The ancients believed that there was a close connection between bees and the soul. An old Welsh tradition is that bees came from paradise, leaving the garden when man fell, but with God's blessing, so that the wax is necessary in the celebration of the mass.

The Clock's Tick.

"Not all people," said the jeweler, "like the ticking of a clock. It is pleasant sound to most people, but not to all. Some people, clock lovers these, couldn't sleep without a clock in the same room. Its ticking is company, and it scares away the spooks. Such people would wake up if the clock should stop in the middle of the night. But there are other people who can't sleep with a clock in the same room and who, if they found themselves in a strange place anywhere with a clock in their sleeping apartment, would stop the clock before they went to bed. Of course there is much of habit in this, but we have our fancies about clocks, as we do about all things else."

Mesmer published in 1773 his ac count of the marvelous cures effected by what he was pleased to term animal magnetism. When in 1778 he came to Paris he came with a well developed sense of the value of advertising. The campaign he inaugurated was of a character to disgust the conservative and thoughtful, but to take a sensation loving populace by storm. Most extravagant tales of cures he had accomplished in Berlin, Vienna and elsewhere were noised abroad. Through a convert he challenged the physicians of Paris to enter into a contest with him, they to treat twelve patients by the orthodox methods, he to treat twelve by his. Of course this challenge was rejected, and equally of course its rejection was interpreted by the thoughtless as an acknowledgment of Suggestion, indeed, was its root element, although Mesmer failed or pretended to fail to recognize this and taught that its efficacy depended upon the effluence of a mysterious fluid. In a room dimly lighted and hung with mirrors the patients were seated about a circular vat of considerable size covered with a lid and containing various chemicals. A long cord connected the patients with one another, while in the lid of the tub were several holes, through each of which passed an iron rod bent in such a way that its point could be applied to any part of a patient's body. The patients were requested not to speak, the only sound in the room being strains of soft music. Much the most important is the thumb, for without it prehension would be very imperfect The hand is no longer pinchers, but merely a claw, when deprived of the thumb. It may be estimated that the thumb represents fully a third of the total value of the hand. The French courts, allow 15 to 85 per cent value for the right hand and 10 to 15 for the left. The Austrian schedule gives from 15 per cent for the left to 25 per cent for the right. In Germany 20 and 28 per cent and even as high as 33.3 per cent has been awarded. The percentage is based on 100 as the total industrial value of the hand previous to the accident, a loss of 50 per cent epresenting half of the value, etc.

The total loss of the index finger causes an incapacity estimated at 10 to 15 per cent in Austria, 16 to 20 per cent in Germany, 15 per cent for the left and 20 per cent for the right by Italian courts. The French allow 15

The middle finger is of much more importance than the index, states Dr. Meiguan, whom we are citing and who is no small authority, for a great loss of force is observed in the hand when the finger is amputated. Yet almost all the authorities ascribe less importance to it than the index. The Italian law allows 5 per cent, the Austrian 5 to 10 per cent.

The ring finger is the least important. Its total loss often does not cause incapacity. The Austrian tariff assimilates this finger to the middle one. The Italian law is liberal, with 8 per cent. The French and German tribunals.often refuse indemnity, considering the incapacity resulting from the loss as very slight.

I have tried repeatedly by all manner of means to overcome the influence of the vibration on the heart, but I find that by even swinging a patient in a hammock, where the shaking up is not greatly felt, the result of the heart reading is far from satisfactory. "The first day at sea in this ship on her maiden voyage I had occasion to treat an Englishman who was en route to Canada on business. I was startled to hear his heart. Yet he had the finest kind of cardiac action, as I ascertained once the ship's machinery stopped. I have since found it to be an invariable rule that the engine's vibration makes it appear as though the heart of the average man was going to stop before I could get the stethoscope away from his breast. "Vibration does not hurt the heart any. Do not make the mistake of supposing that it does. It just sounds as though the end was positive, and, while the patient's heart is beating in regular form, the shaking of the ship deceives even the practiced ear."

CANADA'S FUTURE.

Walter Frewen Lord Is Most Enthusiastic and Is Lavish In Superlatives In Describing Her Wonders.

"Canada is a country with an anxious past, a solid present, and an illimitable future," was the way in which Prof. Walter Frewen Lord, of Cambridge, summed up his impressions of the country the other day. Prof. Lord, who addressed the Empire Club at Toronto on Thursday, has been in Canada quietly investigating for five months. He expressed himself as overwhelmed with the country's possibilities. Most of this time has been spent in the Eastern provinces. He arrived in Toronto recently, but everywhere the same impression met him of almost infinite resources, greater than he had expected, greater than Englishmen

"I went over the Niagara power plant at the Falls the other day," he went on. "It was a revelation to me. The cataract was wonderful, of course, but it struck me that the work of man in harnessing it was far more wonderful. It seemed to me the greatest thing that was ever attempted-the greatest thing on earth. And Canada seems to be full of great things. Every man I see seems to have a waterfall or a mountain or a forest of his own.

The reporter suggested crudities to balance these things. "I haven't seen them. I confess I had not expected so much nobility, so much fine culture, in a new country as I find. Toronto seems to me almost one of the greatest cities I have ever seen, and Montreal is magnificent in situation and construction, and full of art. It has some of the finest pictures of the world there." Particularly Prof. Lord expressed himself with the Provincial University and its juxtaposition to the Parliament Buildings struck him greatly -that on one side the Canadian youth should be taught how to govern and to be governed, and on the other side Canadian men should be putting these teachings into practice. "Emigration to Canada is becoming more popular every day in England," said Prof. Lord. "Why shouldn't it be? There is no colony offering such inducements. You are Saxon types here, like the Scottish-Canadians, and the country needs them. It is a dour country, and it needs dour men to subdue it, and the Canadian type has been equal to the "I don't know just what shape the future of Canada will take," continued the historian of "The Lost Possessions of England." I am no prophet, but it must be a great one. The country is so vast, and so little of it, comparatively, been touched.

For some reason, Prof. Lord remarked, Englishmen know much more of Australia than of Canada. One reason for this. he suggested, might be the similarity of sports. Australia is a cricketing country; Canada is not. The chief events of the racing world are the Derby, the Grand Prix, and the Melbourne Cup, with the King's Plate a long way behind. And sports, after all, are a closer bond of union than politics. Indeed, Prof. Lord declared himself to be no politician. "I had thought of going on to the West and possibly to Japan," he said, "but I find that my impressions of Canada already are more than have been able to digest as yet. must sit down somewhere and think. My last word would be this-that the past of Canada has been anxious, but her present is solid, and her future
