Canadian Authors

On Wednesday afternoon the West Ops Women's Institute held a very interesting meeting on Mrs. George Darke's lawn, with a goodly number in attendance.

A social half hour was spent at the close of the meeting over the refreshments, which were served by Mrs. J. A. White and Mrs. A. M. Paton.

At the above meeting a letter was read from the Department of Agriculture regarding demonstration lectures in domestic science.

Mr. McDougall's interesting paper is as follows: Madam President and Ladies,—I deem it an honour to be present to address this meeting here to-day.

It is a hopeful sign of the times that recognition is being taken of the fact that we have not risen to any great heights nor developed to any great extent in the matter of literature either in urban or rural homes.

A vast change has taken place in the social life of the farming community during the last 30, 40 or 50 years. Pioneer days have passed away, and we no longer see the man in homespun clothing.

In the olden days there was a struggle for existence in battling with the giants of the forest that called forth the better elements of humanity, that engendered a brotherly feeling that gave a charm to that strenuous life.

No doubt much pleasure is derived from the tilling, the sowing and the reaping, stock-raising, poultry and fruit culture, and from the various forms of amusement in vogue in different localities.

Great changes have taken place in literature during the last half century, as well as in other phases of our life.

During the early days the struggle for the necessities of life prevented people from devoting much attention to the study of literature.

eighties literature found a small place on our school curriculum, but for a long time the subject was badly taught, but even this small step in advance was the means of bringing me in contact with some of our best authors.

This is not dealing with Canadian authors, but it goes to show how much pleasure and profit may be derived from reading standard authors when their acquaintance is formed.

Ernest Seaton Thompson, author, artist and naturalist, of Scotch descent, was born in England but removed to Toronto when he was five years old.

Chas. Sangster, a native of Kingston, deserves great credit for what he has contributed in the face of many a disadvantage and under many a handicap.

It would not be either interesting or profitable to take you over the whole ground covered by our men of letters, and we will therefore content ourselves by referring to a number of our authors.

The name of Dr. Drummond needs no introduction to a Lindsay audience, as many of us heard him recite his Johnny Corbeau, The Habitant, and several others of his own composition.

Rev. C. W. Gordon (Ralph Connor), whose literary efforts have attracted the attention of many readers all over the English speaking world, was born in Ontario.

Any who have not heard of Nellie McClung or Miss L. M. Montgomery have a pleasure in store, and should lose no time in securing copies of "Sowing Seeds in Danny," "Second Chance," "Arm of Green Gables," and "Among Avon Lee."

among the best writers of fiction, the nature shall be productive or sterile. The mind may be trained to meditate on great themes instead of giving itself up to idle reverie.

Pauline Johnson, the daughter of a Chief of the Mohawks, has entertained audiences from one end of this country to the other with songs and recitations of her own composition.

J. W. Bengough, the best caricaturist in Canada, if not in the world, born in Ontario, and educated at Whitby, was always a popular entertainer.

Chas. D. Roberts' animal stories are always well received. He has contributed considerable prose and verse, but the absence of any direct vivid treatment of human life or criticism of life which enhances the attention of even the careless reader prevents him from ranking with the of a Presbyterian clergyman, and is great poet.

Ernest Seaton Thompson, author, artist and naturalist, of Scotch descent, was born in England but removed to Toronto when he was five years old.

Chas. Sangster, a native of Kingston, deserves great credit for what he has contributed in the face of many a disadvantage and under many a handicap.

It might easily continue, and tell of Wilfred Campbell, Agnes Maud Macchar, Goldwin Smith, Hon. Joseph Howe, R. E. Knowles, and others of possessing some merit, but I fail to see the advantage arising from a further pursuit along this line.

This does not mean that the best things to be gotten out of books are reserved for people of leisure; but on the contrary are oftenest possessed by those whose labors are many and whose leisure is limited.

The Ernie Marks Stock Company, supporting Ernie and Kitty Marks, will be with us again for the Fair at the Academy of Music in a new line of up-to-date plays and high-class singing, dancing and novelty vaudeville acts.

Spanking does not cure children of bed-wetting. There is a constitutional cause for this trouble. Mrs. M. Summers, Box 25 Windsor, Ont., will send free to any mother her successful home treatment, with full instructions.

Chas. Sangster, a native of Kingston, deserves great credit for what he has contributed in the face of many a disadvantage and under many a handicap.

It is a comparatively easy matter to talk of authors and their works, but there is no royal road to culture, the goal of all true reading.
