The Bobcaygeon fair was held on Friday. It was, as usual, a field day for that village and the township of which it is the capital. The singers were 150 school children under the direction of Principal E. A. Bryson of the Public School and Miss Armstrong, his assistant. Their rendering of several patriotic and other airs was much enjoyed by the people. In the building the exhibit was equal in quality to that made at any fair in the country. Grains, vegetables, fruit, flowers, honey, dairy and domestic products and the mercantile exhibits were very fine. Upstairs the display of fancy work crowded the space and was beyond doubt the finest seen in the country this year. The Central fair did not contain a third of the amount or anything better.

The live stock was not quite so numerous as usual. It fell off in sheep and hogs especially. But in horses and cattle it was all that could be desired. CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IS SCIENTIFIC CHRISTIANITY

Vosburg of Rochester on Tuesday Night of Last Week

A number of Christian Scientists from town drove to Bobcaygeon on Tuesday night of last week to hear a lecture delivered by Rev. A. R. Vosburg of Rochester. His subject was the main heading of the followby the mustering thousands from all himself

All the question that may arise as to the merits and demerits of Christian Science will focus themselves in Truth that was once revealed, and this: Is it rightly named? Has it the orderly, logical, demonstrable character that belongs to Science; Has it the high ideal of righteousness and love that constitute Christianity? The final answer to this and Christian Science asks to be and will be judges by the standard of the Master,-"By their fruits ye shall know them. Christian Science does not primar-

Christian Science comes not to destroy, but to fulfil. It linked all perplexed meanings Into one perfect peace ; Then trembled away into silence As it were loth to cease."

Summer's Close

The following stanzas by the Canadian poet, Archibald Lampman, contain several realistic descriptions of Canada in the early fall.

Now hath the summer reached her golden close, And, lost amid her cornfields, bright of soul, Scarcely perceives from her divine repose How near, how swift, the inevitable goal ! Still, still she smiles, though from her careless feet The bounty and the beautiful strength are gone, And through the soft long wandering days goes on, The silent sere decadence, sad and sweet.

Already in the outland wilderness The forests echo with unwonted dins ; In clamoring gangs the gathering woodmen press Northward, and the stern winter's toil begins. Around the long, low shanties, where rough lines Break the sealed dreams of many an unnamed lake, Already in the frost-clear morn awake The crash and thunder of the falling pines.

Where the tilled earth, with all its fields set free, Naked and yellow from the harvest lies, By many a loft and busy granary, The hum and tumult of the threshers rise ; There the tanned farmers labor without slack, Till twilight deepens round the spouting mill, Feeding the loosened sheaves, or, with fierce will, Pitching waist-deep upon the dusty stack.

Still a brief while, ere the old year quite pass, Our wandering steps and wistful eyes shall greet The leaf, the water, the beloved grass ; Still from these haunts and this accustomed seat I see the wood-wrapped city, swept with light, The blue, long-shadowed distance, and between, The dotted farm lands, with their parcelled green, The dark pine forest, and the watchful night.
