Ghastly Murder in New York—Child of 12 the Victim

New York, July 9.—The existence in New York of an appalling human degenerate, as horrible a being as Hooper Young or London's Jack the Ripper, was revealed through the discovery of the body of twelve-year-old Julia Connors, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Connors.

The child had been drugged and then savagely assaulted. The murderer who dragged her had hacked her body again and again with a double-edged knife. There were forty-one stab wounds, twenty-one of which were in the back. Her hands, wrists and arms were slashed and her throat cut. Finally the murderer jabbed the knife blade deeply into the left side of her breast. The blade penetrated the heart.

He had further desecrated his little victim's person by cutting off her pretty, clustering hair.

Linking away the girl's body was the red-stained knife, so that when the little girl's body was discovered by romping children it was thought the slender, denuded figure was that of a boy.

UNOCCUPIED FLAT WAS SCENE.

This led to the finding last night of the apartment in which the crime was committed—an unoccupied five-room flat, on the third floor of No. 3968 Third-ave. The house is on the west side of the lot. In the back yard (enclosed by a gateway) the tenants who moved away from the flat left worn oilcloth in the kitchen, passageway, and bathroom—a faded cloth with a dark brown background and a large, lighter brown diamond figure in it. On each corner of this diamond is a white diamond with a brown bordered square set within. This was exactly the design of the oilcloth strips that covered the murdered child's clothing as it was found hidden behind the rock in the lot.

But neither Moses Stern, nor his wife and children, nor any of the tenants of the house, or any of the neighbors, could find the police in their quest of the murderer. None had heard a scream or cry; none had seen the little girl enter the house with anybody or alone; none could say if having seen any person loitering in the hallways or near the house.

PUT VICTIM IN BOX.

The murderer—and here is the only clue the police have—had placed his little victim's body in a sitting posture in a wooden box about two feet long and one and one-half feet in width and depth, stuffed in the clothing and covered the box with the oilcloth. Then he bore the child down to the lower hallway, out through the backyard, tossed her into the lot, hid her clothing, and escaped.

The box is marked as follows: "100 cans—The Dirt Cleaner, Bestine, Domestic Mig. Co., L. I., City."

In pencil is scribbled: "150 cans bottom."

The police hope that the books of the Domestic Manufacturing Company may show sales in the neighborhood of the crime, so that by tracing the boxes and the disposition that storekeepers made of them, they may be led in some degree to the trail of the murderer of little Julia Connors.

Aside from the means of identification yielded the stripes of oilcloth, there was ample other evidence that the deserted flat of the third-ave. house had surely been the place where the child was trapped and made unconscious, and set body pared and hideously backed. This was attested by the bathroom. Strands of the child's hair were found in the tub and the stains of

Mr. Perrin's lectures on "The Resurrection" and "The Judgment" have been given by him in many towns and some of the cities of Ontario and are reported as well worth hearing. Mr. Perrin will lecture at the Academy of Music on Sunday at 3 o'clock and 8 o'clock p.m.

It is refreshing to find a Bible student departing from the unreasonable 24-hour theory of the Judgment Day and yet proving his claims by God's Word and in a way that should set reasonable men thinking. The Resurrection is a doctrine almost lost sight of now—a days and yet one of the early Christians based all their hopes of a future life. In these two lectures we have not the opinions of some man, but indisputable truths based upon the Holy Scriptures which are shown to harmonize from Genesis to Revelation. Come out and hear these lectures and get some good thoughts on the harmony of God's Wisdom, Justice, Love and Power.

The lectures are given in a hall so that Jew and Gentile, Christian and Infidel, all men everywhere will feel free to come.

Getting Evidence

The witnesses were at the Waterford assizes in a case which concerned long continued poultry stealing. As usual, nothing could be got from them in the way of evidence until the nearly baffled prosecuting counsel asked in an angry tone of voice, "Will you swear on your soul, Pat Murphy, that Phady Hoolligan has never to your knowledge stolen chickens?" The responsibility of this was too much even for Pat. "Bedad, I would hardly know that if I was a chicken and Phady was about I'd roost high—Life.

DUNSFORD MAN'S NARROW ESCAPE

Side Burned by Lightning—Another Barn Struck

(Special to The Warder). Dunsford, July 10.—This section of the county was visited by a fierce electrical storm on Monday last, and the wonder is that more damage is not reported. The storm struck the village about noon hour and scattered its bolts, thunder and rain about the neighborhood in reckless manner. The storm lasted exactly one half hour and during that time the barn of Mr. John Bell, who resides about 1 1/2 miles west of the village, was struck and badly damaged, one horse being lost in the fire. It was impossible to save the frame structure, which went up in smoke in quick order.

Mr. J. W. Thurston, who resides about half a mile north of the village, had a miraculous escape, when his residence was struck. At the time of the storm the members of the family were all gathered in the house, and Mr. Thurston was resting on the sofa. The lightning struck the house with a resounding crash, the bolt entering the door and passing underneath the sofa on which Mr. Thurston was reclining. He was partially stunned for an instant, and besides received a number of severe burns on his side. He considers that he was lucky to escape being killed outright. The house was not damaged to any great extent.

Miss Kirley's Narrow Escape—Felt no Pain From Electric Fluid

Miss Hilda Kirley, the young lady who received a shock from the lightning during Tuesday afternoon's storm, is up and around to-day apparently none the worse of her terrible experience and close call to death.

The accident happened when Miss Kirley went upstairs in the farm home for the purpose of dropping an uplifted window to prevent the rain from coming in. This was about two o'clock in the afternoon. The rain was then falling in torrents and after letting down the sash Miss Kirley remained looking upon the descending showers.

This was all she remembered for upwards of half an hour, when she revived and thought that another lightning bolt had struck her.
