telegram, which was signed by two numbers:

A SWEET DEATH. "I see plainly that you are only a bum. No. 40 can never make $224 happy—you betrayed me. Mr. Hyman and myself are happy and comfortable together for the future. Mrs. Piemang has joined us, and we are going to leave your desire incurable. For traitors drowning is a sweet death." —88-21.

After receiving the above telegram it is stated that Wolberg was visibly worried and heartbroken. He decided to leave for New York and find out who sent the telegram and all about it, believing that messages he had sent had not been delivered to Miss Burnstein. He did not go, and the matter apparently weighed on his mind with the result that he carried out his threat Sunday morning.

DID NOT GO. Stating that he would go to New York and find out who sent the above telegram, the local G. N. W. operator gave Wolberg a telegram of introduction to the manager of the G.N.W. office in New York.

A WARNING. Another telegram found on Wolberg's person was dated in Peterboro, June 15. It read as follows:

"Have names. Your telegram caused trouble. Don't telegraph or write until informed. Registered letter overtaken by Burnstein." —J.M.H.

Wolberg was well liked by his companions, and they are sorry that he committed such a rash deed. The body was removed this morning to Toronto, where Wolberg has friends.

NO INQUEST. There were a number of young men on the shore, but only one, Mr. Bert Johnston, made any attempt to save the drowning man. The body was soon recovered by Mr. Hadley, who happened to be passing in a boat, and by stirring around the spot with a large fishing pole, succeeded in raising it to the surface. Several attempts to revive him were made, but to no avail. Coroner Blanchard was immediately summoned, but deemed an inquest unnecessary.

On Monday a sad drowning accident occurred at nine-thirty o'clock, when little Harold Walker, the ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. David Walker, William-st., north fell into the river, losing his life.

Just how it happened no one appears to know, but it seems that the little fellow was playing near the river below Horn Bros. Woolen mills when he slipped in beyond its depth. The water is deep at this point and no one who could not swim could safely go in at this particular place.

ATTRACTED BY CRIES. The cries of the little fellow attracted the attention of a number of men working in Kennedy's mill yards, who in turn shouted to Mr. R. L. Morgan and Mr. T. A. Fisher who happened to be working in a boathouse nearby. They hurried to the scene, but as neither one could swim they were unable to reach the young lad, and they in turn called for help. Mr. Alex Horn and a number of others were soon on hand and the willing workers began to drag the water for the body. For over twenty minutes they dragged the water without avail, but finally the body was recovered about twelve feet from the shore in about eight feet of water, by Mr. Horn, who had dived down into the water on his arrival.

LAD WAS DEAD. Dr. Blanchard arrived as the body was being taken out of the water and he immediately set to work to revive the lad, but after a few minutes all efforts to restore life were given up, and the doctor pronounced that the heart had stopped beating.

Mr. Walker, who is a G. T. R. yardman, was standing at the corner of William and Kent-sts., when he was first made acquainted with the account of the sad death, and he at once hurried to the scene of the drowning.

The grief-stricken father arrived as Mr. J. McGillivray was carrying the young lad to his home on William-st., across from McCrea's foundry.

Every day a number of little boys ranging from five years up can be seen sitting on the banks of the river with their feet dangling over or they are perhaps fooling around in punts, or playing on the scows. This sad drowning accident should be a warning to those who cannot swim to keep away from the river.

TOOJ $5,500. Peterboro, July 25.—About two o'clock this morning the jewelry store of the W. A. Sanderson Company was entered and about $5,500 worth of jewelry has been stolen. An entrance was made through the rear door prying it open. The local chief of police is sending circulars throughout the country describing the articles stolen, which consisting of watches, rings with valuable settings, locket, chains and stick pins.

It is expected that the race across the Atlantic between Dr. Crippen and Inspector Dew will end at Rimouski on Sunday.
