A ONE-MAN HOTEL

A traveling man tells a story the "Mid-West Hotel Reporter" about a hotel he chanced upon Pennsylvania. The hotel itself was not so peculiar as the fact that there was a general factotum about the place, and he was everything, from bus boy to general manager. let the traveler tell the story : "I was called upon to spend the night in the little town of Y-, Pennsylvania, not so very long ago. The village is located high up in the Alleghanies.

"As I climbed off at the station platform I looked around for the bus from the one hotel that I knew of Y- It didn't take me long to spot it, for there was only one other vehicle in sight. When I started for the bus an elderly man approached me with the usual hail, 'Hotel, sir ?' I answered in the affirmative handed him my grip. He climbed on the seat and we rattled up the hill to the little inn. When the steel-tired wagon came to a stop the river climbed down, took my grips
