Humor and Philosophy
By DUNCAN M. SMITH
Copyright, 1904, by Duncan M. Smith.
IT ALWAYS FOLLOWS.
To me it often sadly seems
That there is something weird in dreams.
They steal upon me unawares
And frightfully increase my cares.
They pierce my soul and wring my heart
And make my gentle spirit smart.
I writhe in anguish and dismay
Then wake to lie and long for day.
Again I sleep to dream again
Of things unseen of waking men.
To live through horrors black and drear
Enough to sadden all the year,
To moan, while all my veins congeal,
At what my haunting dreams reveal,
To wake again and strive to keep
A languid watch till dawn shall peep.
When in the morning I arise,
My suffering I can't disguise.
Then says my wife, with touch of scorn
As she regards my face forlorn
(I hate to meet her searching eye),
"You will eat lobster though you die."

The Merry Harvest Hand.
Did you ever notice that distance lends enchantment to the harvest field?
To get out in the early morning, while the dew is yet on the grass and shock about seventeen acres of oats along with the merry harvest hands is certainly alluring enough to look at it in the picture, and the wise man will let it stay there unless necessity or some gentleman with a gun drives him into the harvest field.
A coat of tan accumulated at the sea shore is quite as pretty to look upon as one acquired through wrestling with a pitchfork, and the process is not nearly so well calculated to break one's heart.
Of course the $2.50 a day and board that goes with the excursion to the harvest field is a nice thing to have, but there is always the chance at the seashore that one may be discovered and adopted by a millionaire's daughter and thus clear up more in one season than would be possible working steadily for forty years in the harvest field. Stick to the seashore. The harvest will be gathered in somehow.

Literary.
"What is your husband's favorite book?"
"Chips that pass in the night, I guess."

So Annoying.
The rubbernecked annoyed her so
As on the sidewalk in a row
They waited for the maiden shy
And ogled her as she passed by.
But truth to tell I'm quite afraid
It much more had annoyed the maid
If as she passed from day to day
No man at all had looked her way.

What Other Object?
"When I married you you did not have a cent to your name and hardly more than one dress, and now you must have a new gown every month."
"Goodness, don't I know it. Do you suppose I would have married you if I had had money of my own?"

The Afterglow.
To sit and spon is very sweet
With some young girl demure and neat,
But when you have to buy her clothes
And pay for all she wants to eat,
It isn't, as you may suppose,
So great a treat.

Cautious.
"Do you think it is right to kiss a girl you are not engaged to?"
"It may be right, but it isn't safe. She is liable to land you before you get away."

Stood the Test.
He loved her. Who could doubt it?
He proved it sure enough.
He listened to her poems
And said they were great stuff.

How He Won Her.
She was a sweet girl graduate,
The choicest of the brood.
He was almost a savage,
Uncultured, raw and crude.
He didn't know beyond the Alps
That Italy lay fair;
He didn't know that at the top
Were zones of rooms to spare.
But he owned thirteen sections
And paid bills in advance,
So when he said, "Please marry me,"
She thought she'd take a chance.

Deserve the Treatment.
"Mosquitoes are very bad about the place this year."
"If they are so bad, why don't you have them sent to a reform school?"

Would Be His Choice.
"More people die from overeating than from starvation."
"But think how much pleasanter a death it is!"

A Double Loss.
"Why did he marry her?"
"Jenks bet him he couldn't."
"That was where he lost out twice."

Well Named.
The little coin is fickle
And simply will not stay;
It's called the nimble nickel
Because it gets away.

The Modern Way.
"Those who dance must pay the fiddlers."
"Unless they dance to beat the band."

A Poser.
"I make it a point to believe just half what I hear."
"Which half?"

PERT PARAGRAPHS.
The only good thing about advice is that it puts the giver in such good humor that he usually will stand for a touch.

The dealer in green goods is on the lookout for green customers to match them.
Never lend your umbrella; it is a good thing to have handy when it rains.
Nearness lends enchantment to the senses when fried chicken and peach pie are under contemplation.
An eye opener is a joke the point of which a blind man can see.
When you have strained your relations with your sweetheart apply a poultice of bonbons and violets.
Many a woman has won a husband by becoming the tail to his kite.
The most successful get rich quick scheme is this: Be born the son of a trust magnate.
Many a woman is darker than she is painted.
Nothing makes a man quite so mad as to discover that a slot machine is out of repair after he has put his money in it.

Toothache.
Life is hardly worth the living
When one has an aching tooth.
Who can gentle and forgiving
Be in such a case? In truth,
Candor makes me here declare
Then I'm cross as any bear.
I am hating all creation
When my tooth is beating time;
When it aches like all tartation,
I am fit for any crime;
Still it takes a lot of grit
To step up and part with it.
When I try the pain to cover,
Playing that there is no ache,
Half a dozen mishaps hover
Round me to advantage take,
To beset me as I grin,
Keeping all the swear words in.
It is safest, when that molar
Takes the center of the stage,
Punching one in darkest dolor,
Causing one to wildly rage,
To sidestep and quiet keep
Till the tooth is put to sleep.

Getting Even.
"She is going to sue him for breach of promise."
"But he has no money. What does she expect to get?"
"Revenge. She intends to have his letters read in court."

Wants Were Modest.
"I came to ask you for your daughter."
"But she is the only one I have."
"Well, I don't want but one. I hope you don't take me for a bigamist."

A Fixed Star.
"Can marriage be successful on $10 a week?"
"Sure thing. A man could never save enough to start divorce proceedings."

How He Won Her.
She was a sweet girl graduate,
The choicest of the brood.
