There is a bad star over Texas. Following the unparalleled Galveston horror, the Colorado river has gone on the rampage. Urgent messages were sent to the towns along its course that up toward the mountain it was 10 feet higher than ever before.
A young woman named Rehill was found on Cambridge-st., opposite Wakeley's terrace, on Monday night, in an apparently unconscious state. She was taken into Mr. Wakeley's, and Dr. C. Jeffer applied restoratives. Her actions were such as to cause suspicion that she was only pretending to be ill. It is said that a box of tablets of some sort were on her person. It may be that this gave rise to the story that she had taken poison. Next morning it was current on the street that she was dead. This proved untrue for she was quickly in her normal condition. She is a domestic in town and her relatives say she has threatened to take poison and that they have had her under observation to prevent it.
Mr. D. R. Anderson returned from Toronto Tuesday night, after successfully defending Dr. McAlpine against a charge of malpractice before Justice Ferguson at the civil assize court. The action was brought for unstated damages by Mr. T. Graham, formerly of Lindsay, but now of Beaverbrook, who charged that Dr. McAlpine had been unskillful and negligent in performing an operation on his wife. Expert evidence was taken and his lordship decided that there was no evidence whatever of unskillfulness or negligence on behalf of the defendant, and that no operation had been performed, but that a doctor had legitimately diagnosed the case. The action was dismissed with costs.
Mrs. Alfred Edney has received word from her daughter Lilly of Galveston, Texas, that both she and her sister Mamie escaped from the recent storm there, although they lost most of their belongings. She says: "Galveston is a wreck. There are hundreds upon hundreds of dead bodies floating before our eyes. I have not seen Mamie; I tried yesterday but could not get there. I walked in water over my waist and climbed over dead people and houses blown to the ground, but I could only get as far as 12th street. Beyond that, every house was on the ground." Mr. N. L. Campbell, who is in the Oklahoma territory, writes the following sentence regarding the disaster: "Just imagine bodies washed seven miles inland, and then blowing 120 miles an hour, bodies seen on the ocean 150 miles from Galveston, and rain-drops cutting like a knife."

Talking among the neighbors a while ago it came out that one day this summer John Randle of South Verulam was cutting a big hollow cedar that was laying on the bank of Emily Creek, and came upon a military leather belt and brass buckle on which was stamped Canadian Militia, 1822. Taking it over, one with another, we made it out that in '37 a few of the settlers of Verulam were called out, and that one night a party of them in which were Hamon and Mr. Hadley, were on their way home and struck the bank of the creek too long after dark to go any further. They had canced from Port Perry, were tired and so camped for the night right there. One of the party, Josh, very likely, lost his rifle, and the belt and buckle found in the old log must be the one that was lost on that night. They made a better brand of leather in the old days than is made now, for the belt is in a good state of preservation. The rifle has never yet turned up.—Bob. Ind.

For the third time in five days a good crowd is at the Academy. As we go to press Cowslip Farm is being presented by a capable company.
Uncle Josh Sprucey was well received on Monday night. It is a bright New England comedy with a thrill of tragedy here and there. The colors are all strong. Light and shade are very distinct. The laugh is the heartiest and the anxious in manner take a severe strain. Nothing is funnier than uncle Josh's proposal nor more tragic than the sawmill scene. The music specialties were excellent. Everybody was well pleased.
On Friday night Quo Vadis was presented. Many had read the remarkable book which is dramatized in this play and many more had heard of it. That, and the presence of so many people in town on the presence of the fair resulted in a house that put standing room at a premium. Opinions differ about the merit of the play, but those who pronounced it the finest ever seen in their verdict. In a upon which to base and have the arduous task to which they accomplished it is a high tribute to their skill. No one should miss the lessons in pure human affection, and profound religious charity and endurance that Quo Vadis teaches.

A Cheap Trial Trip.

Church Notes

Next Sunday the Rev. S. C. Moore, B.A., B.D., of Millbrook, will occupy the pulpit of the Queen-st. Methodist church at both services, 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. The evening services promises to be one of special interest. The choir will favor the congregation with special music. The Rev. Mr. Moore is one of the ablest young men in the Quinte conference.
Rev. Dr. Workman conducted the services at Cambridge-st. Methodist church last Sunday. His sermon, were models of teaching discourse. Morning text: "The love of Christ constraineth me." Good conduct has at least three motives: (1) Fear. That is an animal emotion but very effective in some men. It has no moral quality. (2) Duty. There is no higher motive. Here a sense of oughtness sways the moral agent to right action. It is a fundamental moral law. Not higher than duty, but by far richer, love is the motive that should dictate men's actions. In military life these three motives were illustrated by the conscript, the militiaman and the volunteer. "The love of Christ" is either the love for a man or a man's love for Christ. The speaker favored the idea that it meant rather the sort of love that Christ felt, and this when roused in human hearts is the supreme motive and guide to correct living.
At night the Rev. Dr. Workman, on the Christian and pronounced the three questions about it suggested by the three passages in which it is used in scripture: (1) What is a Christian? (2) What makes a Christian? (3) What does a Christian? The first passage dealt the disciples were called Christians. The second was Acts 16. Mr. Job Scott's reply to Paul "Almost thou persuadest me, etc." This the doctor declared an erroneous translation. The words really were "Dost thou with a few words persuade me to be a Christian?" meaning that Paul was too hasty in asking him to say that he believed the prophets. The third passage was that of Peter "If ye suffer as Christians, etc." An amazing amount of information was grouped about these headings. A prevailing thought was that a Christian may be either nominal or real, undeveloped or mature and that nothing but his possession of the spirit of Christ gives a man a claim to that title. One striking sentence: "Up to the measure of his moral capacity and to the degree of his spiritual development every man is a Christian." The doctor declared that many men mature in years and supposedly mature in christian life would when excited or angry, act as meanly, write as bitterly and deal as arbitrarily as the worst of people. Only by and up to his possession of the spirit of Christ has a man a right to call himself a Christian. It is the keynote of Dr. Workman's sermons. His delivery and manner are simple, and his analysis and statement so clear that no one ought to misunderstand them. The musical service was very effective.
On Monday night the congregational tea was held. Such a crowd was there that provisions toward the last were at a premium. After tea Dr. Workman gave an address. He was suffering from hoarseness but spoke for over half an hour on "The Sort of Revival that is Needed." It is (1) a formative one—teaching the children; (2) ethical—insisting on good living; (3) devotional—cultivating reverence and the forms of religion; (4) biblical—leading to bible study. The doctor said very clearly that he disapproved of the "senseless uncontrolled excitement" that often marked revival meetings. Appeals to reason were necessary. Through reason conscience is reached. As in art, letters, commerce and other things about which men are apt to become indifferent, so in religion times of revival are necessary, but efforts should be made in ways that are not obnoxious to people of developed mind. The time when other sorts were effective has passed away.

The Mariposa Fair

The annual fall fair of the Mariposa Agricultural Society was held at Oakwood on Tuesday and Wednesday, and was a decided success. The weather was fine, but for some reason the attendance was not up to the usual standard. The display of ladies' work was well to the front, while the fine arts were fully up to the excellence of former years. The dairy exhibit was really fine, there being a fine display of the gilt-edged article. Mrs. D. Dundas captured double honors in butter. Near by was a fine range of home-made bread. Miss McMillan of Thorah being the successful exhibitor, while Mrs. Thos. Webster secured the red ticket for home-made buns. The entry list in horses was in keeping with the importance of the township. White entry class was well represented by entries made by such breeders as John Campbell, Robt. Eakins, Robt. Egieson, J. Brady and Daniel Cayley. Sheep and swine were well represented by entries by Messrs. S. Metherell, and Thos. Russell in Leicesters; Wm. Thorndike and W. P. King in Cotswolds; and John Campbell, A. McKay and A. McMillan in Shropshire sheep. The principal exhibitors in swine were Messrs. Geo. A. Mark, Thos. Russe, L. W. P. King, James Taylor and Wm. Thorndike. Mr. R. Robertson showed two fine cutters, three buggies and a substantial farm wagon. The speeding events were well contested and resulted as follows:

Sporting Notes

WOMEN HATE HITCHES

The tribulations that a contrary and unreliable Kitchen Stove will cause in an otherwise well conducted household are beyond description. On wash-days there is the hitch about the fire, or draught, or something anyway which keeps the work back and makes everything drag. On days when baking is to be done there is another hitch, and the oven won't work, and thousands of good victuals are spoiled through the year because that everlasting hitch in something or other about that old stove, either cooked them to death or only half through. Why not end this bother and get one of our Souvenir or Happy Thought Ranges? Housekeepers will see their good points at a glance. To be had at

JAS. BOXALL'S Kent Street, Lindsay
