OBITUARY

PEARL MARK. Miss Pearl Mark died Sunday at the residence of her sister, Mrs. John Elliott, who resides near Belleville in Thurlow township. Death was the result of appendicitis. Miss Mark, who was 27 years of age, was the youngest daughter of Mr. Gideon Mark, of Dorset, Muskoka district. She had been ill but a few days. Deceased was a member of the Methodist church. In addition to the father, two brothers and four sisters survive.

CROPS NEED RAIN. The continued dry weather is causing the farmers in this section of the country considerable worry, and it is feared that unless rain comes soon many of the crops will be a "write-off." On Sunday black clouds hovered over Lindsay and vicinity for hours, and it appeared as if the promised rain, which looked for rain was at hand, and that the parched land would be soothed. However, although it rained for half an hour or more in the vicinity of Pleasant Point, a severe sprinkling was all that the town of Lindsay and surrounding farms received. The country is badly in need of rain, as it is stated that the crop are being retarded in their growth, and the pastures dried up. Mrs. J. D. Graham, Mrs. J. W. Wallace, Mr. Bert Wallace left per G.T.R. on the annual excursion to the shrine at Ste. Anne de Beauve.

CAMEO KIRBY

By Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. Adapted From the Play of the Same Name by W. B. M. Ferguson.

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THE LITTLE MAGAZINE COMPANY

From the balcony Larkin Bunce, chewing impatiently on his cigarette, waited for Adele to leave the drawing room. It was imperative that he should have a word with Kirby, escaping from the dining room before the others had been in time to catch a glimpse of Adele. Kirby was as the latest conqueror of Toronto, and the fact had not been a secret. The one the old number people agreed that something interesting had happened. It would not have surprised him if Kirby had been successful in his attempt to identify and all had been discovered.

And Kirby, looking through the window, he contemplated Kirby and the car made indignantly facing with the postscript and retreating away the time with Adele as it occurred in the peace and happiness of his own home. Such indifference was maddening, inestimable, and the old gambler, with a faint impression, decided that the moment Adele had gone he would say a last warning to his partner, and if it was still intended he would then think of his own safety and, however difficult it would prove, have to try to get to the safe.

do know all the time, underneath, what you ought to do. For instance, I know that I ought not to be here now. I haven't any right. And, then, I ought to be hunting the man who stole a silver mounted pistol at the oaks this morning.

"But you can't do that," she expostulated, nodding wisely. "Your friends would."

"Miss Randall, I've got only one friend in the world, and he's out there on the balcony swearing cuss words at me because I don't go."

"Do you think you have a right to say that to any one friend?" she asked gently.

"I—I hadn't thought of you as a friend, Miss Randall."

"Why? How do you think of me?" suddenly facing him, her eyes half-blinded, half-daring, demanding a sincere answer.

"Why—just as you, Miss Adele—and I ought not to think of you at all."

"I don't know why Life dealt me the hand I hold. All I know is I've got to play the cards according to rule. Sometimes I've found that mighty hard. I keep wishing and wishing there'd be a different hand dealt, but wishing won't change it. It was the shuffle that settled it long ago."

"I don't think, sir, that you've said anything that concerns you and me very much," she commented, glancing up at Kirby.

Farmers Escape Double Liability By Fleeing

A surprise has been sprung in the Farmers' Bank affairs. A cleverly-concoived and well-executed attempt to evade the double liability demands of the bank's curators has been made in Halton county, with the result that easily a dozen farmers are now on their way to the Northwest, having sold out their property in Ontario. Against this property was the claim of the bank for the double liability, but in an investigation of the movement, it was learned that the parties in question were acting under skilled advice, and had no fear of the consequences.

In few, if any, cases are the "exits" being made to United States or other foreign territory, where international laws would apply. Instead, the money acquired from the sale of their Eastern farms is being placed in Alberta and Saskatchewan homesteads where, the investors were advised, no proceedings of the curator could reach them.

Upon this point, it was stated this morning by a legal authority that the homestead laws of the two provinces mentioned were proof against any interference on the part of a claimant, such as the bank curator would be. Once the money was invested, it was asserted, the investor would be safeguarded against inquiry. This feature of the prairie homestead laws, according to the legal informant, had provided certain Farmers' Bank shareholders with a refuge that would be found impregnable. Several instances of these "farewell" tactics by those who fear ruin through remaining, were pointed out, and many more are stated to be planned for the near future.

Two Cars Derailed. The Lindsay G.T.R. auxiliary was called out to Fenelon Falls last evening, two freight cars having left the track at that place. The regular Halliburton train which arrives here each evening about 6 p.m. was switching some cars when suddenly two cars of freight left the track. The auxiliary was called, and the cars righted again in a short time.

Fire in the Charlton block at Aylmer caused a loss of about $25,000. Mr. A. R. Macdonald, railway contractor, of Montreal, died in England.

The Bessie Bitler stopped here for a while on Sunday evening and then proceeded on her way to Lindsay. The list of dead in the Northern Ontario fires now numbers 68.
