Notwithstanding this the Board would still be short if there were not other sources of revenue. It required every dollar from every source to run the Hospital. The Board was not trying to run it cheaply, but efficiently. In order to get the very best service three trained nurses had at one time been engaged in addition to the regular staff. There was nothing the Hospital needed more than the sympathy of the people. It was gratifying that the Board had it. During the year they had not heard a single complaint

The churches which gave did so liberally, but there were a great many throughout the county which had not given anything. He would rather see smaller amounts given and spread over all the churches o the county. Thanks were due to the Young Ladies' Association for their aid. The bequests of Mrs. Boyd, and of the late Dr. Poole were valuable not only for their own sake, but as indications of sympathy.

Last year at the annual meeting he had severely condemned the press for unfair treatment of the Hospital management. He had to say that "Then it will be her, I remember this year both papers were entitled He did not expect the management to be free from errors or to be above criticism. MORE CONGRATULATIONS. Mayor Vrooman, being called upon, did not think it necessary to add anything, the report was so complete in itself. It was a great pleasure to him to have been associated with the Board during the past year. It was gratifying that the people of the county were beginning to appreciate the Hospital, and it could not be said that Lindsay was getting all the benefit of it. Probably press criticism last year did good. He added a word of commendation for the nurses. The thing to be regretted was that there was not more room Most of the typhoid fever cases were due to water from wells. Mr. Cornish had told him that well water showed more vegetable matter than river water. Wells could not be other than contaminated. It was a pleasure to note that the finances of the institution had taken a turn.

Mr. J. McLennan had been informed that last summer patients could not be admitted because there was not room. He had not heard anything from the reports to show that this was the case now. He commended the work of the institution.

The chairman replied that there had been times when patients could not be admitted. This arose partly from beds on one side being alloted to males and the other to females, and partly because there were no enough semi-private wards. The Hospital was practically full now.

Dr. White thought the Hospitalwas an unqualified success. He had no doubt that scores of lives had been saved through it. Though the work of the nurses and all about

In reply to another question the chairman said the proportion of patients from the town was about doule that from the county.
