LADY NORA

champagne, instance," she says disagreeably. "It is exceedingly bad style and makes you talk and laugh too much."

Yolande's great, star-like eyes, glittering through their thick, dark lashes, fix themselves with a sarcastic smile on Lady Nora.

"Do you envy me my high spirits, belle-mere?" she asks coolly. "That is unkind of you. If champagne can make me glad, nothing else on earth can, so you oughtn't to grudge it to me."

"Besides," she adds, deliberately filling up her glass again, "if this were poison, and I chose to drink it, I would; and I wish it were."

"One would think you were mad, to hear you talk!" her ladyship says, rather perturbed, glancing at the girl's curling lip and flashing eyes.

"What a horridly excitable girl you are, Yolande! Don't drink any more champagne just now, my dear—please!"

"Coaxing is better than scratching, belle-mere," Yolande says, with a scornful little smile, as she puts aside the untasted glass at once, and they rise from the table.

"I did not know you required coaxing to make you do what was right," Lady Nora responds coldly, knitting her brows and looking at her curiously. "I think, if I am not mistaken, I have heard you utter some very pretty and proper sentiments about doing duty for duty's sake, and following the right without hope for reward, and finding pleasure in self-sacrifice, and other excellent sentiments of the same kind."

"Oh, we have changed all that, Yolande says curtly. "I have done with pretty sentiments, Lady Nora. You will never have any more trouble to eradicate them in me."

"I don't understand you!" Lady Nora rejoins coldly, but uneasily, wondering if Yolande, embittered, proud, hard, and worldly, will be at all the easy-managed, respectful, attentive, gentle girl whose meekness and reticence and sad-heartedness have so often provoked her anger.

And yet in her own room that same night, which is to inaugurate a new career, as she tells herself in the frenzy of the pain of her bruised and breaking heart, poor Yolande Glynné picks up a few spoiled, half-written sheets of her pretty little woeful romantic story and weeps over them until she is blind and stupid with exhaustion. She has destroyed a thing she loved so well, torn away something from her heart and life, and the void is aching horribly.

The next day Eastbourne is left behind, and London is reached; and Yolande Glynné quits the old paths of her life, and begins zealously hard to live Lady Nora's life—empty, meretricious, feverish, joyless, as she knows already it will be.

She lives through it, though hating it and tiring of it very soon; despising it, yet following it; loathing it as the wretched substitute for the joys of earth's best happiness—love and fellowship—yet clinging to it in her miserable loneliness of body and mind through long, dragging weeks and months until another year has nearly run its course.

And in the June following Yolande Glynné and her mother-in-law are at home at No. 9, Rutland Gardens, once more.

The Pacific Salvage Company has burst, and swallowed up thousands of Mr. Silas Dormer's money. Some other speculations have turned out very unsatisfactorily, and business men remarked shrewdly to each other that "Dormer has burned his fingers badly," but Yolande has never known her uncle so averse from money-saving, so determined on money-spending, as he has been this summer. He is keeping up the two establishments at Fair View and in town; he gives dinner parties and evening parties this season; he has bought a very handsome carriage, and exchanged his pair of quiet bays for very showy, high-stepping chestnuts.

Lady Nora and he are the best of friends, and her ladyship sometimes thinks with positive satisfaction how wonderfully well the erratic, obstinate conduct of poor Dallas has turned out to her advantage. To all intents and purposes, she is now the mistress of a fine house, with carriages and servants at command, and ample resources.

Poor old Miss Dormer stays at Fair View for the most part, and Lady Nora plays the brilliant hostess at Mr. Dormer's entertainments. Her daughter-in-law never interferes, never outshines her; people come and go at Lady Nora's afternoon teas, and join Lady Nora's supper parties after the Opera, and ask other people afterwards, "What that Mrs. Glynné, that tall, slender, quiet girl?" They mistake her sometimes for a paid companion or poor relation of the brilliant little hostess, with her radiant toilettes and flashing jewels.

But as the human heart—at least, the heart of a Lady Nora—is not easily satisfied with "gold and gear," so her ladyship is not contented with even her present prosperity so long as she feels that she is "shut out from association with my order," she says, with patrician disdain for all the rich City people and professional people and "upper middle-class folk" who gratefully court her notice and accept her invitations, and crowd after her wherever she pleases to beckon them, because she is an Earl's daughter and the widow of an Earl's son.

She soon begins to look back and hanker in restless dissatisfaction after the notice of the Pentreath family once more, though she hates Pentreath and his host and hostess, and has good reason to know that no invitation is likely ever to be extended to her to visit the place.

But a visit to the gloomy old house in Wales for a few weeks in the shooting season will mean "open sesame" to half a dozen other houses which are closed to her now; and Lady Nora not being a proud woman, determines to achieve her object, no matter how or by whom it is accomplished.

So in this difficulty she bethinks her of Yolande. Her daughter-in-law has been very useful to her hitherto—she will no doubt continue to be useful; and therefore in the present instance she does admirably as a cat's-paw—without her own knowledge or consent—to obtain from the pious and eccentric Countess of Pentreath her friendly and compassionate notice of poor Yolande Glynné, her kinsman's forsaken and heart-broken wife, and—as a matter of course—of poor Lady Nora, his forsaken and heart-broken mother.

So she indites long letters to the Countess, in which she speaks of Yolande as her "beloved and suffering child," and delicately hints that a little gracious friendliness on the part of the Glynné family "might be blessed in producing a happier state of mind in my worse than widowed daughter."

In spite of hypochondria and oddity, Lady Pentreath is known to be generous, kind-hearted, and religious. And Lady Nora, with her trick of religious phrasology, her assumption of maternal love and abnegation, appeals to all three qualities of Lady Pentreath's nature.

THE METHODIST CHURCH SPEAKS ON MODERN SOCIAL QUESTIONS

Some of the Most Popular Evils of the Day are Officially Condemned

At the recent meeting of the General Conference of the Methodist church held in Winnipeg, a memorial was presented to the conference which drew attention to "the unfortunate lack of harmony at present prevailing between the equity of the gospel proclaimed by Jesus Christ, and the inequitable conditions which mark our present social relationships."

The conference appointed a committee on social questions and upon considering the memorial above referred to, that committee presented to conference a report that contained, among others, the following paragraphs:

THE GOLDEN RULE
The church of Christ must not be an uninterested spectator of events which are charged with moral as well as material significance. She is under commission to bear testimony to the authority and practicability of the Golden Rule, even in the most difficult relations of life.

A LIVING WAGE
All legitimate efforts should be made to secure to every worker a living wage; constant and vigilant efforts should be put forth to reduce the hours of labor where practicable, and secure such sanitary conditions as will, as far as possible, make work a pleasure, while affording leisure for recreation and for social, intellectual and religious development.

SATURDAY HALF-HOLIDAY
The weekly day of rest and opportunity for worship should be preserved as a sacred right of the working man, while the weekly half-holiday (on Saturday when available), should be steadily advocated as a good thing in itself, and a most valuable safeguard of the Lord's day.

TRUSTS AND UNIONS
The committee desire to say that they recognize the right of the manufacturer when available, to combine with other manufacturers for the purpose of reducing the expense of distribution. They recognize on the other side of the issue the liberty of the laborer and the artisan, to organize and associate for the purpose of protecting themselves against infringement of their rights.

It is true that the situation produced by the exercise of these rights is fraught with menace to the peace and welfare of the public, whose interest should be the supreme care of the state.

ARBITRATION—STATE OWNERSHIP
The committee, therefore, venture to suggest that the conference should favor a law providing for compulsory arbitration of labor disputes, and would further suggest the advisability of some system of industrial partnership where practicable; and in due course the assumption by the civil government of the control of public utilities, and the development of the natural resources of the country, as it is found this can be done to the public advantage.

WORK OR STARVE
We have come to a time when it is imperative that we should realize that no man capable of working has a right to the enjoyment of life, who is not by hand or brain developing the material, the mental, or moral resources of the country.

CLEAN ELECTIONS
We are confronted with the condition of things in which the public has become quite skeptical as to the possibility of conducting honorable election contests. We desire to impress upon the members of the church the absolute necessity for the well-being of society, that the purity of the ballot-box should be sacredly preserved, and that the Christian elector should remember that the franchise is entrusted to him as a man for the representation of his highest convictions, and as a Christian for the establishment of the kingdom of heaven.

We would remind the poor man that in selling his vote, he is damaging his own class and perpetuating subservience to those who are diseased with the greed of gold and misused power.

We regard extreme partisanship in politics as a menace to the prosperity of the state, much to be deplored, defeating moral issues, and making its victims yielding tools of political demagogues, whose ascendancy means the debasement of the people.

GAMBLING AND SPECULATION
Gambling, we are assured, is increasing in our Dominion. It carries members of all grades of society off their feet in the whirl of excitement, with this easy, insinuating and captivating process of loss or gain produces.

The older forms of gambling through games of chance receive instant and almost universal reprobation. But certain forms of vicious speculation of more recent appearance, and which can scarcely be distinguished from gambling, are so disguised by their associations, and so intimately connected with legitimate business, that it is almost impossible for even the trained moralist to point out precisely where their virus lies.

Wealth results from the application of intellectual and physical labor to natural conditions and resources, and the proper mode of its acquisition is by intelligent industry. Reckless and imprudent speculation of all kinds should, therefore, be condemned.

While stock and produce exchanges have their place and legitimate use in the financial and commercial fabric, the rush of people into blind speculation on the exchange is detrimental to moral safety, mental quiet, and true efficiency in life.

Mariposa Council Proceedings

Mariposa Council met on Oct. 13th, 1902, members all present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Requests Made by Ratepayers.
Mr. S. Washington was present to ask the Council for some old plank to widen the walk from King-st. north to Mrs. James' lot, but the request was not granted.

Mr. Elias Metherell desired the bonus granted by the Council for building wire fences, and as Mr. Metherell's fence is made of barbed wire and was built before the present by-law forbidding payment for barbed wire fences came into force, the Council could only grant the bonus under the old by-law.

Mr. James Rogers and son were present desiring the Council to replace the culvert taken up on the side road between lots 15 and 16, cor. 6. Mr. Rogers maintained that the judgment given in the suit of Smith vs Rogers gives him the privilege of draining his water on James Smith's farm. Mr. Suggitt argued that the system of the drainage for which the township contributed a part is intended to replace the wooden culvert, and thereby save the corporation the expense of maintaining a culvert for its future. The Clerk was requested to write Mr. Arnold on the matter, and to get the Solicitor's opinion as to the township's liability in the said culvert.

Mr. John Pogue addressed the Council in reference to some drainage matters, but according to the statements given by Mr. Pogue the Council preferred not assisting him for the present, as he appeared to be taking the water out of its natural course by digging a deep and dangerous ditch on the north side of the road leading to the swamp.

Mr. Suggitt, seconded by the Council, moved that the Council of the township be authorized to take the fence on the side road, lot 21, connecting it with a tile drain through his field, and to maintain it for future time on consideration that the Council would pay him $25.

Mr. D. B. Anderson handed in his resignation as solicitor for the township of Mariposa.

Mr. Malcolm McArthur petitioned the Council to stay any proceedings in connection with the cleaning out of the McArthur drain, or account of the quantity of water remaining.

Mr. D. B. Anderson moved that accommodation had been secured for Mr. John Jeffrey at the Home for the Aged at Lindsay. Mr. Jeffrey addressed the Council, giving several reasons why he preferred to go and live with his son Richard.

Mr. R. P. Hill presented a petition signed by himself and Messrs. A. B. McLeod, H. Grant, Angus McCrimmon, John McCrimmon and W. D. McCrimmon, praying the Council to take the necessary steps to drain certain lands under the Municipal Drainage Act.

The Clerk read a communication from the solicitor regarding the award in the Hascock drain.

Various Resolutions.
Moved by Mr. Suggitt, seconded by Mr. Cameron, that this Council accept the resignation of Mr. D. B. Anderson as their solicitor for the township of Mariposa.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Taylor, seconded by Mr. Suggitt, that, on the request of Mr. Malcolm McArthur, no action be taken by the Council in the matter of cleaning out the McArthur drain this fall.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cameron, seconded by Mr. Mark, that Richard Jeffrey be paid the sum of six dollars per month for the care and support of John Jeffrey from the 15th day of October, 1902.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Taylor, seconded by Mr. Suggitt, that the petition of Mr. R. P. Hill and five other ratepayers, praying that the Council take steps to further a system of drainage under the Municipal Drainage Act be received, and that the township solicitor be authorized to proceed with said work at once.—Carried.

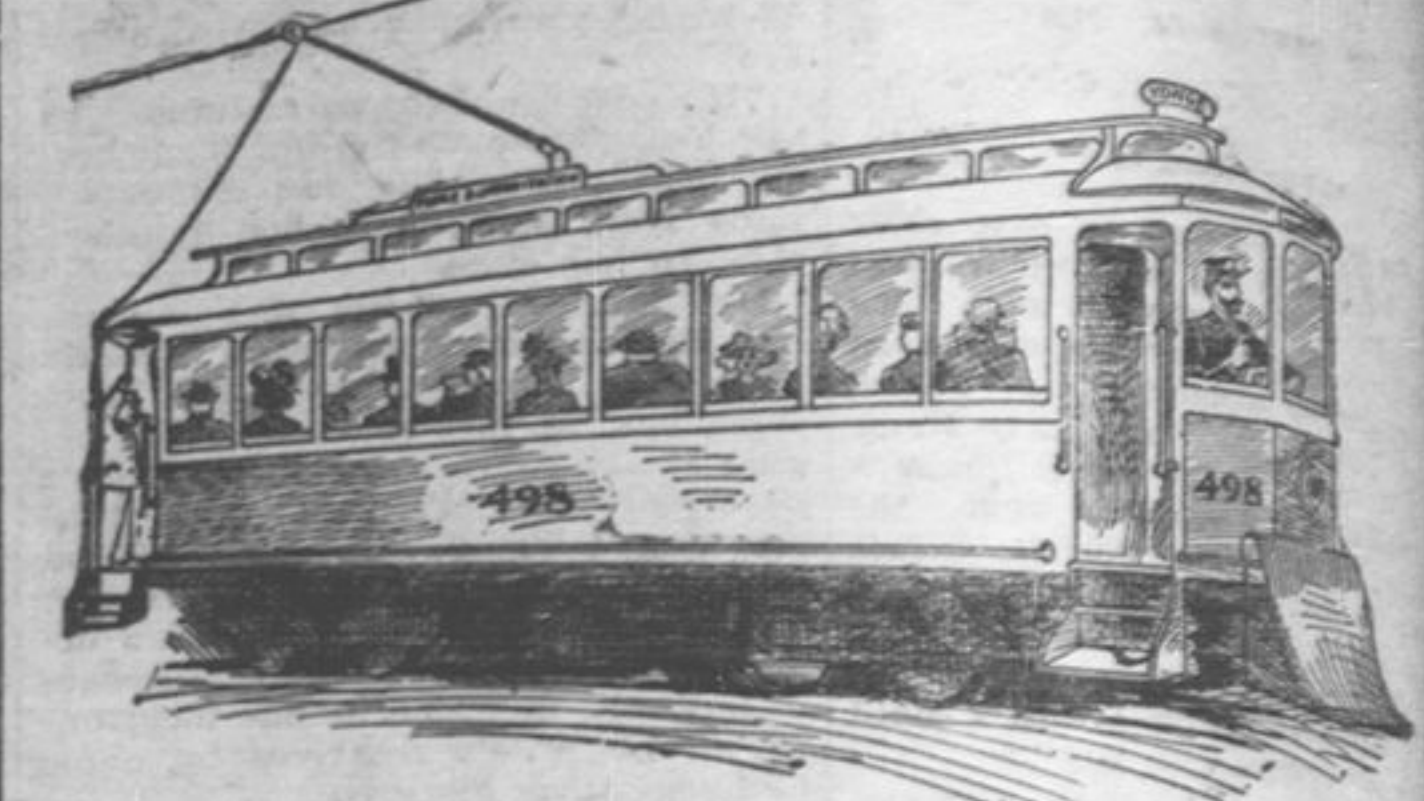

Moved by Mr. Cameron, seconded by Mr. Mark, that the Reeve be authorized to sign the petition of R. P. Hill and five other ratepayers of the township of Mariposa, praying the Council to take steps to further a system of drainage through the properties of the petitioners.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Taylor, seconded by Mr. Suggitt, that the township solicitor be instructed to guard the interests of the township in the Hascock drain.—Carried.
