A HAPPY NEW YEAR

To all our readers we extend hearty greetings for 1906. A Happy and Prosperous New Year.

THE MUNICIPAL ELECTION

It was a gratifying sight to see so many of our citizens at the nominations last Friday, and it is a pity that they do not put in appearance more often, when matters of such vital interest are at stake. Alderman Maunder struck the right note when he said that citizens should take a deeper interest in the town's affairs, and that it was one thing to stand aloof and criticize, but an altogether different thing to take of one's coat and enter the fray.

At the present time the brainiest, the most capable and honest men are needed in our Council, and the best is none too good. "It rests with the public to see the best men are elected, and if they choose wisely at the polls, putting aside all sentimental nonsense, the best men will be returned."

INVESTMENTS

It has been brought to our knowledge that several promoters are going through the county inducing our farmers to take stock in various companies, holding out glowing prospects for making money.

It would be advisable for farmers before parting with their hard-earned dollars to consult some of their business friends for advice in matters of this kind. It is well to remember that if these schemes were as good as they promise, there would be no necessity for men going fifty to a hundred miles from home to sell the stock.

The party has been selling "bank stock," and promising to open a branch in nearly every village, and have been obtaining $125 for $100 worth of stock, while stocks in several of our present financial institutions which have demonstrated their power to earn dividends and have large stock funds, can be bought for a price within ten to fifteen points of this price.

Prices For Butterflies.

Butterfly collectors are seldom able to estimate with any confidence the value of their collections, since the prices for specimens so constantly vary. A case in point is that of the blue butterfly of Brazil, specimens of which were originally sold for from $50 to $75. Afterward some collectors who supplied the London market ran into a perfect swarm of these butterflies and shipped to England such quantities that better specimens than the original insects sold for $1 each. It is not infrequently happens that two or three specimens of a certain family are discovered by collectors, who, encouraged by the high prices received for their finds, are tempted to prosecute their search for this particular variety without result for several years. Suddenly they or some other collector finds the insects grown plentiful, and the cherished varieties of the cabinet become among the commonest specimens.

Sociable Spiders.

Spiders have been observed in Madras which live in a sponge-like nest of branching network, penetrated internally by canals of communication and furnished with a number of external apertures. The nests, which may be attached either to the tips of branches or to leaves of the prickly pear, are ashy gray in color and constructed of leaves, with an external covering of the usual sticky threads. The spiders are similar in color to their nests. Their inconspicuous, sheet-like webs radiate in all directions, and as many as five or six nests, connected by intermediate webs, may be found on a single plant. The connecting webs, which are very strong, often form tubular bridges between the nests. From forty to a hundred spiders may be found in a single nest, and males and females inhabit the same nest in the proportion of about seven to one.

How the Bulldog Was Evolved.

In the north hall of the British Natural History museum skulls of domesticated dogs are arranged which illustrate the evolution of the modern bulldog from a breed which, according to old pictures, was more of the mastiff type. Bull baiting was a common sport in the thirteenth century, and there is a later record which draws a distinction between bulldogs and mastiffs. Low, in his "Domesticated Animals of the British Islands," points out that it is essential that a dog which makes a frontal attack on a bull should be both underhung and short legged, that it may get a firm grip of its antagonist and avoid its horns. We may therefore be sure that, as the bulldog was gradually evolved from the mastiff, these points were held to be of prime importance.

Doomed the Colonel.

Emperor William I. of Germany was a strict disciplinarian. One day during the maneuvers of the army a cavalry regiment charged at a strongly entrenched and embattled village, of which the garden walls were lined with marksmen. "Look, look!" exclaimed the Russian representative. "That regiment is lost." "No," was the emperor's calm reply, "this regiment isn't, but the colonel certainly is." And, sure enough, at the close of the maneuvers he was placed on the retired list.

Diet and Digestion.

Abstemiousness in diet is very conducive to a good digestion. It is preferable to be a little underfed than at all overfed. Hence we come to one of the first causes of indigestion in the adult, too large a quantity of food. After an ordinary meal the food should all have left the stomach by the end of six or seven hours. If owing to an excessive quantity the stomach cannot deal with the amount some food remains in the stomach and ferments. This creates discomfort, pain, wind, nausea and perhaps vomiting, by means of which the abused stomach gets rid of its burden. If the sufferer is not thus fortunately sick the best thing he can do is to drink a large tumbler of lukewarm water, which will probably induce vomiting and so wash out the stomach. Half a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda added to the fluid will cause still more relief. During the next twenty-four hours the lightest diet, such as a little tea and dried toast, some boiled rice, a little arrowroot or corn flour, should be taken.

Chotohazree at the Gymkhana.

In "Modern India" the author, William Elmeroy Curtis, records his meeting with the word gymkhana and "ventures to say that nobody who has not been in India can guess what that means."

And if you want another conundrum, what is a chotohazree? It is customary for smart people to have their chotohazree at the gymkhana, and I think you would be pleased to join them after taking the beautiful drive which leads to the place. Nobody knows where the word was derived from, but it is used to describe a country club—a bungalow hidden under a beautiful grove on the brow of a cliff that overhangs the bay—with all of the appurtenances, golf links, cricket grounds, racket courts and indoor gymnasium, and everybody stops there on an afternoon drive to have chotohazree, which is the local term for afternoon tea and for early morning coffee.

Winding Your Watch.

The old superstitious belief that you will change your luck if you stop winding your watch at night and wind it in the morning may have some slight basis in fact, according to a jeweler, who says that the morning is the proper time to do the winding. This is not only because the hour of rising is for the average man much more regular than that for retiring, but even the soberest and most orderly of men are apt to relax and prone to carelessness at bedtime, when more or less worn by the wear and tear of the day. In this condition the winding is apt to be done in a jerky, irregular sort of way or too far or not far enough. "Nine people out of ten wind their watches on going to bed," said the jeweler, "but if they would do it when they get up, at some regular point in the process of making their toilet, they would do it much better."

Curious Almshouse.

The most curious almshouse in England is St. Mary's hospital at Chichester. There eight old ladies live actually in the church, which is a fine old building dating from 1680. It was originally a monastery, but when Queen Elizabeth came to visit there she turned it into an almshouse to endure as long as almshouses exist. The old ladies have two neat little rooms each down the sides of the main church, with windows looking out on the garden. They have each a coal supply, a kitchen range, water and gas. At one end of the church is the chapel, where daily services are held. The choir stalls are beautifully carved old oak, the original seats that the monks used. The church stands in a quiet little square.

Too Serious.

While a great many persons probably take themselves too seriously, entertaining an altogether exaggerated opinion of their ability and worth, not many nowadays go to the extreme length of the German whom the English poet Coleridge met at Frankfurt. He always took off his hat when he ventured to speak of himself. Were this practice to become general what a number of people would be permanently bereft!

Boarding a Hansom.

Have you ever noticed the right way to get into a hansom when two people are riding? Few persons know what to do. In nine cases out of ten the one who enters first seats himself on the off side. But this is wrong. If, on getting in first, you take the near seat, your companion can then enter in ease and comfort, which otherwise he could not.

To Waterproof Canvas.

Scientific American gives this recipe for waterproofing for canvas: Soft soap dissolved in hot water and a solution of iron sulphate added. The sulphuric acid combines with the potash of the soap and the iron oxide is precipitated with the fatty acid as insoluble iron soap. This is washed and dried and mixed with linseed oil.

Masculine.

Mrs. Hix—Mrs. June strikes me as being entirely too masculine for a woman. Mrs. Dix—Yes, indeed. Why, every time she has an ache or a pain she makes as much fuss about it as a man would.

Discretion.

First Lawyer—It seems to me you let that last witness down pretty easily in your cross examination. Second Lawyer—I had to. He is my tailor, and I owe him a big bill.

When a man says, "Of course it's no business of mine," it is a sure sign that he is going to do the best he can to make it his business.

His First Intimation.

"How did you find out you could draw?" inquired the admirer of the celebrated illustrator. "By the marks I received in school for the excellence and fidelity of my work," replied the eminent one. "My work was a caricature of my beloved teacher lost on the blackboard and the marks came from the teacher's cane."

The Evasive Woman.

The train had pulled out of the terminal, and the conductor was on his fare collecting tour. In one car there sat alone a woman dressed in deep mourning, her heavy veil having been lifted to allow a breath of air. When the conductor approached her the woman burst into tears.

As she cried as if her heart would burst, the conductor asked her what was the matter. She sobbed this reply: "Ten years ago I took my first husband over this road to be cremated, five years ago I took my second husband on the same trip to the crematory, and now I am taking my third husband to be cremated as ashes."

Just then there were loud sobs heard coming from a seat on the opposite side of the car. The conductor turned and saw another woman crying. Approaching softly, he asked the weeping one, "What is the matter, madam?"

Taking her handkerchief from her eyes, the second in tears answered, "That woman has husbands to burn, while I can't get even one."

The Senses of the Word.

"She is a lady in every sense of the word," exclaimed Blifkins. "Then she is the most remarkable woman that ever lived," replied Johnson.

"What do you mean? Aren't there plenty of ladies in the world?"

"Yes, but not in every sense of the word. For instance, if the woman is what you say, she is not only a woman of good family or of good breeding and refinement, but she is also, according to the Century Dictionary, a sweetheart (local United States); a slate measuring about sixteen inches broad by ten long; the calcareous apparatus in the cardiac part of the stomach of the lobster, the function of which is the trituration of food. And if she is all that her fortune is made in the museum line."

After that it was noted that Blifkins usually pruned down the remark to "she is a lady" simply.

The Solan Geese.

Richard Bell tells his book, "My Strange Pets," tells of the solan geese, which in Great Britain in bygone days used to be salted and dried for human food. "Many years ago these dried geese found their way to the lowlands of Scotland and were used as an appetizer. A small portion when eaten before meals was supposed to tickle the appetite. In this connection I have heard a good story: A worthy farmer in the neighborhood gave a dinner party, and when the dinner was in progress he asked one of his guests if he would have 'another portion,' upon which the guest remarked, 'I think I will, as I eat a bit of solan geese afore I left home and it has made me very hungry,' upon which his neighbor said, 'I dinna believe in these solan geese, for I eat a hail yin afore I can' awa' and I dinna feel a bit the hungrier.'"

The Books of Ancient Persia.

We know that the Moslems when they conquered Persia found in that country an innumerable quantity of books and scientific treatises and their general, Saad Ibn Abi Oueccas, asked Caliph Omar by letter if he would allow him to distribute those books among the true believers with the rest of the booty. Omar answered him in these terms: "Throw them into the water. If they contain anything which can guide men to the truth we have received from God what will guide us much better. If they contain errors we shall be well rid of them, thank God!" In consequence of this order the books were thrown into the water and the fire, and the literature and science of the Persians disappeared.—Notices et Extraits.

The Atmosphere.

The earth's sensible atmosphere is generally supposed to extend some forty miles in height, probably farther, but becoming at only a few miles from the surface of too great a tenacity to support life. The condition and motions of this aerial ocean play a most important part in the determination of climate, modifying by absorbing the otherwise intense heat of the sun and when laden with clouds hindering the earth from radiating its acquired heat into space.

All Against the Preacher.

Sydney Smith loved to tell a good story, and one that haunted his brain and tickled his sides for weeks was that of a tame magpie in a church that suddenly descended on the reading desk and strove to fly off with the sermon and of the desperate struggle that ensued between the bird and the preacher, the congregation all in favor of the bird.

Naturally.

Patient—Well, doctor, do you think I'm getting well all right? Doctor—Oh, yes. You still have a good deal of fever, but that doesn't trouble me. Patient—Of course not. If you had a fever it wouldn't trouble me.—Tales.

The Lost.

When a fellow has discovered that all his loose change has filtered through a hole in his trousers pocket it is nearly impossible to get him to accept the scientific proposition that nothing is ever lost.

A Wonderful Theory.

Gladys—I don't like this egg, auntie. It's not good. Auntie—Nonsense, dear! It was only laid yesterday. Gladys—Well, then, it must have been laid by a bad hen.

Still in the Future.

Cashier (coughing)—Parson, me, I did not catch your last name. Ethel (blushing)—I haven't caught it yet myself.—Cleveland Leader.

Exact Reasoning.

Here is a bit of exact reasoning on the part of a little schoolgirl. The teacher wished to impress the idea of the wrong of idleness. He led up to it by asking who were the persons who got all they could and did nothing in return. For some time there was silence, but at last the little girl, who had obviously reasoned out the answer inductively from her own home experiences, exclaimed, with a good deal of confidence, "Please, sir, it's the baby!"

A Southern Reminiscence.

In "A Southern Girl in '61" Mrs. D. Giraud Wright describes the burial of the young hero, Latane, one of the most dramatic and touching incidents in the story of the Confederacy. He died leading a gallant charge.

"John Latane, a lieutenant in his brother's company, took charge of the body and, with a cart and driver, tried to return to Richmond. Finding this impossible, as the enemy were in possession of the country all around, he went to Westwood, the home of Dr. Brokenbrough, who was then a surgeon in the army. The enemy approached, and he, to avoid capture, was obliged to leave his brother's remains and escape on foot. Mrs. Brokenbrough sent for an Episcopal clergyman to perform the funeral ceremonies, but the enemy would not permit him to pass. Then, with a few other ladies, a fair haired little girl, her apron filled with white flowers, and a few faithful slaves who stood reverently near, a pious Virginia matron read the solemn and beautiful burial service over the cold, still form of one of the noblest gentlemen and most intrepid officers in the Confederate army. She watched the clouds heaped upon the coffin lid, then sinking on her knees, in sight and hearing of the foe, she committed his soul's welfare and the stricken hearts he had left behind him to the mercy of the All Father."

Meaning of Surnames.

Nearly all surnames originally had a meaning. They were descriptive of their owners. In a word, they were nicknames, like "Skinny" or "Shorty" or "Pud." Peel is a surname that shows the original Peel to have been bald. Grace means fat, from the French "gras." Grant, from "grand," means big. An Oliphant should be a clumsy and unwieldy person. This surname was "elephant" originally. The Parkers were keepers of noble men's parks. The Warners were warreners, or rabbit tenders. The Barkers prepared bark for tanning. The Laboucheres were butchers. Bell meant handsome. Cameron meant crook nosed. Curtis meant polite. And Forster meant a forester. Napier a servant in charge of the table linen, Palmer a pilgrim, Wainwright a wagon builder, Walter a wall builder, Webster a weaver, Wright a carpenter.

Substitutes For Tobacco.

Sailors on long cruises sometimes exhaust their tobacco. Thence untold misery and many ingenious efforts to create a tobacco substitute. Tea and coffee make the best tobacco substitutes. They smoke freely in pipe or cigarettes, and their taste and aroma are not unpleasant. But they burn the mouth and rack the nerves. Rope yarn—the untwisted parts of rope and oakum—is smoked by sailors as a last resort. Bark, peeled from the hoops of salt beef and pork barrels, is also smoked when the limit is reached. These things smoke abominably, and the black fumes that they give forth from the sailors' mouths are always accompanied by oaths and imprecations. Yet many a desperate sailor has smoked them in the hope of appeasing his tobacco hunger.

St. Maurice.

St. Maurice, in Switzerland, is the name of a little station on the railway that leads up the Rhone valley from the lake of Geneva. The place gets its name as follows: Maurice was the officer second in command of the Thebaic legion, which the Emperor Maximian marched over the Alps in A. D. 302 to quell a rising in Gaul. At Octodurum (Martigny) the legion, every man of which was a Christian, was ordered to sacrifice to the Roman gods for the success of the expedition. Headed by Maurice, they refused, marched off to Agaunum (St. Maurice) and there were twice decimated, and finally the remainder were surrounded and cut down by the rest of the army.

Automatic Cooking Boxes.

Automatic cooking boxes were in general use among the Hebrews nearly 2,000 years ago. The Greek and Roman writers frequently refer to them. In his edition of "Juvenile," for example, Friedlander cites a commentator, who refers to "the Jews who a day before the Sabbath put their viands hot into the cooking boxes, and pots being covered with napkins, and wrapped about with hay, so that they may have warm food on the Sabbath."

Always in Evidence.

"I notice," observed Tufford Knott, "that people don't pay no taxes on the coat of things they've got." "How's that?" grunted Rufon Wratz. "Well, for instance, if you wuz wuth even a million you wouldn't have to pay nothin' on that peach of a nose you've got."

Interested.

Nell—Mrs. Closeleigh is getting up a fair to help a poor widow pay her rent. Belle—I didn't know Mrs. Closeleigh was so philanthropic. Nell—She isn't. She owns the house the poor widow lives in.

Similar Symptoms.

One—Are you certain that you love the girl? Tuther—Certain? Why, I can't sleep of nights for thinking about her. One—I get the same effect from my tailor's bills.

The Way to Success.

Success in industrial business nowadays is as simple as a fairy tale. The young man must find out how to kill the dragon—the dragon of competition.

His Object.

"I can recommend you to a good lawyer." "All right, but don't let him be too good. I'm trying to conduct my business so as to keep out of jail, not so as to go to heaven."

After the Funeral.

"Oh, well, she's young and pretty and will get over it and marry again." "But it will take her a long time. She looks so well in black."

A SUPERHUMAN HATE

is Now Driving Force Behind Both Troops and Rebels.

THE ENORMITIES OF MADMEN

Fierce Fighting in the Streets of Moscow—5,000 Killed and 14,000 Wounded in the Battle—Insurgents Plan to Hold the Outskirts of the Town and to Close in Upon the Troops.

London, Dec. 26.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at St. Petersburg, in a despatch dated at 1.15 p.m., Dec. 25, says:

At an early hour this morning the casualties at Moscow were estimated at 5,000 killed and 14,000 wounded, with the fighting still proceeding. The inhabitants of Moscow have been forbidden to leave their dwellings after 7 o'clock in the evening. It is impossible to move about the city in consequence of the frequency of stray bullets. Many innocent persons have been accidentally killed. A scarcity of provisions is threatened.

The same correspondent, telegraphing at 10.35 p.m., says:

Your Moscow correspondent's telegrams have not been accepted because all private messages were refused this afternoon.

Desperate Fighting.—It is learned, however, that cannon firing is now proceeding in various parts of the city, where to-night were erected the railroad stations the barricades erected by the revolutionaries are being desperately defended.

The Kurk terminus at Moscow is being pillaged, and many wagons laden with provisions are being looted. The Emperor is engaged daily in reviewing at Tsarskoe-Selo, the remnants of the St. Petersburg district. The spirit of the troops is decidedly loyal.

The Fury of Hate.—From fragmentary accounts received from Moscow, I gather that the civil war has brought no decisive action, but only a thickening of the horrors, cloud, an intensifying of the horrors, and an increase of the prevailing bitterness.

The driving force behind both the troops and the rebels is no longer that of enthusiasm or of any human impulse.

It is the fury of superhuman hate, and hence the deeds reported are not acts of patriots, soldiers or otherwise, but the enormities of madmen.

For every barricade destroyed Sunday, two or three appeared in other places. Orders were given by the revolutionists to shoot only when there was great hope of bringing down, but otherwise to tire out the troops until they lost patience.

The most surprising thing of all is the loyalty of the troops, which nobody here anticipated.

Talking with an intelligent group of St. Petersburg revolutionists I was informed that while they believed the strike would be victorious, they fully realized they were staking everything upon the issue, and that failure would set back their cause for several years. They said they were confident of the Russian future in full confidence that once the existing regime was overthrown, they could as quickly build another and that foreign nations would be as ready to advance money to a democratic republic as to the autocracy.

In conclusion they declared that in event of failure of their cause they would have recourse to terrorism, choosing their victims from all classes of society.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 26.—Direct telegraphic communication with Moscow was severed last night, but the Government succeeded in restoring communication by a roundabout route yesterday morning.

All reports agree that the fighting Sunday, which continued until midnight, assumed the nature of a butchery by the machine guns of the artillery, grape and canister being employed mercilessly against the ill-armed insurgents.

Atrocious tales are told of the Cossacks, who, piled with vodka until drunk, fired down the streets, sometimes charging with lances. The insurgents displayed great stubbornness in holding their barricades, even advancing in a mass to the slaughter. At the same time the bombs were thrown from the windows of houses near the barricades occupied by the revolutionaries. The artillery was summoned and battered the houses to pieces.

The plan of the insurgents, it is stated, is to hold the outskirts and gradually enclose the troops in the centre of the city.

Leaders announce that an army of 30,000 is concentrated at Orechhoffooff, north of Moscow, and will soon be ready to march to the city's assistance.

The latest report is that both sides were exhausted at midnight, when firing practically ceased. The streets were in absolute darkness, save for searchlights in the towers of the bivouacs behind barricades.

At this glad season of the year we wish to thank the people in and about Lindsay for the cash you have left with us during the year 1905.

We've enjoyed a splendid trade and have constantly endeavored to give extra value for every dollar passed over our counters.

We have won the confidence of the public, and as long as we have your appreciation there will be no let up to the work of better satisfying all.

Again wishing you the compliments, I am

Yours very sincerely,
