McHenry was speaking when they

"There is your first page, Brand," he | now. But you see"was saying, "and it sends Bartelmy to state prison."

The managing editor gazed approvingly at the appearance of the page of type and the cut in the form as it lay exposed on one of the stones under a shaded electric light. He looked up to congratulate McHenry on the manper in which he had completed the makeup of the page when his jaw suddealy feli. His eyes took on an amazed siace. He was looking straight over the night editor's shoulder. McHenry caught Brand's expression and whirled about. Then he, too, saw the owner of the Advance and his wife draw near. The triumphant air with which the wife and mother sailed along by his side boded no good to Brand and his Nolan paused in front of the form

SHARP KNIFE-LIKE PAINS Would Go Through Heart

Thousands of people go about their daily work on the verge of death and yet don't know it.

Every once in a while a pain will seem to shoot through the heart but little is only when a violent shock comes that the weakness of the heart is apparent. There is only one cure and that is

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS. Mrs. J. E. Nixon, Riverview, Ont. a bad pain around my heart. At times it would almost stop beating and then, a sharp knife-like pain would seem to go through it. As I had heard Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills were a grand remedy for the heart, I sent and got two boxes of them, and when I had only used a box and a half I was entirely free from pain."

time, so we had best let it go over until tomorrow-delay it one day. That won't hurt the story any." Mrs. Nolan clutched at the ex-miner's arm and cried shrilly:

"Now, now, Michael, that's not your usual way to explain things to one of your employees. Order him to destroy all this miserable stuff about the judge at once. Don't hesitate like this. Think what it means to me, to the children, to us," she pleaded. "There, there, mother; you keep out of this," said Nolan kindly, yet firmly. "I'm trying to do the best I can for you. It's because of you that I'm here

Ed Dupuy burst excitedly in upon them, and as the typesetters were beginning to become distracted from their work owing to the unusual situation Brand began to fear that this new intruder would prove the final demoralizer of the entire night shift. "Mr. Nolan," cried Dupuy, "we haven't a minute to lose! They are almost ready to go to press." He looked intently at the newspaper owner. "Yes, quite right. We do go to press very soon," cried Brand confidently, "and I know Michael Nolan is the man who will order it done."

"Michael," cried Mrs. Nolan at the top of her voice, which rose sharply over the din of the typesetting machines, "are you going to stand for this? Mr. Brand acts as if he owned the Advance and treats you as if you were the office boy. He thinks he's a great reformer and knows it all. We other people have a right to our opinions, too, and I don't see why you and your family should be made to suffer on account of him as we have had to ever since you took him up."

Judith Bartelmy heard the stormy scene, lived a part of it herself huddled in the managing editor's office. She felt that Nolam would not let the story be used from what she had heard, and she could not suppress a pang of pain that pierced her heart at what she believed to be the fanatical vindictiveness of Wheeler Brand against her father. Yet she was a true woman, and she could not, in spite of her loyalty to her parent, avoid feeling a touch of pride at his strength of character, his determination, at the sacrifices he had made, to accomplish what he believed, even if foolishly, to be his duty.

"They don't need me," she finally muttered, and, gathering up her costly skirts, she tripped daintily across the paper strewn floor, out into the hall and down to her carriage.

Nolan dropped his head in thought when his wife had finished her tirade. He paced up and down nervously. He looked at the clock, then at the form with its accusing contents, then at Brand, then at his wife.

"I'll go and telephone Judge Bartelmy," put in Dupuy. "He'll be anx-

The lawyer took himself off. Brand saw the danger of delay. He doubted if any man would be able to successfully withstand the pressure that Bartelmy and Nolan's family would be able to bring to bear on the owner in another twenty-four hours. "No, no!" he exclaimed to Nolan.

tried to prove this judge's guilt to the people, but I fear I have only succeeded in proving it to his daughter. A day's delay would be fatal, I know. At least Bartelmy could get another judge to issue an injunction against us even if he would not dare to do it himself. And there are other steps

His voice rose higher, and he worked himself into a frenzy of earnestness. He stood before the little group gathattention is paid to it at the time, and it | ered around the ink black form and continued his impassioned words: "You know I thought we were going

Mrs. Nolan was on the point of becoming hysterical in her agitation. "Michael, Michael"- she began.

"There, mother, you go home with Sylvester. He's waiting outside for you. After all, this is a man's job we've got here. I am the head of the family, and I will settle this matter in my own way." he said sternly "You must not attempt further to in

He led her out of the room. Brand spoke to McHenry "Did you bear, Mac?" be asked. "He won't decide to run it." "It's tough, old man-it's tough!" "This is such a live thing I don't see bow I can kill it." the managing editor said, rubbing his hand over the face of the form. "That's the best first page ever made up in America," said McHenry, with justifiable professional pride.

Brand was inconsolable. "I've been working ten years for just this thing," he said, "something so plain that even children would see what the big thieves are doing."

"You go home!" Brand suddenly ordered McHenry. "What?" was the surprised exclama

"I said go home!"

Brand's face was beginning to twitch nervously. He stood in the middle of the composing room, under the flooding white glare from a sixty-four candle power electric light, and clinched and unclinched his hands, not daring to look McHenry squarely in the face. The night editor began to guess what was passing through Brand's mind. "Yes, but," he began to protest-

Brand cut him short, saying agitat-

"I am still managing editor." McHenry now realized plainly that the intensely earnest Brand had decided to run the story that very night regardless of Nolan's attitude. It would be an easy matter, as Nolan, of course, would not remain at the office much longer. And McHenry well knew that such an act would not only bring about Brand's discharge from the Advance, but that it would as well injure his reputation in other newspaper offices, where obedience to one's superior, as in any well regulated organization, is a man's first duty under all circum-

"Why, man," he exclaimed questioningly, "you're surely not going to run this story?" Before Brand could give an answer to this last question, even if he had intended to do so. Nolan broke in on the

"Mr. Nolan," began Brand, "you have heard the whole story of this miserable affair, both sides of it-Bartelmy's and my own, from our own lips. Therefore why do you or how in heaven's name can you hesi-

Michael Nolan's face shone with the light of determination.

"Wheeler, my boy," he said, "I have learned much from you I have needed contact with such a wan as you. 1 have led a rough life for most of my career. When I rose to be chairman of the Street Railway Workers' union I did so simply through my ruggedness of character, my ability to master men. Then I was driven out into the world, an outcast, and became a day laborer in the mines. When the day came that I owned my own mine it was again a case of fight, fight, FIGHT, for the lawless claim jumpers threatened me above ground, and the lawless floods assailed me below ground. So in the life I led I did not get the "Would fail me again. I have here tonight?" asked Bartelmy.

"Have you received instructions about this story?" "What were those instructions? Is the story to be printed?" "I am not at liberty to discuss with any outside person the communications I receive from the owner, but I will add for your information that the story will be on the press in a very few minutes."

At this latest declaration of Brand's Judith could restrat berself no longer. She rushed through the doorway, across the grimy floor, regardless of the flowing train of her silk gown. Brand rubbed the back of his hand Bicycle and General across his eyes as though they were deceiving him. "Good God, it is Judith!" he exclaimed. Then he turned to his assistant. "Here, Mac, hurry-take this form away."

The girl's face and eyes were aglow with the effects of the nervous strain under which she labored on that epoch making and epoch breaking night before the startled night shift of the Advance.

"Wheeler, you're not going to us that picture?" she pleaded. "Take the form away." again ordered Brand, his voice almost failing

"No, no; don't send it! Wait, wait!" She threw herself over the inky form, her arms outstretched. Brand tried to draw her away.

"Judith, please!" he protested. "They can't have"- She was hys-

A pleasant surprise was in store for Mr. Bert Bickford when he attended the weekly choir practice of the Queen-st. Methodist church last evening. Mr. Bickford, who is at present employed in Roadmaster Heel's office at the G.T.R. station, is about to leave for Saskatoon, where he has accepted a good position with the C. N. R. as telegraph operator., and the members of the choir and the Young Men's Bible Class took the opportunity last evening of presenting him with an excellent copy of the Methodist hymn and tune book.

Mr. Bickford will be greatly missed in the Queen-st. Methodist church, where he has been an active member and a very valuable member of the choir. Being the possessor of a sweet tenor voice he was a good help to the various services, and in the Sunday school he acted as the leader of the Sunday school choir, which organization greatly improved after he assumed control.

It is understood that Mr. Bickford will leave for his new home in Saskatoon next Tuesday.
