Why the Butter Won't Come There are several reasons why the butter won't come. At this time of the year the milk is poorer because the cows have been longer milking. The cream globules are smaller and harder and hence will not chearn so easily. Keep the cream at a higher temperature for it takes more heat to melt these globules. It is a good idea to introduce a fresh cow occasionally. She will improve the flavor texture and churnability of the cream. When the butter gets like pinheads and won't gather add two quarts of water at about 70 degrees. Let the churn stand a minute or two, draw off part of the butter-milk and thurn again. You have raised the temperature and lessened the bulk. Cream does not churn well if the churn is over half full. Never pour hot water from the kettle into the churn. You should always get butter in half an hour. Sometimes it is well to take out half the cream warm it and pour it back again.

The fat globules are largest in Jersey milk and smallest in Ayrshire. The latter is the cheeseman's cow for he does not want the fat to float off but stay down in the cheese. The ordinary dry feed for winter makes hard globules; silage is good to counteract that.

By Li Hung Chang "Yes" said Mr. Goldfinger "if my memory serves me a little, it is now and he cut away with his teaspaon at some Baltimore fruit that looked like mud turtles. After making many unsuccessful attempts to quarter one gent, so far from his native town, he raised it on his spoon, gave a corkscrew movement to his neck and without a sigh swallowed th monster. It was difficult to catch his words for a time, and I felt like ringing up the town surgeon or one of the horse doctors, but the fellow pulled through the act all right and muttered something about fools and the necessity of establishing an ant barnacle society that would dispose of the brigade of fossils who are forever seeking office and endangering the lives and personal effects of the people, to a dime museum man, who would place them side by side with the fair Circassian, the bearded lady, Barnum's what-is-it, or the wild man from Downeyville.

After washing down his throat with some Lindsay ale which he pronounced to be of good color, sweet flavor and delicious to taste, he talked matter which passed fifteen more gentlemen and two boys who were sitting at another table talking to their maiden aunt and a middle-aged lady who wore a bonnet firmly tied on her head with two purple ribbons. A Fairy Tale

He dropped into our store Saturday night just before we closed. All hands and the cook were busy. We were rushing out the goods in good style. He said he had never seen so many five and two dollar bills since he started chumming with Pare and Holden. Got kind of hankering after some of our surplus : enquired where the proprietor lived and sauntered out. Sunday afternoon he wandered out to reconnoitre, found the house locked and the family away at Sunday school. He was inside via the cellar door route shortly. and began to look about. He up set everything in the house opened everything from cellar to garret stole a bottle of perfume and an alarm clock, probably so he could have a "sweet-scented time" all alone and save the judge the trouble of giving him time and wandered away and was lost in the dim distance. That's the only instance we know where a man don't make something by coming in and attending our sale. It's really wonderful how cheap the goods are running out at. We didn't steal them, simply got them at a rate, a little over 50c on the dollar and that's the reason we can sell them so cheap. It's probably the most remarkable sale that has ever occurred in Lindsay and with an increased staff we will probably out do ourselves Saturday. B. J. GOUGH. BANNISTER'S BEARD.

It Caused a Stoppage of Pleasant Neighborly Relations. The Bannisters and the Ridgeleys are, or were, what might almost be called bosom friends. Mrs. Bannister's girl has often borrowed eggs and other things from Mrs. Ridgeley's cook. For three years these two excellent families have lived side by side without a quarrel This may be due to the fact that the Bannisters have no children. Mrs. Bannister can hear Mrs. Ridgeley praise her little Dorothy and repeat the smart say. ings of her little Percival without feeling any jealousy whatever.

Theirs has been an ideal friendship Still it is only a friendship, after all. There is always among them that polite constraint which keeps people on their best behavior. It is not as if they were members of one family.

And so it came to pass when Mr. Bannister had his beard removed that Mrs Ridgeley was careful not to tell him what she really thought of his appearance. She assured him that he looked young with 1 smooth face, but at home she declared that he was "a perfect fright."

"I don't see," she said to her husband "why his wife ever permitted him to have it cut off. He surely must have had a beard before they were married or she could never have fallen in love with him Really he looks like a scarecrow. never knew that a beard could make so much difference in a man's appearance.'

One evening two or three weeks later the Bannisters were sitting on the Ridge leys' porch. They had talked about the weather and the war and other things when little Percival suddenly exclaimed "Oh, mamma, Mr. Bannister's letting them grow again! Did you notice it' He doesn't look like a fright or a scare crow any more, does he?"
