A Floor for Horse Stalls. Where mares are kept a tight floor in the stall is not especially inconvenient, but with horses the case is otherwise. For them such a floor as is shown in the accompanying illustration is best suited for keeping their coats from becoming stained, says The American Agriculturist. The stable floor beneath the flooring of the stall should slope a little so that the liquids that run through the openings in the stall flooring will be conveyed down behind the stall, where they may be absorbed in the litter. The pieces of FLOOR FOR HORSE STALLS. which the stall floor is made may be five inches wide laid one-half inch apart. They are shown farther apart than this in the cut in order to make the matter plain. There should be four cross bearings under the stall floor if two-inch stuff is to be used.

A Hint About Hay Selling. Timothy hay usually brings a good price in market, yet it is inferior to clover hay, and is said to rank in feeding value on a par with marsh grass or salt hay. But horses like it, and it is always in demand in the cities. Farmers who sell their timothy and retain their clover will get better prices, and at the same time the manure heap will be made more valuable by using the clover on the farm. It is the feeding value that the farmer should always consider. There is an intrinsic value in farm products as well as in metals, and all articles can be used on the farm if necessary.

Nova Scotia Plums. A comparative statement prepared by W. C. Archibald of Earnscliffe Gardens, Wolfville, N.S., of the plum crop of Nova Scotia shows in 1896 a full crop, carefully computed to be 100,000 ten-pound baskets. In 1897 there were almost no plums; in 1898 a full crop rotted badly, and for 1899 there is about half a crop. The Earnscliffe Gardens in 1896 marketed 4,900 ten-pound baskets; in 1897, 1,100 baskets; in 1898, 1,500, and in 1899, 7,800 baskets or one-eighth of the crop of the whole Province of Nova Scotia.—Co-operative Farmer.
