THE POOR MAN IS SAID TO DRINK MERELY TO VARY HIS EXISTENCE

Every Calling Requires Its Recreation and Whisky is a Cheap One

An editorial in the Brown Book for November is entitled "Why the Poor Man Drinks" and is a wholesome study for the rampant prohibitionist. Overlooking the jawing wife and the slump in stocks, the writer accounts for the poor man's resort to grog as follows:

I have always had a way of believing that he did it, not because he deliberately chose to do wrong, or because by his own act he was willing to increase the sum total of evil and misery in the world, but because drink was about the only kind of pleasure within his reach. Pleasure—that is the thing you have got to allow for in nearly every man's life, and oddly enough, that is the very thing we most commonly overlook. The average individual can't get along without a certain amount of pleasure, or excitement, or relaxation, or change—call it what you will, but whatever it is human nature craves it, and if it can't be got in one way it will in another.

TO BREAK MONOTONY

What happens to boarding schools where excessive strictness of discipline prohibits the normal pleasures of youth? They turn out lads of the type who later sow more wild oats than the boys who have never been unduly repressed. What does the Chinaman, practically exiled from his country and the slave of long monotonous laundry hours do? He gets even with fate by smoking opium and dreaming dreams of a fairer world. The miner, shut off from many creature comforts of the world above him, resorts to grog; the western cowboy tries to keep in a passable humor with his rough existence by gambling, the sweat-shop worker by immorality, and the gold-pro prospector by fighting. It would seem that the harder a man's lot was in life, the more desperate he was to square things by a reckless indulgence in whatever pleasure was at hand.

HE IS DENIED MUCH

Take it nearer home, if you will, and in the case of the poor man. See what has happened in the large cities where the ordinary laborer is of no more account in the great scheme of things that surrounds him than is the smallest fish in the sea. To begin with you've taken the joy of creative work away from him, for now-a-days, because of the introduction of machinery and the specialization of labor, no one man turns out the whole of a thing, but only a very small part of it. Practically no artisan in these times can hold up for you to appreciate a complete product of his own handiwork and say "That is mine, and I am proud of it." In the second place, you've herded him and his family, like cattle, into rookeries and basements on foul, dark alleys, thereby depriving him of the happiness that comes from creating and owning a home. Again, you've set him to work young, with little or no education, which debars him and the delights of a richly stored mind. Still again because of his long hours, you've made it largely impossible for him to get away from the ugliness of the city and to know what it is, instead, to see the beautiful in God's world out under the blue. For sports, which furnish a safety valve for the surplus animal energy for so many men, he has neither the time nor the place. Friendships of the right kind are denied him because he has no home to which he may invite those for whom he may care, and a club is out of the question. The best plays at the theatres are too costly for him, likewise travel, and museums and libraries are beyond his appreciation.

Thus, you see, one after another those forms of pleasure that are wholesome and harmless are placed absolutely beyond his power to enjoy. What is left? Drink—drink, because of the carnal pleasure it yields, because of its power to drive sordid memories and facts out of the mind and to replace them by a rosy-hued world of the imagination, and drink, because it can be had at a clean, inviting, sociable saloon, the poor man's club, and the only place where he can have a quiet chat with his fellowmen.

Granting that the average man must have pleasure of some sort, once and so often, is it to be wondered at then, when all things else are denied him, that the chap drinks himself into a forgetfulness of his condition? For just so much as you grind a man down and take the decent things of life away from him, just so much he is bound to get what consolation he can out of the indecent things.

Bishop Potter in this connection has recently said: "What are modern cheapness and invention and machinery and all the multitude of inexpensive conveniences which make my life so different from the life of my forefathers—what are these things costing—not the employer who produces them, nor the tradesman who sells them, but the mechanic who makes them? And how can I blame him whose task is so narrow, so confining, and so monotonous if now and then he 'evens up' as he says, and produces a little variety into his life by getting drunk?"

I am not, of course, for a moment excusing drunkenness. I am only trying to explain it. I blame a man not so much for getting drunk, as I blame him for being satisfied right along with low pleasures of this sort, instead of trying to reach up for the better sort that yields the same recreative results without bringing in their train evil and misery.

FENELON FALLS AND VICINITY

Happenings of the Past Week at the Contract Town

Inspector Reazin visited the village schools on Thursday of last week. We are pleased to see him recovering gradually from his late, very severe illness.

C. Moore, father of the editor of the Star, left on Monday to fill a lucrative position in Niagara. We wish him success.

Miss McKendry of Kingston, who has been visiting her uncle, Mr. Wm. McKendry for some time, returned home on Monday. During her visit here she made some warm friends, whose good wishes follow her.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McIntosh and Miss Viola McIntosh of Rosedale, spent Sunday at the Falls.

Mr. Wm. Burgoyne returned on Saturday from a week's visit to his mother in Napanee.

Miss Aileen Lytle of Lindsay was the guest of her friend Miss Marjory Austin for a few days last week.

Mr. Percy McCall who has been working in Lindsay for a couple of months returned to the Falls Saturday.

The Thanksgiving of the Episcopal church of Canada was observed in St. James' on Sunday.

The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be observed in St. Andrew's church on Sunday next. A union pre-communion service will be held in the Methodist church on Friday evening.

Half the village is off to the woods ready for Saturday. Mr. Geo. Wilson and his young son Harold left on Wednesday. The other members of the party were: Messrs. G. Dunbar, W. Wright, J. Austin, C. Grady, F. Dettman, B. Hopkins, E. Robson and W. Craig. We wish them any amount of sport and lots of good game.

The many friends of Mr. B. H. Maybee are deeply grieved by his continued illness. Dr. Wilson of Fenelon Falls and Dr. McAlpine of Lindsay are doing all in their power for him and we trust that their efforts will be successful. All that love and money can suggest is being done and as there seems some improvement this week his friends hope are raised that he may soon be out of danger.

During the summer and fall of 1902 a number of very sad and exceedingly sudden deaths have taken place and their number was increased on last Saturday morning by the death of Miss Estella Barr at her father's residence. Miss Barr had been attacked by a faint a week previous, but was supposed to be so far recovered, that on Tuesday her father left for the shanties north of Kinnmount. She became worse on Friday night and expired peacefully on Saturday about 3 p.m. Miss Barr was a lady that to know was to love. Her loss will be felt by a very large circle of friends, her Sunday school class, the E. League of the Methodist church, and the employees of Mr. J. J. Townley's tailoring establishment. She was always at her post in every religious duty but her loss will be most deeply felt in the home of which she was the light and idol. The writer of these lines sympathizes with Mr. and Mrs. Barr and their sons as only those can who have seen the one dearest on earth taken from them in even a moment's notice. These terrible visitations always remind one of Cowper's lines:

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan His works in vain;
God is His own interpreter,
And He will make it plain."

The only consolation is that our loss is their gain; The joy is theirs and the dumb grief and pain is the portion of those left behind in this vale of tears. May we all live our lives so as to be ready to join them when our own time comes.

Mrs. M. Doolittle and her two children left on Wednesday to join Mr. Doolittle in his new home in King. They were good citizens and will be missed by a large circle of friends, but we wish them health and prosperity in their new home.

The boating season has been keeping up well. Last week the "Beaver," "Empire" and three large scows all in dock at once made our wharf look like a head for shipping. Capt. C. W. Burgoyne had the "Kuwartha" out on three days last week. On Friday he went up to Lindsay, from there to Colbrook, and was back at Fenelon Falls in time for the 4:30 p.m. train. Not bad!

Mr. C. W. Burgoyne was "At Home" to a number of her friends on Saturday the 18th inst., when a most enjoyable afternoon and evening was spent.

Mr. J. Jones, jr., has moved into his newly erected house. When painted and finished it will be an exceedingly pretty residence.

Mr. W. Northey is rushing on his new residence which will be a great improvement to his place of business as well as an ornament to the street. We regret to learn that Mr. G. Martin is down with peritonitis, which attacked him suddenly on Monday as he was at church on Sunday evening.

Tell Junkie, Pearson and Madigan (Burk's Falls Arrow.)

A large bear was seen by Mr. Geo. House in his barnyard, Chapman Valley, lately, in chase of a pig, which he captured and hugged preparatory to killing and eating it. One of the neighbors fired a shot at it, but killed the pig in place of the bear, which marched off to the woods returning at midnight to break the piggy and steal another pig. The next day Mr. Bruin was seen by a settler, but got off again. A watch is to be kept in that same barnyard for capturing and killing the creature. Other bears have been seen in the neighborhood, attacking sheep or carrying them off. It is truly high time some captures were made.

Our fall stock has arrived consisting of bedroom and dining-room furniture, folding cots, mantle beds, bed springs and mattresses at M. E. Langley's, opposite Denson House.

THE WEATHER FOR NOVEMBER

The Look-for Fine Spell is Not Due Next Month

If Iri Hicks is right, the fine weather that everybody has hoped, and to some extent expected, would arrive some time during this fall, is not coming at all—not in November at all events.

Prof. Hicks' forecast for that month says that on the 3rd and 4th there will be warm wet weather. In the west and north this will turn to cold with snow. High winds and frosty clear weather follows.

From the 9th to 12th heavy warm rains will be general ending with lightning and thunder to the south. Again cold clearing weather ensues.

Then a few fine days are promised, only to break into storm of warm rain again about the 16th. This storm is to turn to snow and sleet and a cold wave. Between the 19th and 23rd a very pronounced cold storm is promised. Snow, sleet, and high winds will render navigation very perilous. On the 26th and 27th there will be wind, rain and snow. Outdoor work should be in good shape for winter storms at this time. Cold waves will rush far to the south. The month will close warmer and with a storm brewing. The professor urges everybody to have plenty of fuel on hand in view of the severe weather threatening.

For Our Correspondents

An exchange remarks: "The drawback to the work of a good many correspondents is that they can't resist the temptation to get in some jokes at the expense of other people. The joke is usually wrapped up in such a way that only those with local knowledge can see the point. Nevertheless the point is often sharp so that it hurts. Everybody enjoys harmless fun, but the private doings, the little slips and pretty misadventures should be let severely alone. To never write about a neighbor anything you would not like written about yourself, is a golden rule.

After the first box I began to feel better and I took two more to make a complete cure. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a good, honest, reliable medicine for all kidney troubles and can highly recommend them."
