CHRISTMAS GIVING

It is such a misfortune to spoil a possibility which comes to us but once a year, so pitiable to rob ourselves as well as our beneficiaries of the happiness that a sincere element of sentiment may always carry. It is so unworthy to put into one's Christmas gifts no deeper significance than just monetary value--and so to lose the true spirit of the Christmastide--allowing, through our own bungling and lack of appreciation, so rich an opportunity to dwindle down to a meaningless custom, nothing more than an annual shopping tour. Just the buying of a number of shop-displayed articles, to be sent home, sorted over--the best and most costly apportioned to those who need them least, who are already over-supplied with this world's goods, and the "odds and ends" of the job lot, left remaining in the dust of forgotten basements--distribution among those who have no relations and friends to whom gifts and homes will convey our greetings and in festive touching no chord of tenderness or love. The step-children of Providence are very kind of appreciation.

Can we not make a reversal of the order of things this blessed Christmas? We will find its fruits before another dawn. Let us strive that our gift shall be appropriate, meeting the tastes the wants, the dreams of our friends. If we send a pair of gloves, a book, a picture, a basket of fruit, a box of pretty handkerchiefs, or one of useful hosiery, a vinaigrette, an umbrella, a dainty timepiece, a dress-length, a muff and boa, a barrel of flour, a ton of coal, a plant, a magazine subscription, etc., let the article reach where it will prove a boon. Let us do some thinking!

In the fulfilling of our resolve that this Christmas shall be no repetition of its predecessors, let us not direct an expensive box of bonbons, to the house where there already abounds a nauseating surfeit of sweets, and just a Christmas card to the little one who has never beheld, outside of a shop window, a pretty basket of confectionery, or an extravagant toy to the abode where the storeroom is piled high with articles of the same character, of which the blase little owner has grown weary; and a box of clean handkerchiefs to the child whose heart is pining for just one specimen of what Fortune's spoiled darling but casts aside. A theatre concert, or opera ticket would prove there a gift of untold meaning. But let us discriminate here, too, that the concert possibility may not find its way to the friend who will be lacking in appreciation. Let us send it where it will mark a red-letter day in the thoughts, carrying sweet memories away into the new year, and even further.

Let us not address the theatre opera to the opera lover, and vice versa. Let us send no messenger to the wrong door. Fate does enough of this. But Fate plays her little game that he may give to her children the dear privilege of reversing her ways of sending happiness into sorrowful lives, and so through earnest "good will" storing up peace and joy unto themselves. And just here it seems apropos for this pen to utter a last--to leave to their own Christmas reveries and inspirations. "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

RENEW EARLY.

There are some people who are as the salt of the earth. They are always trying to accommodate other folks just as much as possible. And generally they find that it does not entail a great deal of self inconvenience to do so. We all like a person who belonged to that class. Why shouldn't we? Now we will tell our subscribers just how they can do us a good turn if they will.

Now what we ask is simply this: Couldn't you send in your renewal a very much as thousands of our subscriptions expire within the next few weeks. And it would really do you no harm. Then the job would be done and we would avoid the usual rush. Then if you would get your neighbor to send in his subscription along with yours, you would be doing him a good turn, and your efforts on his behalf.

ORE ENGINE ON THE FARM.

Mr. James, Ontario's Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has prodded the province on the question of obtaining greater yields from our farms. In the December issue of the Technical World there appears an article on "Making the Farm a Factory." This title expresses the idea in Mr. James' mind. Factory system is needed in order to make the farms of Ontario yield more bountifully and improve in fertility instead of becoming exhausted.

The following is an excerpt from the article referred to, dealing with the engine on the farm. The writer says: "Last year, on a farm of seven hundred and sixty acres, I kept regularly three work horses, hiring extra horses when haying and threshing. This year, with a thousand acres to farm, I expect to need fewer extra horses during the rush season, using the engine more at this work than before. This reduction in the number of men and horses required on the farm is not the only valuable feature in an engine. In almost the entire United States and all over Canada there are certain months of the year when little or no work is done in the fields. The horses stand idle in the barn, eating regularly three times a day. The only return their owners get from the feed they eat is the manure they make. In fact, the horse nowhere near pays for his keep during these months. The same feed given to cattle, sheep or hogs, would give just as great value in manure, and would also give an income in the form of milk, wool and flesh. The engine has consumed nothing, and so costs nothing, during these months.

The heaviest, hardest and most important work of the year comes in the spring, immediately following a spell of idleness. The horses have not been doing enough to keep them in good working condition. They cannot be rushed much when the weather permits one to work. The engine is in just as good condition at the end of the idle spell as it was at the beginning. And here is where I got one of the greatest benefits from my engine. When the seeding season does finally get good I divide my men into two shifts and we work the engine day and night. We get all our small grain in within a few days, when the conditions are the best and my chances are that much better for a uniformly good crop. It looks mighty good to me to see that old engine pounding away from seven in the morning until six at night, and then from seven at night until six in the morning, when every minute saved means dollars in the pocket.

One little deed is worth reams of indorsements of big deeds. Life is too short to miss a kindness, too long to cherish hate. Take care of your living and your dying will take care of itself. "Won't you have a seat, sir?" asked the porter.

FANNING'S BIG SALE.

The sale at Fanning's repository was again highly successful. Farmers picked up 47 cows at prices that should be satisfactory to them. One pair of bolts brought $250 and were purchased by J. A. Lambert, of Silver Lake. The next will be the biggest cow sale of the season and buyers will make no mistake in being present on Dec. 23. These sales attract big crowds and the reputation is a big place on sale here. This being the case and with the fact that the sale is being held at their usual advantage.
