CAMBRIDGE STREET CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

COLLECTIONS WERE LIBERAL AND SERVICES INTERESTING LAST SUNDAY-SUNDAY SCHOOL GAVE $300.

Last Sunday was a special occasion of much interest in Cambridge street Methodist church was Anniversary Sunday, and the trustees had asked the congregation and Sunday school to make a free will offering of $1,000 to apply on reduction of the mortgage debt. This amount was not quite realized on Sunday. An amount almost reaching $900 was, however, received, and it is expected that the total of $1,000 will be made up during this week. The members of the Sunday school nobly did their part, undertaking to contribute $300, and this was passed by a few cents.

The preacher of the day was Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., of Bridge street church, Belleville, and his sermons were bright and forcible, interspersed with many epigrammatic sayings. In the morning he congratulated the congregation on the improvements made in the church since he had last visited it, and in the evening he commended the Sunday school for the enthusiasm shown in regard to the contribution to the church debt. His morning text was Galatians 6-9, 10: "Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. As we have opportunity therefore let us do good to all men, especially to them who are the household of faith." This epistle, the preacher said, was the most Pauline of all Pauline things. The Galatians were the Frenchmen of the olden days, some Gauls had settled in the mountain fastnesses of Asia Minor, and had embraced Christianity. They were a volatile people, and found the Christian life prosaic. Paul wrote to stir them up. The word translated opportunity was the same as the one translated season, and the latter part of the text did not mean that we were to wait for opportunity, but that in the sowing season we were to do good to all men. People become weary of doing the same things over and over again, in the office, in the household, in all kinds of work. It was so in religious life. There was so much to do of an unobtrusive kind, of seemingly little moment. There was no romance in it. But it was the routine work that sold. The snowflake was little but it had chiselled continents. There was missionary effort, temperance work, educational work, and we become weary of doing this over and over again. The history of the church was not, however, a picture of pety, but a biography of heroic men and women mounting up on wings, running in the Christian life were romantic, but the climax was walking, carrying out the details without being weary. Bishop Potter's tavern excited interest because of its novelty, but it failed. The Sunday schools, the Bands of Hope, the Leaguers, the Endeavorers kept at it, and did the work of doing good. Havelock and his saints were always ready and when no one else could be had in an emergency in the East Indian war, they were sent for. So it was with some Christians. They could always be called on. Christ had his Peter and James and John, and he has had their successors all down the centuries. The speaker urged his hearers not to tire. They would reap if they fainted not. Some got tired because they are unappreciated. How often men wait for a word of appreciation. People are of three classes. Those who bear no burdens, those who bear their own, and those who as far as they can bear the burdens of others. It is so in the world and in the church. How much rests on a few. The man who is busiest can always do a little more. What a glorious thing if all would say, "I'll bear my own burden and that of everybody else that I can." Some became weary because they have to wait for results. The time of growth is a time of anxiety to the farmer. All character is the result of growth. If there is a sowing season there is as surely a reaping season. We should never be discouraged. What a mother puts in her family she will surely get out. The question of each one present should be how much Divine enthusiasm will I put into this church this year. In the afternoon Mr. Wilson addressed the Sunday school, and in the evening preached on the abounding grace of God to save all, from 2 Cor. 9, 8. The music under the direction of Organist and Choirleader Newton was specially suited to the occasion. Besides the anthems Mr. W. Perkins gave a fine rendering of "The Homeland" at the morning service, and Mrs. Blackwell contributed a solo at the evening service which was appreciated.
