"Mums the Word!" with Pugsley.

A Great Flaying in Parliament for the Pugnacious One, but now he, who had so much to say, is Dumb as an Oyster—Big Estimates for Next Year; $13,547,572 More than Last Year asked for—Some of Fielding's Expenses and Interest Payments—Conservative Platform Strongly Supported

Ottawa, Dec. 14, 1907

The debate on the address was continued three days of this week, closing on Wednesday a vigorous eight days discussion. The opposition speakers were aggressive and vigorous, showing a splendid fighting spirit, confidence in their cause and a certainty that they have the country on their side. Sir Wilfrid at the beginning departed from the usual course and instead of explaining the policy and intentions of his government and dealing with the addresses before the house, went out of his way to attack Mr. Borden's platform and to insinuate that it had not the support of Conservatives generally, but was Mr. Borden's own creation.

THE CONSERVATIVE PLATFORM
Before the debate was through it was made clear to the Premier that the Conservative party in the house stood by the platform. Every paragraph in it was discussed and defended with strong argument. The opposition forced a division three times, with the result that the government majority was in each case less than the normal margin, showing that Sir Wilfrid's supporters were less willing to record their votes against the platform than the Conservatives were to stand by it.

CONSERVATIVE SPEAKERS.
Mr. Armstrong's motion for free delivery of mail in rural districts was voted down by a majority of 49, notwithstanding the mass of evidence which the mover produced to show that the system had been remarkably successful in the United States and other countries. Mr. Staples, of Manitoba, showed how much the Government, which cannot afford to take up directions, had wasted in other directions, particularly in subsidizing creatures of its own who were employed in mutilating electoral lists and stuffing ballot boxes. Mr. Wright of Muskoka proved that the immigration returns of the government were enormously padded. He mentioned one car load of passengers with whom he travelled from St. Paul to Winnipeg, who were all put down in the records as settlers from the United States, though there was not one settler among them. They were commercial travellers, visitors, a minstrel troupe and other ordinary passengers. But they will all figure as immigrants. Mr. Jackson, of Elgin, pointed out the shortcomings of the Department of Agriculture and asked for better protection for the farmers from railway trains crossing their lands. Mr. McLean, of Prince Edward Island, made a strong appeal against the neglect of that province by a government which seems to have millions to spend in regions where nobody lives. Mr. Perley, of Argenteuil, showed that the increase in expenditure was not represented by corresponding services and benefits. Mr. Lake of Qu'Appelle, and Dr. Roche, of Marquette, addressed themselves to several abuses in western administration and to the unsatisfactory condition of Canadian trade.

THE QUEBEC BRIDGE.
On Wednesday, Mr. Barker, of Hamilton, moved an amendment deploring the unbusiness-like proceedings of the government in the matter of the Quebec bridge. The history of this enterprise, ending with the awful calamity of last August is summed up in a sentence in the Scientific American, which says "read the records of this transaction, you would more like the story of some county bridge than the record of bridge engineering of the century." Mr. Barker, Mr. Monk and Mr. Haggart showed that this impartial criticism was just.

THE COUNTRY PAYS.
Four years ago the Quebec Bridge Company had expended all the subsidies it could get, had issued nearly half a million dollars of bonds which it had to sell for 60 cents on the dollar, but had paid up less than one per cent. of its stock. It was practically bankrupt and could not go on. Premier Parent, of Quebec, who was also Mayor of Quebec City, had supplied a Provincial grant and a City grant, and obtained a subsidy from the federal government, one member of which was his own partner in business. Yet the company was over $700,000 in debt. The Government should then have taken over the work, as the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme had been adopted and the bridge was to be a part of this Transcontinental. Instead Government ment rushed through in the last hours of the Session of 1903 a bill authorizing a loan to the Company of $678,200, which was then estimated to be the cost of completing the work. This programme compelled the public to pay more than 98 per cent. of the cost, but left the control in the hands of the Company, whose president was made chairman of the Transcontinental Commission at $8,000 a year, while he continued to receive $3,000 a year from the Bridge Company. Later it was found that the government estimate was too low, and that the bridge would cost something like ten million dollars, leaving another three million dollars for the country to pay.

NO PUBLIC CONTROL.
Though the country was paying practically the whole cost of the bridge, it does not yet appear that the Government engineering staff paid any attention to the plans or had any supervision of the work. The whole matter was allowed to drift, and money was paid out when demanded until the end of August, when the bridge went down and scores of lives were lost. Many thousands will now be spent by a Commission to find out whether the company's engineers or the contractors' engineers were at fault, while a much smaller expenditure would have been sufficient to have the plans properly examined in the first place. The government must now take over the work as it should have done four years ago, but it cannot restore the loss of life and property.

A WEAK PLEA.
Mr. Fielding and Sir Wilfrid Laurier pleaded that the subject ought not to be discussed until the commission reported. The answer was that the commission had nothing to do with the course of the Government in leaving this great work in the hands of a company which had no important stake in the matter, and was practically a bankrupt concern. In any case, the right of the house to discuss matter of this importance cannot be taken away by the appointment of a commission. After a lively discussion Mr. Barker's motion was defeated by a party majority of 46.

MR. PUGSLEY CHALLENGED.
The most sensational episode in the address debate was the challenge to Mr. Pugsley. Four times outside the House the Minister of Public Works has talked of disclosures that he could make respecting Conservative campaign expenditure in 1904. Before the House met Mr. Borden, whom Mr. Pugsley connected with the transactions, challenged the Minister to make good his statements. In the first day's debating Mr. Borden repeated the invitation to the Minister to tell all he knew. Yet Mr. Pugsley kept silent. Day after day he was reminded that he ought to speak, yet remained dumb. But on Tuesday Mr. Kemp, of Toronto, put the challenge in a form which allowed of no escape for Mr. Pugsley without exposing himself to the contempt of the country.

MR. PUGSLEY BEFORE THE ELECTION.
Mr. Kemp gave a sketch of Mr. Pugsley's political activities immediately before the election of 1904. The persons accused by Government organs of a dark conspiracy to overthrow the Government with the help of an immense corruption fund, were then intimate and confidential friends of Mr. Pugsley, and were trying to make him Minister of Railways. The head of this alleged conspiracy, Mr. David Russell, gave a great banquet to Mr. Pugsley a month before the election, where speakers nominated him to the Dominion Ministry, and Mr. Russell's newspapers in that connection announced it as the opinion of the banqueters that Mr. Pugsley must be promoted. Immediately after this, according to Mr. Pugsley's own statement, large contributions were made to defeat Mr. Emmerson in the Westmount riding. Mr. Kemp pieced together the evidence to show that whatever was done for the defeat of Mr. Emmerson was done by Mr. Pugsley's friends and in his interest. He read from a New Brunswick paper a statement that Mr. Pugsley was aware of these proceedings and in the opinion of that journal was the chief advisory man in the scheme.

THE CHALLENGE.
There was a continued round of Conservative applause as these facts were revealed, but they became stronger when Mr. Kemp again and again challenged Mr. Pugsley to tell all he knew.

"I doubt," said Mr. Kemp, "whether he has the courage to stand up and repeat in this house what he said upon the public platform."
Mr. Kemp added: "So far as I am concerned and I believe any other member on this side of the house, we desire to see him go the full length. It does not make any difference whom he hits, be they high or low, be they in this house or out of this house, we want to see this matter brought to light, and we want to know what there is in it. If the Honorable gentleman refuses to go further, if he is satisfied to make insinuations in this way he has done outside of the house, without taking steps to make his position good, I cannot but feel that he is condemned before the country for making statements which he knew were not true. Sir, he has talked of these things on the hustings; but he has sat in this house not daring to open his mouth. He is now at the bar of public opinion, and let him choose his court."

AN INDEPENDENT INVITATION.
In various forms this challenge was repeated by Mr. Kemp amid approving cheers. Not one word could be got from the minister. He sat in the fashion described by Mr. Kemp, to the great confusion and disgust of many government supporters, some of whom two days later in the government caucus made strong complaints against this course. From the back benches Mr. Lavergne, an independent member of the party, repeated the demand that Mr. Pugsley should speak. "If he has anything to say," said Mr. Lavergne, "let him say it now." A little later he added, "The Minister of Public Works should not wait to be forced to speak, and if he does wait I think he should be forced. If he knows of any corruption it is his duty to himself, to the Liberal party and to the country to bring these facts to light." This member added a stinging comparison Mr. Pugsley to the Trojans who challenged the Greeks to combat and then ran away.

can be got from Mr. Pugsley. Mr. Aylesworth, who made his first appearance this week, will next be invited to make good his statements concerning Mr. Borden's connection with the corruption fund.

DEATH OF MR. GUNN.
The country and the Conservative party has suffered severe loss by the death of Mr. Benjamin Gunn, the late member for South Huron, who died at St. Luke's Hospital, in this city, on Monday. Warm tributes were paid by Mr. Fielding and Mr. Borden to the character of their departed colleague.

EXTRAVAGANT ESTIMATES.
The estimates for next year, brought down this week go to show that the extravagance which has marked the last few years is to go on increasing. Though this year's expenditure will far exceed that of any previous twelve months, it is proposed to spend a great deal more next year.

To show how things are going this year, we have the official announcement of expenditure for the last eight months compared with the same period last year. It shows the following:

Increase of taxes	7,966,691
Increase of total revenue	5,148,876
Increase of cur. exp.	8,457,680
Increase of cap. exp.	8,685,320
Total increase of exp.	17,143,000
Increase of expenditure over increase of rev.	7,994,125

INCREASED INTEREST CHARGE.
We have also the statement of Mr. Fielding in the House that, whereas when he took office he floated a loan at two and a half per cent, he is now paying four per cent. on bonds that came due last year, and are continued for four years to come; that he is paying four and a half per cent. on two and a half million dollars borrowed from banks, and seven per cent. on overdraft of $1,500,000, while he has large debts falling due within a few months.

A FEW SAMPLES.
It cost $42,062.00 to pay experts last year to put the Marine and Fisheries account books in shape. One of these experts was paid $7,032, another $5,861, a third $5,282.
It cost $88,366 to build an addition to the Western Block, which only contains nine working rooms. The Government worked the Yukon telegraph system at this rate for the last eight months:

Receipts	552,725
Expenditure	136,188
Deficit	83,463

HOW TURNIP FLAVOR MAY BE OVERCOME

"DON'T FEED TURNIPS" THE BEST WAY. WESTERN ONTARIO CHEESE MAKER USES SALTPETRE.
On account of the scarcity of other feeds the "turnip flavor" is more noticeable this year than usual—and that's bad enough. Many are practically compelled—or think they are, which practically works out to the same thing—to feed turnips to their dairy animals. The result is that users of the dairy product must either cultivate a taste for turnips in their butter, or dairymen must find some way to reduce the objectionable flavor to a minimum. The consumer will undoubtedly be slow to adapt himself to anything along the line of a turnip sandwich, so it seems to be up to the dairymen to find a way out. When spoken to about the matter, Mr. F. H. Reed, the agricultural expert at the L.C.I., said that if the turnips are fed after milking the trouble of the objectionable flavor is reduced, but he did not favor the feeding of turnips in any quantity at all, if it could be avoided.

The conclusion, then is not to feed turnips at all, if avoidable, and otherwise to feed in as comparatively small quantities as possible and to feed after milking—not before or during the milking time. One of the chief objections to feeding turnips during the milking time is that the odor of the turnips is nearly sure to find its way to the milk.

A cheesemaker in a Western Ontario factory has recently been adding his idea to the long list of experiments to prevent the passage of the turnip flavor. This cheesemaker says that this year he has had less trouble than usual with tainted milk, and even the turnip-top feed nuisance has not seriously inconvenienced him or hurt his product. If the turnip odor was apparent he dissolved a teaspoonful of saltpetre in water and thoroughly stirred it in the vat of milk before applying heat. This seemed to thoroughly work off the turnip flavor.

THE RURAL DOCTOR

THERE ARE MANY "WILLIAM McCLURENS", BUT FEW IAN MACLAURENS' TO TELL ABOUT THEM.

The Toronto News gives the following synopsis of an address by Dr. N. A. Powell, to Toronto medical students last week:—
"A country doctor is a perfected medical student," said Dr. N. A. Powell, addressing a large body of medical students Friday afternoon. His subject was "The Country Doctor," and his portrayal of the experiences which environ the life of that indispensable personage in a rural community was exceedingly interesting. The doctor's speech was somewhat historical in that it pictured Adam as the father of the profession, administering catnip tea to Abel and binding up Eve's throbbing temple with a fig leaf handkerchief.

The speaker delved into statistics to the extent of making a statement that it required eight years to establish a practice in a city, four in a town, and one or two in a village or the country.

Picturing the impetus which marked the country doctor's advent, he described his means of travel as a horse picked from the best on his father's farm, or one he has bought on a slow note with the assistance of paternal endorsement.

Scene two of the doctor's life was marked by a strange unrest. Assuredly the most widely spread of all maladies was upon him, and very shortly, the doctor became a living example of the fact that more men fall in love than in war.

"The doctor doesn't circle round and back-peddle on his affections," said Dr. Powell. "He uses that instrument of precision, his heart, and never making a mistake. Lawyers see the worst side of life, ministers the best side, and the doctor just as it is. Finally he selects the very best girl, the one who has agreed to call him 'George,' instead of 'doctor.'"

"Ten years later sees the country doctor thoroughly established. He has become reeve of the township, chairman of the school board, and an elder of the church.

"The ideal country doctor, it seems to me, must have the wisdom of Solomon, the strength of Samson, the bravery of Joshua, the charity of Dorcas, the meekness of Moses, the business capacity of Jezebel, and the tireless perseverance of the devil himself. The country doctor's life is one of unconscious bravery and devotion to duty. There are many William McClurens but no Ian MacLaurens to tell about them.

The country doctor was described as not only a man of tender sympathies, but one of sound, common sense, having within him as a prominent asset of his nature, an ever-ready inclination to cheerfulness, and a strong sense of humor.

"If it had never been intended that this world should be mirthful, so many funny things would not have been allowed to happen," said Dr. Powell.

"From 10 years' work as a country doctor a large sum can be accumulated at one's ledger. But from 75 to 90 per cent. of it is good—or will be after the threshing or in the spring. Generally, however, a country doctor is safe from any sudden attack of influence.

"A poor man served by thee shall make thee rich, a weak man served by thee shall make thee strong, thou shall be helped by every sense of service, which thou renderest," was the parting word of the speaker.
