MORE DAYLIGHT.

Putting Forward the Clock Mooted Again in Britain.

If popular approval as signified by the resolutions adopted in many Town Councils has any influence with members of Parliament, the Daylight Saving Bill recently read in the British House of Commons for the first time this session ought to pass unanimously. The proposal is that on the third Sunday in April of each year standard time should advance one hour, that day being only twenty-three hours in length. This would have the effect of deducting one of the bright morning hours when most people are asleep, and adding it to the evening when we are awake, and should find it most useful. This advantage would be retained all summer, till the third Sunday in September, when the standard time would recede one hour, and become once more Greenwich time. The Corporations of London, Manchester, Liverpool, Glasgow, and Birmingham are the principal local authorities out of four hundred and thirty which have passed resolutions in favor of the adoption of this scheme. If the bill were now law, the country would be enjoying its advantages, which would gradually become more marked till, in the height of summer, out-of-door sports could be carried on till ten o'clock. Even in that part of the year when people begin to say "the evenings are drawing in," it would be quite practicable to do what is only now possible in June.

It may well be asked why has not such a simple measure been introduced now, seeing that it has been introduced more than once.

There are several reasons, one of which is the conflicting reports of the two Select Committees which have considered the bill. Another is lack of time to give it the attention it deserves. It is not a Government measure, for the Administration has not realized what gratitude they would win from all classes of the people once the law was in force. Another reason is that certain somewhat hide-bound theorists call it "zeerymandering the clock," rendering time, which depends on the sun, purely artificial. These objectors forget that for every place west of Greenwich, the time is already artificial, i.e., it is not local time, but the time as it appears to the astronomer in Greenwich Park. It would be just as easy to have English "summer time" an hour of retardation of English "winter time" when once conventionalized—as it is to have the time in the West of England perpetually a quarter of an hour to twenty minutes in advance of true time—the state of things which exists at present. Another reason urged against its adoption is the alleged dislocation of cross-channel steamer-train services if English time were alterable. The reply to that is that in a week every Continental traveler would know the date of the change in English time, and in practice there would be no difficulty whatever.

As for the British railway, it would make no change. Their time tables would remain as they are. The times would have changed, and they would have changed with them. It would probably make a very real difference to their earnings, as many more journeys would probably be taken, when the extra hour had made the light evenings a really appreciable period of time. Mr. William Willett, the proposer of the scheme, reckons that at least $12,500,000 a year would be saved in artificial light, and there is no need to labor the obvious advantage which the public health would derive. Is it too much to hope for its adoption before 1919?

Strange Funeral.

Curiously definite instructions for his funeral were made in his will by Mr. Arthur William Squires, of Little Eryham, Lines, Eng., who died a short time ago. The document begins with the following phrase: "Two very serious illnesses within four months, each of which brought me near to death, bring me to this state of mind that this is my last will."

Subject to some small bequest, he left all his property to his wife, and desired that his funeral should be conducted in the plainest possible manner. His coffin was to be of plain deal, with common black mountings, and to be taken on "a float" to the Wesleyan Chapel, and thence to the church gates, whence it was to be carried "underhand" by six bearers named, who were to have a dinner provided for them at a cost of 10s.

He expressly forbade the tolling of the church bell, and directed that "not a single flower" should be placed either on his coffin or in his grave, and that the Wesleyan minister should officiate at his funeral.—London Daily Express.

Centenary of Pansy.

Just one hundred years ago Lady Mary Bennett, a daughter of the Earl of Tankerville, was so struck with the simple beauty of a tiny wildling, viola tricolor, that she collected some of the best plants and gave them careful cultivation, says The Pall Mall Gazette.

The first batch of seedlings raised by her gave such promise that systematic selection was at once instituted, and thereafter the improvement of the genus was taken up by the leading growers. Thus to an enthusiastic amateur we are indebted for one of the most popular and beautiful of our garden flowers, a flower which has marvelously developed in size, and in wonderful and bizarre markings and colorings.

Many fanciful names have been given to the pansy by country folk, the best known of which is heartsease, from the notion that it was efficacious in diseases of the heart. This favorite blossom can indeed boast a longer list of pet names than most of her companions, a sure sign of popularity. Among these are butterfly-flower, kiss-me-quick, herb trinity, three-little-faces-under-a-hood, and love-in-idleness.

Nineteen horses were burned in the third stable fire in Hamilton within a few days. Several other fires are reported from various points.

Ingress and Egress to Royal Hotel Yards

Men are busily engaged in building a new approach on Lindsay-st. to the yard at the rear of the Royal Hotel, and in this regard Engineer Hopkins recently submitted the following letter to the Town Council:

"To give an approach to Mr. McConnell's back yard, either 3 steps can be provided 4 feet wide, with an 8-inch rise. This would require 12 feet of pavement torn up or a graded sidewalk; this would require 52 feet of walk to be torn up, and will give a grade of 5 feet in 52 feet. The grade of the roadway is 3 feet in 50 feet. Besides this, some of the new wall constructed to protect the trees will have to be torn down. Going north from the crossing the walk may either be carried level or graded. If carried level 24 feet must be broken up; if graded 64 feet must be broken.

On the south side, two 5-foot steps with 7-inch rises may be used, or the walk graded 24 feet, being torn up and graded to a grade of 2.81 feet (34 inches) on 50 feet.

Ald. Irvine thought it would be best to put steps on the west side and a slope on the east side.

Mayor Beal—we should treat both sides alike.

Ald. Warren thought that three flat steps (a block wide) on the west side would be the best plan. "If the steps are made long enough it will be all right, and give baby carriages a chance."

Reeve Dobson spoke along the same lines.

Reeve Kylie favored putting down steps.

A Lady Finds Help From Simple Food.

Civilization brings blessings and also responsibilities. The more highly organized we become the more need there is for regularity and natural simplicity in the food we eat.

The laws of body nutrition should be carefully obeyed, and the finer more highly developed brain and nervous system not hampered by a complicated, unwholesome dietary.

A lady of high nervous tension says:

"For fifteen years I was a sufferer from dyspepsia. I confess that an improperly regulated diet was the chief cause of my suffering. Finally, nothing that I ate seemed to agree with my stomach, and life, at times, did not seem worth living.

"I began to take a pessimistic view of everything and saw life through dark blue glass, so to speak. My head became affected with a heavy creeping sensation and I feared paralysis.

"Palpitation of the heart caused me to fear that I might die suddenly. Two years ago, hearing Grape-Nuts so highly spoken of by some estimable friends of mine, I determined to try it.

"The change in my condition was little less than miraculous. In a short time the palpitation, bad feeling in head and body began to disappear and the improvement has continued until at the present time I find myself in better health than I have ever enjoyed.

"My weight has increased 20 lbs. in the last year and life looks bright and sunny to me as it did when I was a child."

BACK TO THE LAND.

Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman is Doing Better in Agriculture.

The Rt. Hon. Walter Runciman bids fair to achieve a greater measure of success at the head of the Board of Agriculture in Great Britain than he did when superintending the education of that country. There can be little doubt as to his ability, but he was never happy when chief of the Board of Education, and in several instances he was the victim of circumstances.

Mr. Runciman is the son of that staunch Radical, Sir Walter Runciman, founder of the Moor Line of steamers. The Runcimans are a nautical family, and both Mr. Runciman's great-grandfathers fought at Trafalgar as midshipmen. The family has also played no small part in the literary world, and it was at the house of his uncle that Mr. Runciman, when a boy, often used to meet Robert Louis Stevenson. According to his account: "Stevenson was generosity itself. Of course, he was egotistic, but his very vanity was part of his charm. He used to stand in the middle of the hearth-rug, with his back to the fire, dressed always in a velvet jacket and waistcoat, and smoke his pipe in silence whilst the rest talked. Then he would suddenly break in, and for the half-hour together weave the most fantastic but brilliant perversions of the subject of discussion. He was a splendid fellow, too. I remember once, when I was six years of age, I was staying at Greenwich, and he had a splendid game together, Louis and I, making boats out of furniture, and having all sorts of delightful adventures—though my aunt did not much like the way he pulled things about to amuse me. After I had gone to bed I woke and heard the voice of Louis Stevenson downstairs. So up I got, and ran down in my nightgown and bare-foot Omemees, Aug. 4.—Mr. Gilbert Glass of London, Ont., an old Omemees, who has not been here for about 60 years, has been paying a visit to his brother, Mr. Wm. Glass, of town. Of the nine that tried the Lower School exams, 8 passed, and of the 11 that tried on the Middle School 9 passed. The record speaks for itself. Congratulations to the successful candidates and the staff.

The Rifle Association held another prize shooting contest on Monday. The scores were lowered considerably owing to the heat, varying winds, mirages and heat waves which occurred frequently because of the rain the previous evening. The best shots made very low scores as a result.

Mr. Bert Courtney, a coming marksman, carried off the first prize. There were several rifle shots present whose scores do not appear, but they did splendidly, considering the unfavorable conditions. The leaders were: M. Sherin 41, T. C. Stephenson 37, J. Courtney 36, I. Toole 34, L. Brooks 34, F. Cunningham 29, Dr. W. Cook 28, H. R. Murray 29. A marksman can win but one first prize in the season.

Miss Annie Shield returned to her home at Mount Pleasant on Tuesday after a visit with her Omemees friends.

Misses L. and W. Beatty were visitors to Peterboro on Tuesday.

Mr. Robt. Thompson visited his parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. N. Thompson, Sturgeon-st., last week.

to the room where all these fellows were smoking and talking.

As a child, young Walter Runciman often went to sea with his father, and when his Cambridge days were over he entered his father's shipping business on Tyne-side. Then he came under the influence of Mr. John Morley, who at the time was one of the members for Newcastle, and resolved to enter public life. He put up for the Newcastle School Board, and was returned along with Miss Stevenson, a Gilt-ton girl, who polled more votes than he did. This election had important results in more sense than one, for Miss Stevenson eventually became Mrs. Runciman.

Mr. Runciman first endeavored to enter Parliament by way of Gray's Inn, but was defeated. At a later period when on a yachting tour round Norway he received a telegram asking him to stand for Oldham. His opponent was Mr. Winston Churchill, whom he defeated. Not long afterwards, Mr. Churchill turned the tables, and Mr. Runciman had to seek a refuge at Dewsbury.
