There is a Canada Cement dealer in your neighborhood. If you do not know him, write for his name.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.
How many times a month do you find your hand in your pocket and take a coin in response to the little touch of the cripple (?) who selling court plaster, worthless pencils, or "sob" poetry on a card? You figure that it is a little more and less troublesome to pass any coin, from a dime to a dollar, than to argue the point of this particularly prevalent species of mendicant.
Towards the end of the day you must the object of your tender hand and spare silver coming of some saloon reeling with the he has fought with your change. He is not nearly so bad as you suppose as he was when he appealed to you for a hand-out, and he is as independent as Paddy's.
You ever figure out that these begging beggars gather in as much as a hundred dollars in a day?—It takes fifty dimes to make a dollar—and it is quite probable that not one of those who contribute to the spoils of the day, earns as much as the cripple's total gains.
"Mendicants Need Not Apply" should be hung out in front of business place. If a cripple is in need of support, the state at large should look after him, but the individual giving to every beggar comes along is but perpetuating the case of hardened hobo who are begging at the soft-hearted public which supplies them with booze.

WHY HE DIDN'T LEAVE THE FARM
A Little Story With a Moral That May Well be Applied in Farms Around Here--It Was a Success in This Case and Would be in Others too

"Well, what's your trouble, Bert?" asked Farmer Hardy of his elder son, one Sunday afternoon. "Aren't you going to town?"

The boy, lying in the shade of a Carolina poplar, started to speak, then shut his mouth tightly and resumed his gaze cloudwards, says the Wyoming Stockman-Farmer.

"Come, speak up. What's troubling you?" insisted his father.

"Nothin' to go with," mumbled the boy.

"Nothing to go with?" echoed his father. "Why, what's the matter with Bess and the runabout, isn't that a good enough rig for you?"

The long, slenderly-built boy rolled over on his side and looked straight at his father.

"Bess and the runabout are all right," he replied, evenly, "but I have no money."

"Money? What do you want of money? You had a dollar not long ago; just two weeks ago, when I sold the calves. You didn't need anything, your clothes were good."

"What do I want with money?" the boy blazed out. "What do you want of money? I'm not quite as old as you, but I have a little respect and pride. I am seventeen, father, and never yet have I had a cent that I haven't had to ask you for, and often I didn't get it then. And I think you will acknowledge that I do my share of work about this place, as do the other kids."

And the boy rose to his feet, gloomily, rammied his hands down to the depths of his pockets and strode off toward the barn.

That night after supper he followed his father out to the porch, where the elder smoked his evening pipe.

The boy cleared his throat and began: "Rather, I have decided to leave the farm."

The man never moved for a moment, then turned his head slowly.

"So? And when, may I ask?"

"As soon as I can find a job somewhere," replied the boy.

"That is the only reason you are going, just to earn your own money; not dissatisfied any other way?"

"No, sir," replied the boy.

"I'll think it over for a few days," said the man. "You know, don't you, that I am entitled to any money you might earn until you are of age?"

The boy looked startled, but did not reply, and the farmer went into the house to his paper.

The next evening, after a busy day all over the farm, Farmer Hardy called his family into the sitting-room for a second consultation.

Bert, Marian, and even little Louis, looked solemn and frightened.

"I have been led to believe," said Farmer Hardy, with a smilt toward his wife, "that my wife and children are entitled to know something of financial affairs. The farm has paid well the last few years, and there seems to be no danger of bankruptcy. So I am going to experiment. I am going to see if you are all good financiers.

"I will start you in business, Bert, with those two shoats in the south pen, and here is $5 to spend as you see best. I will give you more in two weeks.

"Marian, you will start your bank account with this amount," and he gave his fifteen-year-old daughter a $5 gold piece. "And you will have the exclusive care of old Lily's new calf. If you watch the market you will know the best time to sell, and the money is to be your own."

"Louis, here is $5 for you. You may also have the money from the pumpkins, or, if you care to wait until next spring, you may have the first colt born."

"Now, mother," and the husband smiled again at his wife, with a hint of the old-time love glint in his eye, "here is some back wages for you," and he laid a small roll of bills in her lap—$50 in all. "Hereafter you may keep all the butter and egg money for your own personal use, to spend just as you see fit."

No one had spoken a word but Hardy. All were too surprised, and this apparent fact brought a blush to the farmer's face. But he smiled again.

"Now, this money is to be your own, as is the proceeds from the stock. It is your own spending money and bank account. Your necessities I will buy. I would like an accounting in a year to see if the experiment succeeds," and, picking up his pipe, he went out on the porch, leaving a joyous, delighted family with an increasing self-respect and a greater love and esteem for their husband and father.

1,227 Charges of Dynamite Finish Panama Canal--Last Dam Was Blown Up on Friday

The Atlantic and Pacific Oceans were not actually united Friday when the Gamboa dike was destroyed and the waters of Gatun Lake were allowed to flow into Culebra Cut, as lake and cut are, at the normal surface of the water, 85 feet above the level of the sea.

The destruction of the Gamboa dike (which took 1,227 charges of dynamite), however, removes the last obstruction to the navigation of the greater part of the canal by light draft vessels, and opens up direct connection between the great Gatun Lake, which already is practically ready to discharge vessels into the Atlantic through Gatun Locks, and the Pacific division. The waters of the lake rushing through the broken dike at Gamboa sweep through Culebra Cut until they reach the great locks at Pedro Miguel, which mark the beginning of the descent from the top level of the canal to the Pacific.

The first craft to enter will be the great steam dredges whose work is to clear and deepen the channel. The presence of small craft in portions of the canal, however, does not as yet mean ocean to ocean navigation. This will first be possible when each link in the canal has a sufficient depth of water and all the locks are working.

In the intermediate stage, however, navigation may be effected in local lengths of the canal and to some degree may be extended from length to length along the whole waterway.

Although Col. Goethals, in his telegram to the Canal Commission, made no prediction, it is believed it will be possible to have the lighter boats used by the canal diggers to pass from ocean to ocean in a few weeks.

Friday's event served to demonstrate the nearness of the canal to the operating stage. It also formally brought to a close the work of the central division in the cut for the dredging operations, which are to succeed the steam shovel work which will be under a different organization.

Gamboa dike was built in 1908 to hold the Chagres River in check during its turbulent periods, and to prevent its water from entering the nine mile long section of Culebra Cut and delaying the work of the steam shovels.

GREATEST IN HISTORY.

It was important solely for its location. Twenty-four miles to the north, the mighty Gatun Dam, which, to the uninitiated appears to be nothing more than a low mountain range stretched across a valley, keeps the waters of Gatun Lake from escaping to the sea.

These two barriers, one the greatest man-made dam in history, and the other a low ridge of earth and rock which would ordinarily pass unnoticed, have kept in check the rising waters of Gatun Lake.

To-day there is only one, and the waters of the lake now extend from Pedro Miguel lock on the south to Gatun locks on the north, a distance of about 33 miles, approximately two-thirds of the canal's length.

Drills were at work on the dike nearly the whole month of September, and it was mined with over 1,200 holes charged with dynamite. The barrier contained about 90,000 cubic yards of material, or the same number of two horse wagon loads.

FAILED ONLY ONCE.

Only once since it was built had it failed in its purpose. This was during the big freshet in the Chagres River of November, 1909, when the water came so close to the top, then 71 feet above sea level, that it was deemed advisable to open the sluice gates and fill the cut with water, in order to avoid danger of heavy washing. This was done, and for several days all work was suspended and only the tops of the steam shovels were sticking out of the water. Since that time the overtopping of the dike was never seriously threatened. When Gatun Lake rose to a height of fifty feet in the latter part of 1912, the dike was widened to an average of fifty feet by dumping clay on the side toward the cut, and raised to 78.2 feet above sea level.

Gibson Goes to "Pen" Wednesday

Toronto, Oct. 9.—Following a conference with Charles Gibson in his cell, T. Herbert Lennox, K. C., announced this afternoon that the man named "Red" Wilson would be taken before Gibson to see if the accused would identify him as being in the party the night of the murder.

Gibson said he would know the man. "I will know him," he said, "the man I mean had a gold tooth."

Providing the present plans of the authorities are carried out, Charles Gibson will be taken to Kingston Penitentiary on Wednesday to commence his life imprisonment on his conviction as the murderer of Joseph Rosenthal.

Mr. Lennox left for the jail early this afternoon to consult with Gibson, thereby taking the first step in the fight to gain the complete freedom of the young man. The first move towards securing a new trial will be made when a man named "Red" Wilson, who has already been questioned by the city police, will face Gibson in his cell. The convicted slayer will be asked to identify him. Following Gibson's statement that there were others in the party the night Rosenthal met his death, the defence will devote their efforts to locating these missing men. Wilson satisfied the police in his examination at the detective office that he had had absolutely no connection with the affair.

During the long weary hours he has had to occupy the tiny death cell, Gibson has spent a good deal of his time reading. He likes magazines, and his father said, takes an interest in the Bible.

INGRAM-FERGUSON.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson, Main-st., North Bay, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding Wednesday evening, Sept. 24, when their daughter Cora Grenville Ferguson became the wife of Mr. Gordon W. Ingram, of Sault Ste. Marie, formerly of North Bay, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ingram, of Toronto, formerly of Lindsay.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Bowles, pastor of the North Bay Methodist church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives. Mr. Ingram holds the responsible position of chief electrical inspector of the Lake Superior Power Co. The bride has many friends won by her charming personality, and the many beautiful gifts attest the esteem in which she is held. Mr. and Mrs. Ingram left on the Grand Trunk express for Toronto and American cities before taking up house in the Soo.

NICKERSON-MYLES.

Kenora Examiner.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Leith Myles, Second-st., Kenora, Ont., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on 26th ult., when their daughter, Mabel Isabel, one of Kenora's most charming young ladies, and Mr. George Nickerson, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, the Rev. T. Lorymer tying the nuptial knot.

The bride, who was attired in a most exquisite gown of cream brocade satin, daintily finished off with maribou trimming, and carrying a magnificent bouquet of marguerites, entered the drawing-room, which was tastefully decorated with ferns, lillies of the valley and marguerites, on the arm of her father, promptly at 8.30, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Bessie Greenwood. The bride's sister, Miss Laura, acted as bridesmaid and wore a very pretty and becoming dress of white embroidery, while Mr. Jack McLennan officiated as groomsmen. The ceremony was performed in the presence of about 40 invited guests, who afterwards sat down to a very dainty wedding lunch.

The gifts to the bride included a long list of useful articles, testifying to the general esteem in which she is held.

The bride is a niece of Mr. Malcolm Myles, of Lindsay.

WAS TROUBLED WITH INDIGESTION FOR TEN YEARS.

Almost Despaired of Ever Getting Well.

Mrs. MARY MACKAY, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes—"I was troubled with indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several doctors' medicine, claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles, I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor, is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings. I can strongly recommend B.B.B. to anyone suffering from indigestion."

MODERATION.

In youth, the springtime of life's year.
One should be happy, gay and free,
Rejoice in strength and know no fear
And dream of glories that shall be.

Aye, dream and laugh, not strive and sigh,
Nor fret for gain, no honors clutch,
But while the golden days slip by
Just live to love—but not too much!

In manhood's summer, while life's field
Is yellow with the ripening grain,
Still labor to increase the yield
And bargain to increase the gain,
From dawn to dusk continue still
To garner stores of wealth, the which
Use for your profit as you will,
Be rich, my son—but not too rich!

Then, in life's snowy winter time,
Calm wisdom shall extinguish woe—
Heed well this seeming silly rhyme,
If cheery age you wish to know—
Be philosophic, kind, and true,
Be everything an oldster should,
Be wise and good, dear ancestor, do;
But—not too wise and not too good!

were driving north into town, while Mr. M. Williams, of the Williams & Son garage, William-st., was driving his car southward, his passengers being a number of ladies on their way to attend a Women's Institute meeting at the home of Mrs. Willard Curtis.

The auto and the buggy met in front of Mr. Hunter Trotter's farm, and just a few rods from Mr. Mitchell's gate, but the road at this particular point happened to be very narrow. The animal was a bit restless and shied to the right side of the road, the wheels passing over the edge of the roadway into the ditch, and Mrs. Mitchell was thrown forcibly to the ground, while the little girl was thrown into the bottom of the buggy, sustaining no injuries.

In the meantime Driver Williams, sr., had stalled his car a few feet from the accident, while Mr. Hunter Trotter, who was working in the vicinity, jumped the fence and managed to catch the horse before it could break away.

Mrs. Crandell, Mrs. (Dr.) Broad and other passengers of the auto got out and went to Mrs. Mitchell's assistance, and had her removed to her home. She complained of a pain about the shoulders and other places, and Dr. Clark was summoned. On his arrival he made careful examination, remarking that the unfortunate woman had sustained no serious injuries, although the shock was severe.

This morning The Watchman learned that Mrs. Mitchell is getting along nicely, although she received a bad shaking up, and her many friends in town and country hope to see her about again as usual in the course of a few days.

SCIENTISTS IN OSHAWA.

Oshawa has "the nucleus of a congregation of Christian Scientists." Peterboro is one of the very few small towns in Canada where this body has had a church, but it was closed some time ago.

The chief promoter there, by the way, was the late Wm. Brundett, at one time Midland Railway station master at Orillia, Midland and Omemece.

Usually the charity that begins at home is easily discouraged.

THROWN FROM BUGGY.

Another regrettable automobile accident occurred last Wednesday on the Little Britain road, when Mrs. Walter Mitchell, who lives a mile or so southwest of the town, was thrown out of her buggy and injured about the head and shoulders.

A narrow road is perhaps the direct cause of the accident, which happened as follows:

Mrs. Mitchell and young daughter, driving a usually quiet horse, left their place about 2.30 o'clock, and
