A DREAM AND A CRIME.

The Story of a Slumber Vision That Comes From Cicero.

Cicero furnishes with a tale of two Arcadians, who, traveling togeth er, arrived at Magara, a city of Greece, ham, who was successful in passing between Athens and Corinth, where one of them lodged in a friend's house and the other at an inn. After supper the person who lodged town on Saturday to Fenelon Falls, at the private house went to bed and, falling asleep, dreamed that his friend at the inn appeared to him and begged his assistance, because the innkeeper was going to kill him. The man immediately got out of bed, much frightened at the dream; but, recovering himself and falling asleep weeks, during which time they visited again, his friend appeared to him a second time and desired that, as he would not assist him in time, he would at least care not to let his death go unpunished-that the innkeeper, having murdered him, had thrown his body in He therefore begged that he would be at the city gate in the morning before the cart was out.

Struck with this new dream, he went early to the gate, saw the cart and asked the driver what was in it. The driver immediately fled. The dead body was taken out of the cart and day. the innkeeper apprehended and executed.
