Reaching Out After Municipal Honors.

The Nominations Monday Morning - For Mayor, Reeve, and First and Second Deputies-Great Interest Manifested in the Different Wards.

The individuality of the 1895 council is completely lost in the host of nominations made to-day for the new council of 1896, and the people have exercised their rights as free citizens in a manner very tiresome to the poll-clerks. Nomination day affords a pleasant opportunity for Neighbor Jones to testify his esteem for Neighbor Brown by placing his name on the list of candidates for one or other of the municipal positions of trust; and Neighbor Brown, innately gratified, forthwith returns the favor. Monday this pleasant practice was carried to the extreme, and a portentous list of presumable candidates was the re-

Directly after the nominations, with Mr. Jas. Mitchell in the chair, and Mr. O'Boyle as secretary, followed the speeches. One detected a feeling of subdued excitement submitting their names to the electorate, which goes to show that in their opinion the affairs of the town have been administered fairly well, and that the retiring councillors have little to accuse themselves of. It is just as well that the electors should look at these matters in the proper light, in order that the experienced men detected a reeling of subdued excitement and fervor in the air, waiting for something did ignite as soon as the speeches started, and took a rather formidable shape as the speakers heaped on the fuel. On the whole, however, be it said to the credit of the nominees, beyond the few personalities arising from election heat,

During the speaking a man with a string, and a bear at the other end, passed by, causing considerable noise. The speaker, who was warming up to his subject, exclaimed, "never mind the bears ou'side—there are bears enough inside."

The whem it may Concern.

Idd not tell Mr. Eilis that Mr. Bryans and wout first find from the lill Mr. Bryans and bout priests interfering in Ops election last year; I merely told him that Mr. Bryans said that Catholic votes and others; what remains is very uncertain. The reward of improvement and the penalty for misimprovement were also urged. In the evening there was present about Roman Catholics.

Drawing himself up and appealing to the audience to act as jurymen, he the judge in slow and measured tones he called on Isaac Watson, assessor of the township, to answer to a charge of fraudently placing and misplacing names on the assessor's list, "Guilty or not guilty?' Answer:
"Not guilty." Whereupon the names of Miller, Howden, Danoon, Kennedy, McCausland, Gould, Thorne, Watters and Jordan, and circumstances connected therawith, were exposed to public glare. Mr. Walker accused the council of misdeeds concerning names on the list. With Mr. O'Boyle's explanation, the council managed, with tolerable good grace and a show of dignity, to vindicate their innocance. Meanwhile Mr. Watson, who had been chaffing under Mr. Walker's chastisement, rose up in his wrath and in flery words explained his position. Church Notes.

-At St. Paul's church Sunday morning Mr. Percy Soanes, B. A., read the prayers and Mr. Beechman, of Wycliffe college, read the lessons and preached His subject was "The Christian race" .... In the evening Mr. Beechman read the prayers, and Rev. Mr. Marsh read the lessons and preached from Isaiah 40: 29: "He giveth power to the faint; and to them that have no might he increaseth strength." The sermon was very appro priate to the close of the year. preacher recommended his hearers to look back upon the past with a view to making good resolutions for improvement in the future. He also hoped that family prayers would be carried on regularly in every house ..... The congregations were quite large at both services. -The Cannington Methodist church was opened on Sabbath, Dec. 22nd. It was a somewhat unfavorable day, yet the church ing on Monday was a great success. The remaining debt of about $3,500 was fully provided for. The church is a very beautiful one, and it would be hard to suggest any improvement; in all its departments it seems to be very complete. Great credit is due to the very efficient committee for their great success achieved as the result of much time and attention given. Rays. S. J. Shorey and J. W. credit of the nominees, beyond the few personalities arising from election heat, no serious harm was wrought.

Mr. Johnston Ellis, a candidate for the reeveship, set the ball rolling. At some length he explained the financial aspect of affairs, the material of which was taken from the Ops detailed statement, and then proceeded to deal with a few years are come then I shall go the way whence I shall not return." In the morning he gave a number of reasons why we should improve our time, it is so short day, and consequently could not give detailed advice, but his precepts in the text state certain principles that can and should be applied to each and every event of our lives. Firstly, honor all man. We treat men very much according to their worldly riches or position; God judges them by what their natures are and the Magee, Mabel Pogue, Bruce McNevan.

motives that govern their lives. Consequently he would have us show a respect and consideration for our fellow men, be they rich or poor, learned or unlearned. This principle is world-wide in its application. Secondly, love the brotherhood. This refers both to ec-religionists and to a national brotherhood. There are bounds within which we are especially interested, and the welfare of our country means the welfare of ourselves and our follow countrymen. This does not clash with the first J. Every man who votes for legal measures should first assure him-self that he is voting in accordance with his understanding of God's will. Every man who takes public office should con-duct himself as remembering that while serving his fellow men he should serve God also, and if apparent expediency conflicts with God's will it is his duty to abide by the latter. Fourthly, honor the king. We are enjoined to respect the powers that he, the word king here representing whatever shape the government may assume. We are not, however, to be blindly subservient, but truly and intelligently loyal. Those whose votes appoint their rulers are under more obligations to elect such men as can be honored and

-At St. Andrew's church last Sunday morning the text was taken from Exodus 12:2: "This month shall be unto you the beginning of months," etc. In the sermon the pastor proposed to treat of the subject in two sections, speaking first to the con-gregation, secondly to them as individuals. As a church the words "this month struck him with peculiar force, for nine years ago this month had seen the present Presbyterian edifice erected in this town. In speaking of our church two ideas pre-sented themselves: the work of the past -Mrs. Robt. Sylvester has returned sented themselves: the work of the past home, after visiting her mother in Bow- and the future. After a few flattering remarks concerning the past work of the church, the speaker emphasized the fact so should we, as a church, improve on past undertakings; speaking in a general way, to enlarge on its advantages and to avoid during the future past mistakes. The same applies to individuals. Look at the record page of '95 covered with accounts of blunders and also good acts; take the clean page of '96, and shun the past year's sins, and by the grace of God grow in Christian works, thus fitting us to meet with fortitude the troubles that were to come, remembering also that each act tends heavenward or downward.....At tends heavenward or downward.....At the evening service the pastor referred to municipal matters, taking his text from Gen. 41: 41: "I shall set thee a ruler over all the land of Egypt," Mr. Macmillan, making a parallel story of Joseph to-day, took his text at this opportune time as referring to municipal elections. In opening, the preacher with great care explained his reasons for speaking on this subject.

The able discourse which followed we will not pretend to report by any means fully. alities. 1st. At elections every citizen has his duty to perform, whether as a candidate or an elector. The next consideration is the kind of men to elect. These wars classified under three heads-representative men, wise men and good men. The qualification of the first two classes were clearly enumerated, and a lengthy consideration given to the latter, several hints and guides being thrown out to enable people to detect a good man. In conclusion Mr. Macmillan departed from the general trend of his sermon, speaking of a higher and more sacred duty laid on eltizens, beside which all the legislation in the world appeared small and insignificant—that duty which was entrusted to man by God—a duty which was the uplifting of our fellow creatures, and accomplishing which was to grow in spiritual and grace
