smiled, "that I can't well see how we can show independence right now."
"Well, I think I see a way," said Miller, the flush stealing over his face again. "You see, there is no doubt that Wilson is on his high horse simply because he thinks he could call on you for that $25,000 and put you to some trouble raising it without—without, I say, throwing your land on the market. I can't blame him." Miller went on, smiling, "for it's only what any business man would do who is out for profit, but we must not knuckle to him."
"Huh, huh," Bishop grunted in deep despondency.
"How do you propose to get around the knuckling process?" asked Alan, who had caught the depression influencing his parent.
"I'd simply take up that note," said the lawyer. "You know under the contract we are privileged to pay it to-morrow if we wish. It would simply paralyze him. He's so confident that you can't take it up that he has not even written to ask if you want to renew it or not. Yes, he's confident that he'll rake in that security—so confident that he has been, as you know, secretly buying land near yours."
"But," exclaimed Alan, "Ray, you know we—father has invested that money, and the truth is that he and mother have already had so much worry over the business that they would rather let the land go at what was raised on it than to—run any more risks."
Bishop groaned out his approval of this elucidation of his condition and sat silently nodding his head. The very thought of further risks stunned and chilled him.
Miller's embarrassment now descend-

"Ah," she said seriously, "if you could only do it," mother—and yes, to me. I hunger for independence."
"Then it shall be done," he said fervently.

CHAPTER XXVIII

As the elevator in the big building was taking Rayburn Miller up to the offices of the Southern Land and Timber company many reflections passed hurriedly through his mind.
"You are going to get the usual cold shoulder from Wilson," he mused, "but he'll put it up against something about as warm as he's touched in many a day. If you don't make him squirm, it will be only because you don't want to."
Wilson was busy at his desk looking over bills of lading, receipts and other papers and now and then giving instructions to a typewriter in the corner of the room.
"Ah, how are you, Miller?" he said indifferently, giving the caller his hand without rising. "Down to see the city again, eh?"
Rayburn leaned on the top of the desk and knocked the ashes from his cigar with the tip of his little finger.
"Partly that and partly business," he returned carelessly.
"Two birds, eh?"
"That's about it. I concluded you were not coming up our way soon, and so I decided to drop in on you."
"Yes, glad you did," Wilson glanced at the papers on his desk and frowned.
"I wish I had more time at my disposal. I'd run up to the club with you and show you my Kentucky thoroughbreds, but I really am rushed, today particularly."
"Oh, I haven't a bit of time to spare myself! I take the afternoon train home. The truth is I came to see you for my clients, the Bishops."
"Ah, I see," Wilson's face clouded over by some mechanical arrangement known only to himself. "Well, I can't really report any progress in that matter," he said. "All the company think Bishop's figures are away out of reason, and the truth is right now we are over head and ears in operations in other quarters, and—well, you see how it is?"
"Yes, I think I do," Miller smoked a moment. "In fact, I told my clients last month that the matter was not ab-

Shoemaker's Backache

The constant bending over that of necessity a shoemaker must do when at work comes hard on the back and hard on the kidneys. Backache, lame, weak and sore back are the bug-bears of a shoemaker's existence. The kidneys get cramped and strained, are unable to filter the blood as they should—they tell of their disordered condition by making the back ache and pain. There isn't much use rubbing on liniments or sticking on plasters when the prime cause of the ache lies in the kidneys. The remedy that is most effectual for a shoemaker's backache, is Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets.

sorbing your attention, and so they gave up counting on you." Wilson so far forgot his pose that he looked up in a startled sort of way and began to study Miller's smoke wrapped profile.

"You say they are not—have not been counting on my company to—buy their land?"

"Why, no," said Miller in accents well resembling those of slow and genuine surprise. "Why, you have not shown the slightest interest in the matter since the day you made the loan, and naturally they ceased to think you wanted the land. The only reason I called was that the note is payable to-day, and—"

"Oh, yes, by Jove! That was careless of me. The interest is due. I knew it would be all right, and I had no idea you would bother to run down for that. Why, my boy, we could have drawn for it, you know."

Miller smiled inwardly as he looked calmly and fixedly through his smoke into the unsuspecting visage upturned to him.

"But the note itself is payable to-day," he said, closely on the alert for a facial collapse, "and, while you or I might take up a paper for $25,000 through a bank, old-fashioned people like Mr. and Mrs. Champion would prefer to have it done by an agent. That's why I came."

Miller in silent satisfaction saw the face of his antagonist fall to pieces like an artificial flower suddenly shattered.

"Pay the note?" gasped Wilson.

"Why?"

Miller puffed at his cigar and gazed at his victim as if slightly surprised over the assumption that his clients had not all along intended to avail themselves of that condition in their contract.

"You mean that the Bishops are ready to?" Wilson began again on another breath—"to pay us the $25,000?"

"And the interest for six months," quietly added Miller, reaching for a match on the desk. "I reckon you've got the note here. I don't want to miss my train."

Wilson was a good business man, but his Puritanical training in New England had not fitted him for wily diplomacy.

"Of course they can take up their note today if they wish," he said, with alarmed frankness. "I was not counting on it, though." He rose to his feet. Miller's watchful eye detected a certain trembling of his lower lip. He thrust his hands into his pockets nervously, and in a tone of open irritation he said to the young man at the typewriter: "Brown, I wish you'd let up on that infernal clicking. Sometimes I can stand it, and then again I can't. You can do those letters in the next room."

When the young man had gone out, carrying his machine, Wilson turned to Miller. "As I understand it, you personally have no interest in the Bishop property?"

"Oh, not a dollar," smiled the lawyer.

"I'm only acting for them."

"Then—Wilson drove his hands into his pockets again—"perhaps you wouldn't mind telling me if the Bishops are on trade with other parties. Are they?"

Miller smiled and shook his head. "As their lawyer, Mr. Wilson, I simply couldn't answer that question."

The blow was well directed, and it struck a vulnerable spot.

"I beg your pardon," Wilson stammered. "I did not mean to suggest that you would betray confidence." He
