Premier's Speech Criticized by Several London Papers - Treaty-Making Dec mand Somewhat Unwarrantable and Impessible-Opinion in Cauada Sized Up by Daily

Mail's Correspondent.

Oct. 26.-(C.A.P.)-A Canadian writing to The Express says: "Let not English statesmen deceive themselves. The attitude of the Canadian people as represented by the tone of the Canadian papers concerning the Alaska case is an infinitely better test of Canada's attitude towards the Motherland than her sentiment at the time of the South African war. The Anglo-Saxover the seas has not lost the fighting blood of his ancestry, and what would Canadians not sacrifice uphold their own continent of British North America?" After declaring that the social claims, social prestige and immense wealth of the United States and the adroit manipulation of men affected the verdict and that Canada should possess treaty-making powers, the writer adds: "The machinery binding the self-governing colonies to the Motherland is as antiquated, insufficient and absurd as a hand loom compared with a new machine, driven by electric power." Criticising Sir Wilfrid's Speech. been much comment thus far on Premier Laurier's expression of regret in the House of Commons at Ottawa on Friday at the fact that Canada did not have treaty-making powers. The headlines refer to it as striking and "remarkable" utter-

The St. James Gazette argues that "the demand is somewhat unwarrantable and impossible so long as Canada is dependent for external defence upon the Mother Country," and expresses the belief that the Canadian aspirations for greater independence would be most practically realized by working for the institution of a federation throughout the Empire." The Globe is outspokenly critical It says Premier Laurier's "present indiscretion, to call it no worse, if it stood alone, might be charitably attributed to a momentary gust of unpariotic impulse; but, on previous occasions similar ill-considered language has slipped his lips, and calculated to cast doubt on his loyalty and devotion to the British Crown."

The Fisheries Medus Vivendi. St. John's, Nfid., Oct. 26.-It is thought probable in official circles here that Canada, owing to the dissatisfaction over the result of the Alaskan boundary arbitration, will denounce, the modus vivendi, respecting the Atlantic fisheries at the close of the present season. The effect of this step, if taken, will be to deprive American fishermen of the right to enter Canadian waters to transship their catches, hire crews, or purchase bait. porting to give the new Alaskan boundary as determined by the Alaskan Boundary Commission are of no value whatever, according to officers at the State Department. The Boundary Commission, by the terms of the treaty creating it, had no authority to decide upon a line. It was competent only to interpret the treaty of 1825 in the light of contemporary maps and documents. It could determine only what the framers of that treaty intended, and the decision had to be made without reference to present day conditions.

was lost in the great stretch from the head of Portland Canal to Mount St. Elias, where Canada laid claim under the interpretations of the treaty to 25,000 square miles of land, which we retain. In fact, the United States gets considerable territory which it did not claim, that it will be found necessary in laying down a practicable boundary to run the line more than thirty miles inland from several promontories in the deeply indented coast. The important point, however, was not the amount of territory involved, but the possession of the headwaters of the inlets.
