> The Editor of Le Pays In Montreal Has no Quarrel With Doctrines of His Church, But He Demands Better Education for French-Canadians and Incidentally the Right to Say What He Thinks.

The editor of Le Pays was supposed to be a disturber. The French weekly fulminated against a few days ago by the Archbishop of Montreal—you wondered if it was anything like the Calgary Eye-Opener or Jack Canuck; and what sort of fire-eyed person would the publisher be? Very probably the editor, first of La Patrie, and until 1909 of Le Canada, would be a fuliginous little Frenchman; perhaps the a studio jacket, a wild his voice and a lot of disquieting gesticulations that might be full of "to blazes with everything," says Augustu: Bridle in a recent article in Cana-But Godfroy Langlois, M.P.P., nev-
