After the cheese was listed Mr. Bailey rose to a question of privilege and stated that the eastern papers had copied a statement from The Post which was not correct. He thought the reputation of buyers was black enough without trying to make them blacker in the press. He thought that reporters should be sure meeting at Bolsover on Monday, the of the facts before they gave publicity to anything affecting the reputathe outcome of his purchases of Janetville, Omemee, Reaboro and Pine Grove. The first was all right, while at the second and third factories there were a few which he declined to accept. At Pine Grove there was fault found which the maker agreed was right and was caused by taking in milk that was not right. Salesman Clancey-Did you not tell the maker that he could bring in any inspector that he liked?

What he wanted to know was how far a claim of this kind could be maintained after the cheese had been inspected and accepted at the factory.

Mr. Whitton said that as he was not isterested perhaps he could plain it better than anyone else he had some experience along this line. Joseph Brant.

poet Campbell, in his wellknown "Gertrude of Wyoming," cribes the awful massacre of the settlement to Joseph Brant, the celebrated Mohawk head of the Six Nations. The charge is probably founded, as Campbell himself was not unaware from proofs submitted by the sons of Brant in 1822. Scarcely less atrocious, however, was the attack on the American settlement of Minisink on July 23,1779, when 44 fell beneath the tomahawk of the Indians. Brant had been educated under the tutelage of Sir William Johnson, had visited England in 1775, when his learning had attracted wide attention, and fought with much distinction on the side of the Farmers' Union Mutual Fire Insurance Co | British through the American revolutionary war.
