The Fall Fair—Erring Church Members (By "An Autocrat")

The directors of the agricultural society are doing a good work in providing for the fall fair, and the public owes them gratitude. To bring together the best products of this section is a stimulus to producers to attain to an evidently possible degree of perfection. It is therefore a matter of regret that interest in the essential features of the show is wanting and that a demand for swifter horse races and more varied special attractions has succeeded. Last year the stock pens were deserted and the crowd hung about the platform. I should regret the passing of the fall show, either into nothingness or into a sort of circus. Let there be horse races, not run by professional trotters, but by those locally bred, so as to encourage breeding of better steeds by our farmers. Let there be athletic exhibitions and, if need be, acrobatic performances engaged in, not by professional, but by locals and thus encourage the development of skill and muscle through the fair. I dislike exceedingly to see the tawdry, attenuated garments of the female fair dancer; but I dislike more to see a gaping crowd, often located lower than her platform, amused by the immodesty of a fellow-being. In this I am not finding fault with the directors of the society. They see all the evil of the situation and regret it. Their theory is that the fair is valued by the majority for amusement and their gate money makes the giving of a wider list of prizes possible, so that the fair is helped. There is something in that, but one side or other must prevail.

There are a few matters about the fair that might be improved. The placarding of pens might be more accurate and "Polled Angus" or other misnomer not be carelessly left above the Jersey. I am a lover of horses but they are almost never are out or shut up. On the whole we have a good exhibition and even if to please the crowd the names of worthy and dignified men must appear at the bottom of a very light program, we may enjoy the better part and be thankful for the stimulus to improvement received by the farmers and the pleasure of an outing for all.

The church is an honored and honorable institution. Any imperfection in it comes from the entirely human beings who are its members. Safeguard its doors as you may, there creep into it unworthy ones who for trade or social position would make merchandise of God himself. These incur the main injury themselves, but the reputation, and where they are numerous, sometimes the character of the church, suffers also, offending earnest souls without, who need the church and its ministrations. It should be the desire of every good man in and out of the church to have it kept pure. I therefore applaud the refusal of Judge Elliott to exercise special clemency toward a breaker of the laws on the ground of his standing in the church. It sometimes occurs that, despite a formerly upright life, a Christian may fall under a sudden insidious temptation to awake to a repentance more bitter than that of other men; but in the solemn portals of justice, such a one must be content to suffer that righteousness be vindicated. If any man beg for mercy, let it be the ignorant and froward. No good man will plead his good life. No worthy church member will seek to be defended by his Christian profession.

presents were numerous, useful and costly showing the high esteem in which the bride is held by her friends. After tea the happy couple left for Lindsay where they took the train for Toronto, Niagara and other places. The bride's travelling suit was of pearly gray ladies' cloth, with white silk waist. There were guests from North Dakota, Assinabota, Lacombe, Ontario, Omsme, Valentin, Toronto and Janerville.
